(N.B.)—(1) This publication embodies Cases (Civil and Criminal) from the Reports marked above with asterisks

(2) In the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter, the Cases are known by their numbers and not by the pages where they are printed; (e.g.) 4 P.R. 1906 would mean Case No. 4, in the Punjab Record of 1906. The same explanation applies to the Punjab Law Reporter also. It has also to be remarked that the Punjab Record and the Punjab Law Reporter have been divided into two sections, Civil and Criminal.

(3) For Cases from Reports other than those published in India, the volumes and pages are printed exactly in the manner they are to be found in the original cases wherein they are referred to.

THE CURRENT INDEX OF INDIAN CASES, 1908.

FINAL PART.

SECTION II --(CIVIL CASES).

Abandonment.

(1) Absentee—Adverse possession of maliki and shamilat land—Right of defendant to claim compensation

The plaintiffs sued the defendant, a near agnatic relation, for recovery of land of which their father and they themselves were recorded as proprietors in the settlements of 1868 and 1892. In the settlement of 1868, the plaintiffs' fathers were recorded as minors, and the defendant was entered as in possession on their behalf. Pleas of adverse possession and abandonment were set up. The land comprised both maliki and shamilat lands.

Held (1) that there was no adverse possession under the circumstances of the case in the absence of any proof of an open assertion of hostile title or any overt act or conduct denying the title of the plaintiffs. On the contrary, the facts, that the plaintiffs' names were allowed to be entered in the settlements records, with the knowledge of the defendant and that the defendant in 1868 was entered as in possession on behalf of the plaintiffs' fathers who were recorded as minors, negative any such plea.

(2) That the plaintiffs did not lose their right by abandonment. Remaining out of possession for very many years and not evincing any concern in the land or receiving any of the profits do not per se suffice to prove abandonment, especially where (as here) the person who has all along been in possession is a very near agnatic relation and at the outset took possession on behalf of plaintiffs' fathers, then minors (a).

Abandonment (Continued)

(3) That, under the circumstances, when the defendant had, from 1868 to date of suit, been in possession of the land and enjoying its profits, he must be taken to have fully compensated himself thereby for any expense to which he may possibly have been put, and, therefore, he may not be entitled to claim any compensation in the case.

(4) Cases of abandonment and absentees should be decided upon their own facts. (b). Hakim v Hashim, 97 P. W. R. 1908.

(2) Common holding—Effect of possession of one co-sharer—When and whether long possession and enjoyment will constitute adverse possession—Effect of absentee of common holding leaving it in possession and enjoyment of co-sharer—Whether abandonment arises.

Where a piece of land is part of a common holding, and the owner goes away and becomes an absentee leaving the land in the possession of co-sharer relatives, he does not legally give up possession, because the possession of one co-sharer is the possession of all. A co-sharer cannot claim a title, by adverse possession, to such land, however long he may have possessed and enjoyed it, unless he can show, as against the absentee co-sharer, the most unequivocal assertion of, and exercise of, such adverse possession as against such co-sharer, or relinquishment of the land by him.

Abandonment—(Concluded).

Where an absentee of a common holding left the land, when he originally went away, in the possession of co-sharer relatives, successfully asserted his right to succeed to lands left by a relative in the village, promptly objected when an attempt was made by the co-sharer to get the absentee's name struck out of the revenue records, and it was noted in the settlement records that his share would be restored to him whenever he returned to the village, and, in a later settlement, the absentee was shown as owner of a larger share of the holding than in the previous settlements, held that he had not relinquished his holding and that he could resume his land, even when he returned after a prolonged absence, to his village.

Relinquishment must be judged of on the facts of each particular case and having regard, as one important factor, to the circumstance that the property has or has not been left in the hands of a co-sharer in the beginning.

Accounts

(1) Suit for—Principal and agent—Movable property—It includes money—Limitation—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 89, 116 and 139 Contract of service in writing and registered.

Art. 89 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act expressly applies to the case of a principal suing his agent for an account, whilst Art. 116 applies to a suit for "compensation for the breach of a contract in writing registered." To ascertain which article of the schedule applies it is necessary to see what is the relief which the plaintiff claims.

Accounts—(Continued).

The expression "movable property" in art. 89 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act includes money (a).

A suit, not merely for an account, but also to enforce in the plaintiff's favour the charge created to secure the moneys which might be found due from the agent to his principal on his accounts falls within Art. 132 of the Second Schedule to the Limitation Act, and the period of limitation is twelve years from the time when the money sued for becomes due. Hafezuddin Manual v. Lakshminarayan Rampratab, 10 Bom. L. R. 281 = 32 B. 35.

(3) Settlement of accounts, and execution of receipt for amount found due—Whether constitutes a bond—Cause of action—Rate of interest—Reg. I of 1910

Plaintiffs advanced moneys to the defendants at 15% interest. On a certain day the accounts were settled and a sum of money was found due to the plaintiffs for balance of principal and interest on that day, and the defendants made the following entry in the plaintiffs' account book, viz., "we shall repay the sum we borrow with interest at 15%," and this entry was followed by an entry of the amount then found due.

Accounts—(Concluded).

In a suit on the receipt, it was held that the receipt was a bond superseding the prior cause of action and creating a new cause of action for the amount mentioned therein from the date of such receipt. Sankara Aiyar v. Subramania Dikshadar, 23 T. L. R. 17.

To put the procedure provided by the above Act in motion, the title and lona fides of the applicant must be clear, and it must also be manifest that the party complained against had no lawful title to possession, and that, if the applicant were referred to a regular suit, he would be a serious sufferer. The mere fact, however, that the Court, before issuing the citation under S. 4, omitted to follow such procedure and to satisfy itself, whether the party in possession had no title, would not so operate as to prevent a rectification of such procedure and to bar the Court from arriving, on the evidence, at a conclusion that the person in possession ought to be left undisturbed. Rajji v. Act XVIII of 1850 (Protection of Judicial Officers).

(1) Cause of action—Claim for damages for improper search by a Judicial Officer as such—No cause of action against the Secretary of State for India—addition in substitution of Defendant—Act XVIII of 1850 — Act V of 1861, S. 13—Civ. Pro. Code of 1882, S. 32—Crim. Pro. Code, S. 165.

Held, that, where a Judicial Officer acting in his official capacity is protected by Act XVIII of 1850, in respects of acts done by him with jurisdiction or done under the lona fide belief that he has jurisdiction, the protection thus afforded to him equally extends to his master, the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Held, also, that, where a cause of action is shown to exist against the defendant originally impleaded, but, on the allegations made in the plaint, there appears also another person concerned in it, the Court should at once make that person, under S. 32 of the Civ. Pro. Code, a co-defendant without raising an issue on that point, and should not first rule out the claim against the original defendant, and then hold that the Court could not allow the impleading of the other person, on the ground that it would be a substitution and not an addition of a defendant.

I.—Imperial Acts.—(Continued).Act XVIII of 1850 (Protection of Judicial Officers).—(Concluded).

Held, further, that, where a Judicial Officer, instead of issuing a search warrant under S. 96 of the Cr. P. C., proceeds under S. 165, the mistake is immaterial and he cannot be said to have acted without jurisdiction. In cognizable cases, a Police Officer has the same power of search under S. 165, Crim. Pro. Code as a Judicial Officer has under S. 96 (a).

Quere.—Whether the Civ. Pro. Code allows a fresh defendant to be substituted for a sole existing defendant against whom it has been found that there is no cause of action. Whether the notice under S. 424, Civ. Pro. Code, is necessary in case of adding, under S. 32 of the same Code, a Public Officer as a co-defendant in the case brought against the Secretary of State for India in Council. Mrs Fox v. (1) Lunatic—Remuneration to a Committee—Court's jurisdiction to pass the order—Next of kin of lunatic not entitled to be heard on the application—Lunatic when sane can impeach the order.

The Court has a discretionary power to allow a Committee of a lunatic, appointed under Act XXXIV of 1858, remuneration but will only allow it under special circumstances. When some relation or friend of the lunatic can be found who is willing to act as Committee, the Court will not, as a rule, allow remuneration to such a person but when no such person can be found and an official of the Court has to be appointed, the Court will exercise its discretion and allow remuneration. But, in all cases, the Court has the jurisdiction.

On an application for remuneration by a Committee of a lunatic, the next of kin of the lunatic have no right to be heard in their own interests, as they have no vested interest in the estate. But a lunatic, if he becomes of sound mind, has the right to impeach any order which, he considers has been made without proper regard to his interest, and he can impeach the order for remuneration even after the Committee has passed his accounts. This right devolves on the lunatic's death upon his heirs Mulji Damodar v Bomanji Mancherji, 10 Bom. L. R. 772.

Petition for dissolution of a marriage. Petitioner alleged the adultery of respondent. The only evidence in proof of the adultery was to the effect that the wife (respondent) had left petitioner and had been seen on two occasions in company with two boys in a house which was not alleged to be a brothel. Held, this was not evidence sufficient to prove adultery. It did not constitute adultery with the two boys or either of them. So a decree for dissolution of marriage could not be granted.

S. 82 of the Code of Civ. Procedure, does not contemplate substituted service being granted except, after reasonable endeavours, to serve a summons personally.

A mere advertisement in newspapers of a petition for dissolution is not sufficient to bring the fact of the petition home to the respondents in the absence of proof that endeavours were made to serve the respondent personally. Shwe Tha v. Ma Saw Hla. 4 L. B. R. 195.

Where the husband committed adultery after last condonation of former adultery and cruelty, held, that the subsequent adultery revived the former cruelty, which had been condoned. Ma On v. In an appeal which turned upon the construction of the will, which purported to deal with residuary estate of the testator, who practically intended that the distribution should take place only after all the sons who might be born to him had attained their majority, and whose will ran as follows: "Should my son Subramanian who is the (chief person or) executor to this will and testament be willing to divide and give the aforesaid landed properties, ready money and all the other properties, when my grandsons may attain their age, he shall divide the same into five shares as I have had five sons, and give away the same to their respective sons, that is to say, my grandsons. He shall give away the share of such son of mine as may not beget a grandson (to me) to himself. Should he not be willing to effect a division, he may deliver up the properties to such of these persons, namely, his brothers, or his sons, or his brother's sons, as may be competent to cause matters to be conducted properly, as my eldest son Subramanian who is the (chief person or) executor to this will and testament had been conducting them; should the (chief person or) executor Subramanian be not willing to do so, he may, as he thinks proper, arrange that at least the Administrator-General should conduct matters for a fixed time in the same manner in which he himself shall have conducted matters and that the properties should thereafter be divided and given to the aforesaid grandsons or that the same should be delivered up to them intact without division," it was held that the effect of the disposition was that the bequest, if any, created by the exercise of the so-called power of appointment, might be delayed beyond the period specified in S. 101 of the Indian Succession Act which, when read with S. 102, made the whole disposition invalid. S. 2 of the Hindu Wills Act makes S. 101, Succession Act, applicable in terms, and the provision in S. 3, although it might have the effect of invalidating a disposition which is valid under S. 101 of the Succession Act, cannot have the effect of validating a disposition which is invalid under that section. It is clear, therefore, that the disposition is invalid under Ss. 101 and 102 of the Succession Act, and there is an intestacy with regard to the residuary estate and the property devolves upon the heirs-at-law. P. (2) Ss. 8, 9 and 12—Agreement by plaintiff to take oath or to have the suit dismissed—Failure to take oath—Procedure to be adopted by the Court.

By an agreement between the parties to a suit, the plaintiff agreed that he should take an oath, and that, on his failure to do so, the suit should be dismissed. Held, on the failure of the plaintiff to take the proposed oath, that the agreement could not be recorded as an adjustment of the suit, and the suit should be proceeded with (a). •

Per White, C. J.—S. 12 of the Oaths Act directs the Court to record, as part of the proceedings, the nature of the oath proposed, the fact that the party was asked to make the oath and refused, together with any reason assigned for the refusal. The section seems to contemplate that the Court shall give such weight, as it may think fit, to the fact that a party has offered to make an oath, and has afterwards refused to make it, whilst it negatives the view that the refusal to make the oath is, in itself, a ground for dismissing the suit or giving the plaintiff a decree, as the case may be.

Per Miller, J.—It may be doubted whether S. 12 of the Act was intended to apply to a case, in which the parties have arrived at an agreement that one of them shall take an oath, but, whether that be so or not, it is not right to compel a man against his will to take an oath, by which he is to allege the existence of particular facts. Majan v. (1) S. 25—House search—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), Ss. 94, 105 and 165—Judicial Officers Protection Act (XVIII of 1850), S. 1.

The defendant who did not, before causing the search of the plaintiff's house to be made, first record the grounds of his belief as provided for by S. 25 of the Arms Act, could not justify the search under the provisions of the said Act.

As there was no proceeding pending before him, the defendant was not a 'Court' within the meaning of S. 94 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and, therefore, the defendant could not direct a search to be made in his presence under the provisions of S. 105 of the Code.

The search having been for the purposes of discovering arms generally, Section 165 of the Code did not apply.

Conducting a search for arms is not an act done in the discharge of a judicial duty. Act XVIII of 1850 (Judicial Officers Protection Act) does not apply to such a case.

Even where a defendant's bona fides in conducting a search is established, it does not release him from the obligation the law casts upon him, as being in supreme control of the search party, of seeing that the search was conducted in a proper and reasonable manner. A pleader was charged with professional misconduct in connection with the alteration of the date in a certain petition, which was presented to a Sub-Magistrate. The case came before the joint Magistrate of that division for inquiry. The joint Magistrate, before the date of the inquiry, was transferred to another division. The District Magistrate made an order transferring the charge to the same joint Magistrate, on the ground that he had dealt with the matter in the first instance.

Held, that the order of the District Magistrate, transferring the charge to the joint Magistrate of a different division, was unauthorized, and that it should accordingly be set aside.

There is no provision of law which authorizes the issue of either a summons or a warrant against a pleader who fails to appear in answer to a charge preferred against him under S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners' Act.

Where a Magistrate issued a warrant against a pleader in such a case, and the pleader attached a written statement to the warrant in which he stated that the Magistrate, in issuing the warrant, had acted maliciously, vexatiously,

(7) S. 36—Tout, declaring a person to be—District Judge to take evidence himself—Power to direct Munsif to take it—Opportunity to show cause—Procedure when Munsif suspects a person to be a tout.

S. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act is of a final nature and its provisions must be strictly and precisely complied with.

It is only the judges and other officers specially mentioned in S. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act who can frame and publish a list of touts and they can only frame and publish such a list when it has been proved to their satisfaction by evidence taken and heard by themselves that the person whom they propose to include in the list habitually acts as a tout.

A District Judge has no power to delegate to the Munsif the special statutory powers conferred upon him by that section.

When a Munsif has reason to suspect that any person is acting as a tout, he should inform the District Judge of his suspicions, giving him the names of witnesses and leaving it to him to take and hear evidence. In the matter of Prasanna Kumar Das, Petitioner, 12 C.W.N. 843 (Note).

Courts in the judicial division. The parties affected applied to the High Court against the Judge's order under Section 15 of Statute 24 and 25 Vict., Cap. CIV. On this application being laid before a division Bench for disposal, it was held.—

Per KARAMAT HUSAIN, J., that the disciplinary powers of the High Court, under Section 15 of the Statute, being exercisable only by the full Court, a bench of two Judges had no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the application, neither had a single Judge jurisdiction to admit it.

Per AIKMAN, J., that the Court had an inherent power to delegate to one or more of its members the power to deal with applications such as the present, and rule 1 (xiii) of the Rules of Court of the 18th January 1898 effected such a delegation. But the powers of the Court under Section 15 of the Statute were limited, and in this instance no case for their exercise had been shown. Kedar Nath, In the matter of the petition of, A. W. N. Act V of 1881 (Probate and Administration).

(1) Ownership of property by married couples—Devolution—Letters of administration whether and when can be granted to any person other than survivor of married couple—Proper person to administer estate.

Under the Burmese Buddhist Law respecting the ownership of property by married couples, and the devolution of such property on the death of one of them, the widow or widower, as a general rule, is the proper person to administer the estate of the deceased. Though an absolute rule must not be laid down that in no circumstances should letters of administration be granted to any other person, as, for instance, a step-daughter of the widower, it would require very special reasons to justify such a grant.

Where a widower is in possession of the estate as the natural and proper representative of the deceased widow, any person who claims a share of the estate can sue him for it, and the fact, that letters of administration have not been issued, is no obstacle to such a suit. Ne Win v. In the case of one of a Burmese Buddhist married couple dying, it can rarely, if ever, be necessary that letters of administration to the deceased's estate should be granted after the period of limitation for the recovery of debt owing to or by the deceased has expired.

An younger daughter of a deceased Burman Buddhist is not, during the life-time of her mother, a proper person to be granted letters of administration to the estate of her deceased father, especially where the application was made 18 years after the death of the father.

If a child of Burmese Buddhist parent has a right to prevent his or her surviving parent from wasting the one-half of the property in which the parent has only a life-interest, the proper method of enforcing such right is by a regular suit. The plaintiff sued to recover on certain bills drawn on the defendant and endorsed over to the plaintiff, the defendant having failed to pay them. In one of the suits, the acceptance by the defendant was signed upon the original bill but in others it was merely on copies of the bills. The lower appellate court threw out the first suit on the grounds the plaintiff was suing as agent for the London firm, Francis Timos & Co., without disclosing his principals, so that the suits were defective in form and, secondly, that the suits were not competent as the bills had never been dishonoured and protested. The remaining suits were dismissed upon the ground that the acceptance was written on copies of the bills.

Held, (1) that the bills were indorsed over to the plaintiff by the Banks in whose favour they were drawn, so that he was a holder deriving title from the holder in due course; and as such he was competent to sue under S. 53 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

(2) That the bills were made payable in Bombay, and, consequently, under Ss. 134 & 32 of the Act, the acceptor became liable at the Maturity of the bills. Presentment is not necessary to charge the acceptor. The acceptor was the principal debtor and his liability was independent of presentment.

(3) That, whereas S. 7 of the Act lays down that the acceptance shall be signed either upon the bill or upon one of its parts, the defendant's assent was signed only upon copies of bills, and thus a material requirement of the law was omitted with the result that there was no valid acceptance. Ardeshir Porabsha Moos v. With regard to the Nattukottai Chetties who carry on most extensive business by means of agents in different parts of India, it is well known that they trade under names made up of a series of initials. In firm transactions, the initials, which are the name of the firm, are prefixed to the name of the signatory, and this is the ordinary way in which documents are signed on behalf of these firms, and may even be said to be the ordinary way in which these firms sign.

In considering whether a signature in a bill is that of the principal or agent by whose hand it is written, the construction most favourable to the validity of the instrument must be adopted.

On 28th April, 1862, one C executed a trust deed, constituting the Collector of Karachi, the Chaplain and the officer commanding the troops, trustees for administering certain property mentioned in the deed, and giving the rents and profits thereof in charity to the poor. On the 29th May, 1907, the gentlemen holding the said offices at the time, filed an application under the Trust Act for permission to sell the property and invest the sale proceeds thereof in some recognized securities; the interest accruing therefrom being appropriated for the purpose specified in the trust.

Held that the application could not be made, as Section 1 of the Act excluded public charitable trusts from the scope of the Act. Held also, that, as the officers mentioned in the trust deed were not corporations sole, and as only legally recognized persons could be appointed trustees, the effect of appointing them as trustees was to be restricted to those only who were holding the offices at the time the deed came into operation. The present incumbents of those offices could at best be considered as constructive trustees, to which case S. 34 was inapplicable. According to S. 169, a person filing an appeal against an order made in the matter of the winding up of a company, must file his appeal with such promptitude as to render service of notice upon the respondent at least possible within the three weeks allowed by the section. (Per Johnstone, J.).

The notice required by the section need not be notice of hearing of appeal. The appellant should add in his memorandum of appeal a separate petition asking, in view of the section aforesaid, that a special notice be at once issued to the respondent intimating that an appeal has been filed.

Although S. 169 allows an extension of time, that extension should not ordinarily be given in such a way as to extend the three weeks' limitation for filing the appeal. Extension for service of notice under the section should only be given where delay has been caused, not by appellant's laches, but by the conduct of the respondent, raising up an equity in favour of the appellant, or by accident, such as mistakes in the office of the appellate Court, &c. During a preliminary inquiry, held under the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, for the purpose of investigating into a case of collision, where the defendant Company was represented by their solicitor, the officers of the defendant's vessel made certain statements on oath, admitting responsibility for the accident. These depositions were tendered by the plaintiff company in evidence against the defendants, who objected to the reception in evidence of these depositions, on the ground that they do not affect the Company, the employers of the persons who so deposed;

Held that the depositions were admissible in evidence on the grounds, inter alia, that the failure of the defendant's solicitor, who appeared at the inquiry and cross-examined, to challenge the accuracy of the statements, made by the officers of the defendant's vessel, afforded a strong presumption that the imputation made against the Company was correct (a) that the attendance of the officers, who made the statements in question, could not be procured without an amount of delay or expense that, under the circumstances, appeared to be unreasonable, and that their statements, under S. 32 (3), Evidence Act,

Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled so to recover, and that Ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act were inapplicable, as the Collector had not determined, under S 14 of the Income Tax Act of 1886, that the defendants were chargeable under Part IV, or assessed them at any amount, as it was from the plaintiffs themselves that payment was demanded and enforced by the income tax authorities, and as it cannot be said to have been made by the plaintiffs for the defendants, merely because the income tax authorities ought to have demanded and exacted payment from the defendants instead of from the plaintiffs. Raghavan, Minor, by guardian Sankara Sastriar v. Where, therefore, the Local Government purporting to act under cl. (8), Sch. II of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, by a notification in the Official Gazette, invested in general terms the Munsiffs of a certain place, with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect to suits for the recovery of rent of homestead lands up to a certain value, and empowered such Munsiffs to try such suits under the Small Cause Court Procedure, such Munsiffs, if invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes, are competent to entertain and try such suits as Court of Small Causes. Akhaya Kumar Saha v Hira Lal Dosadh, 7 C. The Legislature intended that objections indicated in S. 29 (2), (3) and (4) should not be allowed to be raised in defence to an action for the infringement of an exclusive privilege acquired under Part I of the Act, but must be raised under the provisions of Ss. 30 and 31 of the Act, by applying to a High Court for a rule to show cause why the Court should not declare that the exclusive privilege so acquired had not been so acquired, by reason of the objections mentioned in the two latter sections. Kedarnath Mondal v. Under S. 3 of Act XXIV of 1839 and Rule X, Cl. 4, of the Rules framed pursuant to that Act, the Agent to the Governor at Vizagapatam is the Judge of the Principal Civil Court of Original Jurisdiction in the Agency of Vizagapatam. In S. 2 (12) of the General Clauses Act, 1868, which was in force when the Succession Certificate Act was passed, "District Judge" is defined as the Judge of the Principal Civil Court of Original Jurisdiction. The Succession Certificate Act, in S. 3, defines the District Court as a Court presided over by a District Judge. - (1) S. 6—Rule of the Karachi Ports Rules—Legality of the rule—Power of port authorities to order vessel to leave port summarily—Malicious prosecution, suit for damages caused by—Want of probable and reasonable cause—Malicious intention.

The public have, at common Law, a right of navigation in all tidal navigable rivers. It follows that the public have a right to keep their vessels, for a reasonable time, for the purposes of trade and commerce, in the Port of Karachi, and such right can only be restricted by express provisions of the Legislature.

There are express provisions in Cl. (a) of S. 6 of the Ports Act X of 1889, for imposing conditions on entering and leaving the Port, and in Cl. (b), for regulating the berths and anchorages to be occupied while in port, but, there are no express provisions in either of these clauses for curtailing summarily the time during which vessels may be kept in the port, nor are there any such provisions in any other section of the Act.

Rule 5, framed under S. 6 of the Act, only indicates that a vessel must either accept the berth assigned to it or go. It does not mean that a vessel which has accepted a berth can summarily be ordered to leave the Port.

An order of the Port officers, requiring the master of a vessel to sail within a certain time, which amounts to an order to leave the Port, is an order ultra vires of the rule under which it is purported to be made, or the rule itself is ultra vires of the section under which it was made.

A prosecution instituted by the Port authorities for disobedience of such an order is one instituted without reasonable and probable cause.

But the absence of reasonable and probable cause is not alone sufficient to justify the inference that the Port authorities were actuated by malice.

In order to constitute malicious prosecution, it is not only necessary that the prosecution must be filed without reasonable and probable cause, but, also, there must be a malicious intention super-added to it. The Knight Steamship Company, Ltd. v. The Karachi Port Trust, 1 S. L. R. 201.

Per Karamat Husain, J.—S. 647 of the Code of Civil Procedure deals with procedure and procedure alone and does not touch the substantive law of arbitration. Matters to be considered by the Court in appointing a guardian under S. 17 of the Guardian and Wards Act, 1890, viz., the legal right to be appointed a guardian, the preference of the minors and the existing or previous relations, are very minor considerations as compared with the main question what order would be for the welfare of the minor.

In making orders appointing guardians for the persons of minors, the most paramount consideration for the Judge ought to be—What order under the circumstances of the case would be best for securing the welfare and happiness of the minors? With whom will they be happy? Who is most likely to contribute to their well being and look after their health and comfort? Who is likely to bring up and educate the minors in the manner in which they would have been brought up by the parents if they had been alive? In fact, the main question for the Court to consider in the case of the unfortunate minors who have lost their natural guardian is, whom, amongst the relations, or for the matter of that, friends of the minors, can you select who will supply as nearly as possible the place of their lost parent or parents? The interest, well-being and happiness Claim for damages for non-delivery of goods against a Railway Company is a claim under Act IX of 1890, (a).

A condition in a railway receipt that all claims against the railway company for loss or damage to goods must be made to the clerk in charge of the station to which they have been booked before delivery is taken, and that a written statement of the description and contents of the article missed or of the damage received, must be sent forthwith to the Traffic Superintendent of the District in which the forwarding or receiving station is situated, and that, otherwise, the railway company will be freed from responsibility, is, although a rule or a bye-law which is duly sanctioned by the Governor-General in Council, and published in the Gazette, ultra vires, as such a condition, on a comparison of Ss. 54, Cl. 1 and 77, is inconsistent with the Act. Under the Act itself the only condition precedent to the successful claiming of compensation for loss of goods made over to a railway for carriage, is a written submission of claim within six months of delivery to the railway. The condition imposed by the bye law, viz., that a person claiming compensation for loss of goods made over to the railway cannot get any compensation unless he has forthwith, i.e., immediately upon the loss, sent a detailed list of the contents, etc., to the District Traffic Superintendent, amounts to a repeal of S. 77 and the substitution of an inconsistent provision in its place. Under S. 54 (1) the conditions that may be imposed by a bye-law are conditions with respect to the "receiving" forwarding or delivering" of articles. It cannot be said that a bye-law prescribing what the consignor or consignee is to do after the goods are lost comes within these words (b). Azizul Rahman v. - (3) Compensation—Modes of ascertaining compensation—Surveyor's opinion—Practice as to surveyor's evidence—Value of frontage land bears proportion to its depth—Relative values of each—Hypothetical scheme, Value of, in determining compensation—Value of the whole, how derived from value of part—Collector's award when disturbed.

In cases where the valuation cannot be based on what the property is producing at the time of the notice nor are there any recent sales of the land to guide the Court, the market value must be determined by sale of similar land in the neighbourhood.

The owner in claiming compensation can seek to prove either what the plot would fetch if sold in one block or what the present value is if he plotted out the property and sold it in lots.

In arriving at the valuation, the Court can, in addition to the evidence of sales, be guided by the opinions of surveyors, though it is necessary to distinguish opinion from argument.

The practice which has grown up in references under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, of surveyors making long reports and furnishing copies to the opposite side before hand is open to grave objection. A surveyor's opinion by itself is good evidence. What value the Court will put on it depends entirely on the effect of the cross-examination, but there is no reason why the witness should himself provide the materials for his cross-examination. It will save the time of the Court if a surveyor prepares a concise description of the property to be valued; but he need not add anything more except his opinion of the value, and if he does give his reasons they must be based on facts and not on hypothesis.

When determining the value of frontage land the depth is a question of supreme importance. What is a suitable depth must primarily depend on the character of the buildings in the locality.

The value of a building frontage must depend on the higher rents that can be obtained for the shops or rooms facing the street and as the proportion of these rents to the lower rents of the back rooms decreases so does the value of the frontage land decrease.

It cannot be too clearly laid down that under ordinary circumstances the value of an income producing property depends on its income irrespective of its costs, and that capital when once invested in land and buildings cannot be apportioned between them so as to give the market value of each.

It cannot be taken as a hard and fast rule that back land must be worth half the frontage land.

Evidence of hypothetical building schemes, is irrelevant to the question of finding the market value of land. It is difficult to suppress the belief that seems to exist almost universally amongst surveyors in Bombay that market value can be ascertained in this way. The belief that an hypothetical scheme can be a guide to market values ascertained by other means is equally fallacious.

In valuing the land as a whole it would not be correct to add up the retail values of the parts as derived from the instances of sales of small plots without making some deduction both on general principles and because the wastage must be greater than in those instances from which the retail values have been deduced.

The Court would be slow to differ from the Collector's offer on a matter of a few rupees except for very strong reasons such as an error or a question of principle. Government of Bombay v. Karim Tar Mahomed, 10 Bom. L. R. 660.

(3-a) Compensation for land acquired—Principles for fixing the compensation—Potential value, how far a determining factor in fixing valuation.

Land in the neighbourhood of a town always has a potential value. It will not compare with land within the limits of the town but if placed in the market purchasers will always be found at a higher rate than one based on its existing use.

Future utility is a thing that people have an eye to in buying land, and the market price of the land is affected by it. Such future utility must be estimated by prudent business calculations and not by mere speculation and impractical imagination (a).

The method of fixing a price for the improved value of the land according to the expected user and making deductions to ascertain the present value, should only be adopted when the expected user is immediately available and is so obvious that its present value can be ascertained, as for instance, in the case of a piece of vacant land in the midst of a building area.

The other method is to assess to the best of one's ability the value of the potentialities attaching to the land in question in the light of the evidence adduced regarding sales in the neighbourhood and expert opinion as to the value of the land as it stands.

When considering the potentialities it must be remembered that that involves an entirely different user to the present. No doubt different kinds of land must be differently valued, and the valuation must also vary according to advantage or disadvantage as regards communications, but such questions must be dealt with in relation to future utility. The whole area possesses the same potentialities, only in a varying degree, and the claimant is entitled to have included in the market price of his land such speculative advance therein as has already taken place in consequence of the improved prospects of the locality (b).

If it is shown that a person has paid a certain price for a block of neighbouring land similarly situated and possessing similar advantages, with a view to some profitable disposition thereof, there is no reason why another block of land the subject of acquisition should not be similarly valued. The probability of a person purchasing the land for a similar purpose is an element for consideration, if the probability is not so remote that it ought to be held to be purely speculative, so that other things being equal, of two blocks of land, the block under acquisition should be taken to be of equal market value with the other block (c).

Where there are several adjoining blocks of land with a potential value for a certain purpose, each block should be valued as having such a potential value, though the enhancement may not be the same in each case. The principle is the same whether the blocks are many or few.

There are two guides to assessing the value of potentialities—(1) the opinion of experts, (2) evidence of the value the purchasing public has put upon them within a reasonable period prior to the date of acquisition.

In cases under the Land Acquisition Act the tendency is for the Courts to rely far more on evidence of sales than on expert opinion.

A claimant is entitled to the benefit of a good bargain he has been able to make before the land was notified provided he can prove its present value with a reasonable degree of accuracy, but this cannot be done by merely suggesting that within ten or twenty years the land will increase in value. That is a question of chance. Dorabji Cursetji Shroff, In re, 10 Bom. L. R. 675.

(4) Acquisition of land Compensation—Principles governing the ascertainment—Hypothetical method of development—Method of ascertaining the price by values realized by sales of neighbouring lands—Assessment on the principle of small building plots—Allowance for road way.

The Court, before interfering with the award by the Tribunal of appeal, must be clearly satisfied that it is not substantially erroneous.

The method of hypothetical development cannot be objected to on the ground that it involves or pre-supposes the intermediation of a third person—a speculator or exploiter, that is to say, a person who purchases the land wholesale from the claimant in order afterwards to sell it retail for building purposes. The value of the land to the owner is what must be regarded, and that is the price which it will fetch if disposed of on the most profitable terms. The owner is not to be deprived of the most advantageous way of selling his land by reason of the fact that it is subject to immediate acquisition.

If the sale of the land in building sites is impossible except through the speculator, then no doubt allowance will have to be made for the profits, costs and other charges of the speculator. But the claimant is not to be debited with these expenses unless the introduction of the speculator is a commercial necessity. And there is no necessary reason why the claimants should be driven to have recourse to the speculator for a business which he can do for himself.

Where the compensation is assessed on the general principle of a sale of the land split up into parcels suitable for building, it appears not only unnecessary but inappropriate to make a special deduction on account of the small area marked off for the road-way.

Where the method of hypothetical development is employed in conjunction with the method of ascertaining the present value of the land by reference to the prices realized by the sale of neighbouring lands, and the consequence is that these two methods lead to very much the same result, it follows not only that that result is entitled to so much the greater degree of confidence, but also that the method of hypothetical development itself is corroborated.

In the method of ascertaining the present value of land by reference to the prices realized by the sale of neighbouring lands, it is plain that no evidence of former sales can be obtained which shall be precisely parallel in all its circumstances to the sale of the particular land in question. Differences small or great exist in various conditions, and what precise allowance shall be made for these differences is not a matter which can be reduced to any

Although land may possess certain potentialities, it does not follow that those potentialities have any present value.

(6) Valuation of land—Hypothetical method—Method of fixing valuation

The hypothetical method of valuation when carefully analysed shows that it is a mere delusion to consider that one arrives at the market value of a large area of land by means of an hypothetical building scheme. The principal ingredient in such a scheme is the gross rent expected to be obtainable from the buildings it is imagined will be erected on the land, and it is imagined that the value of the land can be arrived at by making certain deductions from the gross rent.

The main question in dealing with the valuation of land is whether it can in general be put to some profitable use, such as is adapted to the locality in which the land is situated. It is wrong to attempt to go further into the future and estimate the exact use to which the land may be put and the profit to be derived therefrom. Such calculations must be purely hypothetical and cannot possibly be based on ascertained facts.

There are only two ways in which a large area of land under acquisition can be valued (1) By determining its value as a whole as it existed at the date of the notification, (2) by ascertaining its then value on the basis of its being laid out for sale in building plots. The latter, however, is open to the objection that it may be too artificial, but there is no doubt that it is a well established method of valuation.

The owner is entitled to rely on the most advantageous way of realizing the value of his lands, but (1) his calculations must be based on the market value and conditions existing at the date of the notification, (2) the scheme must be capable of being carried out immediately, (3) it must be adapted to the locality.

The valuation must proceed as follows. The amount of building land available for sale after laying out the land must first be ascertained, and then the amount it should realize from that should be deducted the costs of laying out the grounds and the balance should be written back for half the period allowed for developing and disposing of the property. This will give the theoretical present value of the property to the owner.

The principle of valuation which requires the fewest ingredients is likely to cause the least difference of opinion and to produce the best results. There are six questions to be determined

- (a) the building area,
- (b) the cost of development,
- (c) the value of the building area when laid out for sale,
- (d) the time required for development and disposal,
- (e) the present value of the sale proceeds,
- (f) the deduction to be made for the advantage to the owner of getting cash payment and so being saved the trouble and risk of development.

Any attempt to value land by fixing the proportion the general rent should bear to the rack rent must necessarily fail in Bombay. The use of capital in building and the results to be obtained therefrom vary so enormously according to the land built upon and the capacities and opportunities of individuals, that they cannot be standardized. Dhanjibhoy Bomanji, In re, 10 Bom. Where a declaration is made, under the provisions of Ss. 6 and 7 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, and an officer, for instance, the Deputy Commissioner, is directed to take order for the acquisition of the said land, it is competent to the officer, appointed in the Government notification to take order for the acquisition of the property, to direct one of his subordinate officers to make enquiry and to report to him, as this is not a judicial proceeding, and such a procedure would not be illegal. It is possible that the duly authorized officer may, in such cases, adopt his subordinate's report as the award to be made under S. 11. But, in every such case, it is essential that the officer, who has to make the award under his hand, should, by unequivocal words signify that this report was accepted by him as his award, and that his full signature should be appended to this declaration, it is not enough for him to append merely his initials to his endorsement of approval. An award, bearing only his initials, does not conform to the provision of S. 11 and is, therefore, no award at all.

Where a notification, issued under Ss. 6 and 7 of the Act, authorized the Deputy Commissioner of Lahore to take order for the acquisition of the property the person authorized to act as the Collector for the purposes of S. 7 of the Act is the Deputy Commissioner of Lahore for the time being, and that officer, and that officer alone, is competent to make an award under his hand for the purposes of S. 11 of the Act. The provisions of this section require that a certain degree of formality shall attend the making of an award, and an award, which is under the hand of a person other than the person or official authorized to take action under S. 7, cannot be said to be under the hand of the Collector, and this too though the person purporting to make the award states that he is acting for, or on behalf of, the Deputy Commissioner.

Held, also, that an award under the Act is not "made" until it is announced or communicated to the persons interested, as to hold that it is "made," as soon as it is signed by the Collector would, in many cases, result in grave hardship. Macdonald v. The Hypothetical building scheme consists in an attempt to value a parcel of land by means of figures based upon the calculated financial result of a notional erection of buildings on the land, and its notional development in the most profitable manner. The land to be assessed is imagined as covered with as many houses or shops of as profitable a character as can be reconciled with existing and presumed future circumstances of demand; then the nett annual returns from these buildings are capitalized and from this figure the calculated cost of construction is deducted; the balance is said to be the prospective value of the land, and from this figure the present value is inferred by deducting various sums on account of loss of interest on capital and so forth.

The scheme depends entirely on the validity of three propositions (a) that the present market value of land can be ascertained by deducting the cost of construction from the capitalized nett annual rental, (b) that the prospective market value of land which is now vacant can be ascertained by deducting the estimated costs of the buildings which, it is supposed, can be erected on the land from the capitalized nett annual rent, which it is estimated such buildings will produce, and (3) that the present market value of the land can be ascertained by making certain deductions from the prospective market value. The first proposition is not true and the remaining two necessarily share the same character. For, the balance remaining after deducting cost of construction of buildings in esse from the capitalized value of actual rents received must be regarded as including builder's profits, which will depend on the capital; it is therefore an unknown quantity and has no necessary connection with the "market value of the land" which is the figure to be ascertained under S. 23 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894.

The hypothetical building scheme, considered as evidence, is bad as being too remote, speculative and conjectural.

The "market value of the land" in S. 23 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, means simply the price which, at the given time and place, land would fetch on sale according to the then rates of the market, and this value depends on general pre-existing considerations apart from the individual projects of a particular purchaser.

The opinion of an expert witness is admissible in evidence not only when it rests on the personal observation and inquiry of the witness himself or on facts within his knowledge, but also when it is founded on the case as proved by other witnesses at the trial, and under S. 51 of the Evidence Act, when the opinion is admissible the grounds upon which it is based are also admissible. But it is settled law that an expert may not be asked purely speculative hypothetical questions having no foundation in the evidence, in other words, before the expert witness is entitled to give evidence on the hypothesis, a sufficient foundation for it must be laid by due evidence aliunde of the facts assumed.

The other method adopted in estimating the value of land to be acquired introduces a speculative purchaser who is supposed to base his offer for the land as a whole on a series of intricate calculations. The land is plotted out into building sites; the amounts these will realize are placed to credit, deductions of every conceivable character are placed to debit and the attenuated balance is considered as the market value of the land. This method also is fallacious. It rests on the assumption that the land to be valued must be valued as a whole and sold as a whole to a single speculative purchaser who, as against the claimant vendor, is entitled to deduct all costs, charges and expenses to which he is put in developing the land. But there is no necessity for assuming the intervention of this costly speculator and no warrant for the consequent serious reductions in the value of the ownership. It is clear that this method, while appearing to concede to the owner the doctrine of the most profitable user, in fact deprives him of every advantage which he may claim under that doctrine. Its main object appears to be to depreciate the land under acquisition, and for this reason alone it would be opposed to the general principles by which the Court is governed in these cases.

There is no difference between "the value to the owner" which forms the basis of compensation payable under the Land Clauses Act in England and the "market value" of the land under S. 23 of the Land Acquisition Act in India.

To show the market value of the land the claimant can rely on the most advantageous way he can dispose of the land under acquisition and show if he so chose what he could realize by retail sales after making the necessary deductions as appearing from the evidence in the case.

In ascertaining the "market value" of land under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, too much importance must not be attached to evidence of offers. An offer does not come within the category of sales and purchases. If an offer for the whole or a portion of the land under acquisition is proved, it amounts merely to an expression of opinion on the part of the offeror. But this can only be proved by the evidence of the offeror himself and is then relevant. The evidence of offers made by irresponsible brokers on behalf of undisclosed principals, or perhaps for their own purposes without any principal behind them, is useless, even supposing it is relevant, which is doubtful. The evidence that the owner refused an offer so made through a broker is only evidence that in his opinion his land was worth more than the figure of value named or that the offer was for some other reason of a nature which he was unwilling to accept. Evidence of such offers by brokers for neighbouring land is still less effective. If the offeror himself gives evidence, it is evidence that in his opinion such neighbouring land was of a certain value and such evidence would only be relevant if he had formed an opinion by comparison of the land under acquisition.

In valuing ground by the capitalization of a ground rent, in no case should more than twenty years' purchase be allowed; and in the case of an unsecured ground rent more than 16½

Under the Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), S. 23, Sub-S 1, in determining the amount of compensation to be awarded for the land, the Court shall take into consideration first, the market value of the land, to which may be added various other sums for damage and expenses under headings secondly to sixthly in that sub-section. Under Sub-S 2, fifteen per centum for compulsory acquisition are to be added only to the market value of the land, and not to that part of the compensation which may be payable under the other heads. When there are no claims for compensation under these heads, the compensation payable is the market value of the land.

There is no provision in the Land Acquisition Act for the acquisition of anything less than the permanent interest in the land, and 'land' in the Act must mean land irrespective of any interests which have been created in it.

The words "the compensation which should be allowed for the land" in S. 11 of the Act cannot be paraphrased into compensation for those interests in the land which are not vested in Government.

The market-value of land, by which under S. 23 (1) of the Land Acquisition Act the Court is to be guided in fixing the compensation, has nothing to do with the value of the tenants' interest.

Land in Bombay held in perpetuity on payment of a fixed rent to Government is property in the nature of free-hold, and passes from hand to hand without the Government demand influencing the price paid. In such cases the market-value of the free-hold subject to the Government demand can be ascertained from the price paid, and that is the amount of compensation to be paid by Government. If the market value has to be ascertained from the income of the land, the Government demand, whether it be called pension tax, quit and ground rent or Toka, provided it is permanent, must be treated as an outgoing before the net income is capitalized. The Government demand is a tax on the land, and not an interest in the land.

When the compensation payable for the land is fixed, the Collector has to apportion it amongst the persons interested, and he has to satisfy himself that the claimant or claimants can produce a prima facie title to receive the compensation, and in case of dispute between claimants, he can refer them to the Court under S. 30 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894.

The Collector's jurisdiction is limited to making an offer of the compensation payable for the land. If there are several claimants, he can apportion the compensation amongst them, but the offer has to be made to the claimants as a body, there is not a separate offer to each claimant of the amount apportioned to him. The term claimant includes a body of claimants in whom are vested all the lesser interests which make up the permanent interest in the land to be acquired.

The Collector has no jurisdiction to try questions of title between Government and the claimant (a).

If the Collector proceeds with the inquiry he is directed to make under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, that amounts to a confession of title in the claimant or claimants, and having arrived at the compensation payable for the land under S. 11 of the Act, he ought, if he makes an offer at all, to offer that to the claimant; he has no right whatever to retain any of it on behalf of Government. In re, Esufali Salebhai, 10 Bom. Where a Land Acquisition Collector, having awarded a certain sum as compensation for land acquired, paid it to, amongst others, a Hindu widow, and almost six months after the award, her daughter asked for a reference to the Civil Court, and a reference having been made, the Judge ordered the lady to repay the amount withdrawn by her and the same to be dealt with according to the provisions of S. 32 of the Land Acquisition Act;

Held that, until money was deposited in Court by the Collector, the Court could not proceed to deal with it under S. 32, that the Judge has no power to direct a refund of money already paid by the Collector; that the order was not one under S. 32, Land Acquisition Act, as the Judge was not in a position to make such an order and so no appeal lay from it and the High Court could properly interfere, under S. 622, Civ. Pro. Code. Gobindo Rani Dassi v. Brinda Rani Dassi, 12 C. W. N. 1039.

(1) Ss. 2, 4 and 6—Combination of letters, designs and numerals as forming a "trade description"—Defendant alleged to have infringed it—Exclusive right of plaintiffs by user and reputation—Imitation, whether likely to mislead ordinary purchasers.

The plaintiffs, who were importers and shippers of "Grey shirtings" from Manchester, had stamped on these goods a "facing," which consisted of letters, designs and numerals in a particular order, and claimed the whole of this combination as their "trade mark" and charged the defendant, another importer of similar goods, with the infringement of it by stamping his merchandise with a facing so closely resembling theirs in the character and order of his marks as to mislead the public into believing that in purchasing his shirtings they were purchasing the plaintiffs'.

Held (Benson and Moore, JJ., concurring) that the defendant had made and used a facing, which was, in many respects, a colourable imitation of the facing of the plaintiffs, to which they had, by user and reputation, an exclusive right, and that the imitation was likely to mislead ignorant and unwary purchasers into believing that the defendant's goods were those of the plaintiffs.

Per Moore, J.—The principle is that no man may canvass for custom by falsely holding out his goods or business, whether by misleading description or by colourable imitation of known marks, packages, and so forth, as being the goods or business of another. Its application is not excluded by showing that the style or words appropriated by the defendant are in themselves not false as he uses them, or that the plaintiff, if he succeeds, will have a virtual monopoly in an exclusive designation which is not capable of registration as a trade mark. The question is, whether the defendant's action naturally tends to cause an ordinary dealer or purchaser (not necessarily the first purchaser, for the effect on the public at large is to be considered) to think he is dealing with the plaintiff or buying the plaintiff's goods.

Held per Davies, J., (dissentiente) that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction if they established (1) their exclusive user of the above mentioned marking and (2) that the defendant has imitated it, so that the imitation is, in the words of S. 4 of the Merchandise Marks Act, "reasonably calculated to lead persons to believe" that his goods are their goods, that, on the first point, the plaintiffs' right of exclusive user was limited to the first four items of their marking, that is to say, to the name of their firm, their coat of arms, the fac simile initials and the scimitars; and that, on the second point, the defendant had not imitated any of those marks, and further that what he had copied he was at liberty to copy and no one was likely to be deceived thereby. T. Noorodeen Sahib v. Charles Sowden, 4 M. L. T. 366 (F. B.)

An order passed on an application, under S. 19, Act IX of 1899, for stay of proceedings or for refusing to stay proceedings, is not a decree within the terms of S. 2, C. P. C., 1882. So the Chief Court has no power to have the order revised, under S. 70 (1) (b), Punjab Courts Act, 1884. (a).

(2) Ss. 5 and 10—Leave to revoke submission to arbitration—Motion to be in Court—Practice—Staying a case by arbitrators to Court for opinion—Questions as to admissibility of evidence should be decided in their very inception.

The proper procedure to be followed in moving for leave to revoke a submission to arbitration under S. 5 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, should be by motion in Court.

Where there are more agreements than one between the parties to refer their differences to arbitration, and the evidence recorded by the arbitrators in one of them is by consent to be treated as evidence in all the submissions, but there is no order consolidating the reference, and there is no consent anywhere, that the different references should be treated as one, it is not competent to any party to seek to revoke the submission to arbitration in all the different cases, by one application alone.

In England, the Court can compel an arbitrator to state a case. The Courts in India have no such power. The Indian Arbitration Act (S. 10) leaves it to the discretion of the arbitrators to state a special case or not as they choose; and the Court has no power to enforce its rulings or directions upon the arbitrators if they do not choose to follow the rulings or obey the directions.

When a party to a submission to arbitration feels aggrieved by the arbitrators deciding improperly or erroneously to admit evidence which they should have rejected, his proper course is to apply to the Court for leave to revoke the submission. On such application the Court will accord or refuse such leave according to the circumstances of each particular case that comes before it. The power of the Court is discretionary and ought to be cautiously and sparingly exercised, but such power should be exercised by the Court in favour of the applicant, if it appears to the Court that the main object of all submissions to arbitration which is to obtain "speedy end of the strife" is not likely to be attained and the applicant is likely to be subjected to "multiplied expenses" and "interminable delays" by the conduct of the arbitrators. Leave to revoke should be accorded to the applicant in all cases where he can establish that there will be failure of justice if the reference is allowed to proceed" (a).

The arbitrators ought to form a clear and definite opinion as to what questions are referred to their arbitrament, and decide what is within the scope of the reference and what is outside it. If this is once definitely settled there would be no difficulty in their deciding the question of admissibility of any evidence that may be tendered by one or other of the parties. *In re, Indian Arbitration Act. Under the Arbitration Act no order of the Court is necessary for the filing of an award, and an order dismissing an application to set aside the award is neither a suit nor an appeal, and there is nothing in the Arbitration Act to show that it is to be treated as a suit.

The order, therefore, is not a decree within the meaning of the Civ. Pro. Code, and appealable as such.

The provisions of the Arbitration Act clearly indicate that an award, upon a submission, which contain no provision to the contrary, is final, unless the Court in which it has been filed remits it or sets it aside. Khatoun Bee v. Abdool Rahman, 14 Bur. L. R. 129—4 L. B. R. 249.

A purchaser under S. 13 of the Revenue Sale Law (Act XI of 1859) does not acquire merely the right, title and interest of the defaulting proprietor, but he takes the share itself which is exposed for sale, subject to the limitations prescribed in the section.

The words "shall not acquire any rights" in S. 54 of the Act refer to the acquisition of rights in respect of interest, such as encumbrances, or the like, which are referred to in the previous phrase of that section (a).

If a person acquires the interest of the original owner of the estate before the default is made, his interest cannot be said to be an encumbrance, and passes by the sale to the purchaser, because what is sold is in essence his share in the estate.

The words, "purchaser shall not acquire any rights which were not possessed by the previous owner or owners" in S. 54 of the Act, do not mean that the purchaser at the revenue sale shall only acquire the rights possessed by the previous owner or owners at the date of the sale, but that the purchaser shall not acquire any rights not possessed by the previous owner or owners at sometime or another, and shall acquire no more than what was the property of the previous owner or owners.

The purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue of a share of an estate under S. 13 does not take the property subject to encumbrances created after the date of the default and before the date of the revenue sale (b).

A purchaser of the interest of the proprietor, after default and before revenue sale, is quite as much bound by the revenue sale as the proprietor himself, because, in substance, he occupies the position of the proprietor.

Although the purchaser does not take subject to any encumbrances created after the default, he takes subject to such encumbrances only as have been created before default and are in actual existence because undischarged, or though discharged on the date of the revenue sale, may, upon equitable principles, be allowed to be set up (c).

2—Bengal Acts—(Continued)Act XI of 1859 (Revenue Sale Law)—

The language and scope of S. 53 are materially different from those of S. 54 of the Act, under the one section, the purchaser takes subject to all encumbrances existing at the time of the sale, while under the other, no encumbrance created after default is binding on the purchaser.

Although an auction purchaser does not acquire a full title till the confirmation of the sale, yet upon general principles, he may have equitable rights, arising out of his purchase before the date of confirmation of the sale (d).

Under S. 27 of the Revenue Sale Law the title automatically vests in the purchaser at the revenue sale by reason of the sale and payment of the purchase-money. It becomes complete as soon as the sale becomes final and conclusive, even though possession is not obtained. The certificate of sale does not create title, it is merely evidence of title (a).

The purchaser of a share of an estate, under S. 54 of the Revenue Sale Law, takes the share subject to encumbrances, which were in existence on the date to which the title relates back, (that is, the day after that fixed for the last day of payment), and were in force on the date of sale.

The power of the proprietor to deal with his property is not lost by reason of the default in payment of revenue, if no sale was held by the Collector on the basis of such default, a mortgage created by the owner after default is not inoperative (b).

A contract, entered into by a person who is subsequently declared to be the heir of a deceased person, whose estate had been, at the time of the contract, taken charge of under the Encumbered Estates Act, is void, as such person had no competency to contract.

Even though at the time of the execution of the contract he had not been declared to be the heir, yet, as soon as he was found to be the heir, he became heir from the time of the devolution of the estate, which was admittedly prior to the execution of the contract, and such contract became void for want of capacity to contract.

On the release of the estate from the operation of the Acts, the validity of the contract could not be revived as it was absolutely void.

While the suit was pending, the estate was taken charge of for the second time, and the suit, therefore, became barred.

It does not matter, if the particular liability has not been mentioned in the application under the Act, as 'debts and liabilities,' in S. 3, mean 'all debts and liabilities of the holder of the estate taken charge of, other than debts or liabilities incurred to Government' (a) Raja Satrugnan Deo Dhabal v. Act VII of 1876 (Land Registration)—(Contd.).

Suit, maintainability of—Declaration of right to possession.

Where plaintiff's application for the registration of his name as a co-trustee, under the Land Registration Act, was refused by the Revenue authorities.

Held—That a Civil Court is not competent to direct the action of the Revenue authorities under the Land Registration Act, and a suit brought by the plaintiff with the object of obtaining an order from the Court which would bring about a re-consideration of the order passed by the Revenue authorities so as to obtain the registration of the plaintiff's name as a co-trustee is not maintainable.

Held, further, on the construction of a compromise decree on the basis of which the suit was brought, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a declaration of his right to the possession of the trust property jointly with the defendant—this order, however, not affecting the right of the plaintiff or any one else to take action in the case of any malversation by the defendant. Chhattapat Singh Dugar v Maharaj Bahadur Singh, 12 C. Before the Collector can order the name of an applicant to be registered as Proprietor of an estate or any interest therein under the provisions of the Land Registration Act, he must satisfy himself, that the possession of the estate exists in the applicant as alleged, or that a succession or transfer has taken place as alleged, and that the applicant has acquired possession in accordance with such succession or transfer, but not otherwise. The determination of the question of possession alone is sufficient when the applicant claims to have assumed charge as joint proprietor on behalf of his co-sharers or as manager. When, however, the applicant claims to be proprietor by succession or transfer, the Collector has to satisfy himself on two points, namely, that the succession or transfer has taken place and that the applicant is in possession accordingly. If the succession or transfer is proved but possession is found against the applicant, his name cannot be registered, or conversely, if possession alone is proved, but the succession or transfer is not established, i. e., if the possession proved is not attributable to the title set up, the application for registration must be refused.

The first duty of a Collector, in a case of dispute, is to determine whether any person is in possession of the disputed interest. If possession is found to be with any person, the Collector has no jurisdiction summarily to oust him. He can determine the question of the right to possession or refer it to the Civil Court, only, when, upon investigation, no one is proved to be in possession.

Possession in S. 55, Land Registration Act, does not mean lawful possession, but actual possession which includes possession by receipt of rent, the possession of the tenant being in a sense the possession of the landlord.

When, a Mahomedan widow has obtained possession of the undistributed property of her deceased husband lawfully, and, without force or fraud, she is prima facie entitled, as against the other heirs of her husband, to retain possession until her dower-debt or any portion of it which is due and unpaid is paid.

The jurisdiction which the Civil Court acquires upon a reference to it under S. 55 of the Land Registration Act is that of a Civil and not of a Revenue Court, and its decision is subject to revision by the High Court.

The ordinary rule is that where an aggrieved party has other remedy available, e.g., by regular suit, the High Court is unwilling to interfere in revision, but, even if there be such remedy, the High Court may interfere in exceptional cases. Musst. - (4) Ss. 59 & 63—Power of High Court to revise order made by a civil Court under S. 59, Land Registration Act—Jurisdiction.

The High Court has, under S. 622 of the Civ. Pro. Code, jurisdiction to revise the order of a Civil Court under S. 59 of Act VII of 1876. S. 62 of that Act makes an order of the Civil Court final and not subject to appeal or order for review. It does not prevent the High Court from revising the order either under S. 622, C. P. C., or under the Charter Act (a).

The competency of a Court consists in territorial as well as pecuniary jurisdiction. Hence where a Court has only territorial jurisdiction, but no pecuniary jurisdiction, it is not a competent Court within the meaning of S. 59 of the Act.

As soon as the certificate is sent to the Collector and the Collector registers the names of the persons, who are successful in the Civil Court, the function of the Civil Court ceases. The High Court cannot therefore, further interfere in the matter. Rameshwar Singh v. Raghunath Singh, 35 C. 573.

A suit by a transferee from a purchaser of a permanent tenure at a rent sale to recover possession of the tenure from the landlord who denied the title of the plaintiff on the ground that on the death of the previous tenant, the land reverted to himself, was not a possessory suit to which the provisions of S. 37 of the Chotanagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act could apply.

Art. 138 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act refers more to questions between the auction-purchaser and the judgment debtor, and the present case fell under Art. 142 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act.

The special limitation provided in S. 12 of the Chotanagpur Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act did not apply to this case.

The period during which a suit was prosecuted bona fide in a Court without jurisdiction was properly excluded in computing the period of limitation although the plaintiff in this plaint did not expressly ask for an extension of time on that ground (a). Raghu Nath Bhagat v.

Where a purchaser, under the provisions of S. 123 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act of certain tenures of which a record-of-rights had been prepared, sued to have a declaration that certain entries in the record with regard to a mundari khuntkati tenancy were incorrect, held, that the provisions of S. 164 of the Act (I of 1879) as amended by Act V of 1905 applied, that the object of these provisions was to make the entries irrefutable and the Legislature intended to preclude suits of this nature.

The word "particulars" in Sec. 161 have a very wide application and cover entries declaring that the tenants have to pay certain rents named in the record-of-rights to a person other than the plaintiff.

There is no limitation as to the nature of the suit to which the provisions of S. 103 B, B. T. Act, apply. The presumption as to the correctness of the entries in the record-of-rights will operate even in a suit to declare the entries incorrect. Tokhi Sahu v. Tosi Munda, 13 C. W. N. 111.

It cannot be affirmed as a general proposition that the liability to pay income-tax carries with it as a necessary consequence exemption from Road and Public Works cesses (a)

A mela is annually held for 20 days, from the 5th to the 25th Falgun, on lands which are included in the jotes or holdings of agricultural tenants (but on which no crops are standing at the time the fair is held), under an arrangement between the zemindar and the holders of the mela, to which the tenants are not parties. The Collector assessed Road and Public Works cess, not only on the rents paid to the zemindar by the rayats, but also on the profits realized by certain jaradars under the mela holders from the stall-holders and vendors of live-stock, etc., at the mela.

Held, that these profits are not rent payable by either cultivating rayats or by other persons in the actual use or occupation of land, within the definition of 'annual value' in S. 4 of the Cess Act, and cannot be assessed with road-cess.

Per Rampini, C. J.—The profits of a mela may come within the definition of rent paid for the actual use and occupation of land by persons other than cultivators, or of immovable property as defined in S. 4 of the Cess Act. But whether in any particular case they do so or not will depend on the terms of the lease in that case.

Per Brett and Woodroffe, JJ.—A mela or fair does not come within the definition of immovable property in S. 4 of the Cess Act.

The holders of the mela in this case or the jaradars under them are licensees and not tenure-holders within the Act.

Per Rampini, C. J.—The definition of tenure-holder in the Act is very wide and may include persons in the enjoyment of the profits of a mela. But whether in any particular case such persons are tenure-holders or not, will depend on the terms of the lease.

Per Brett and Woodroffe, JJ. (Rampini, J. and Mookerjee, J. contra)—The definition of "annual value" contemplates that the rent shall be payable by persons in occupation during the year, not by persons occupying the land for 20 days during each year.

Per Mookerjee, J.—The stall-holders and other persons attending the mela for the purpose of selling articles of merchandise are licensees and not tenants.

Per Rampini, C. J.—The sums payable by stall-keepers may come within the definition of rent. The Secretary of State for India in

The Plaintiff Municipality having sued the Defendant for the tax as assessed, Certain co-sharers in a permanent tenure by a deed, dated 2nd December, 1893, which was registered in Book I, under S. 51 of the Registration Act, relinquished all their right, title and interest and claim in the tenure in favour of the remaining co-sharer who, it was stipulated, was to remain in possession and was to be entitled to sell the tenure. He was also to pay certain debts mentioned in the deed for which the other co-sharers were to be under no liability. The deed was stamped with a five rupee stamp as a release. No landlord's fee was paid as required by S. 12 of the Bengal Tenancy Act,

Held—That the deed was a transfer within the meaning of S. 12 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and the transfer was complete as soon as the document was registered. The non-payment of landlord's fee did not render the transfer invalid owing to the operation of S. 1 of Act I of 1903, B. C.

(16) S. 87 not exhaustive—Abandonment, a question of intention—Mortgage of non-transferable holding—Mortgagee auction-purchaser—Mortgagor, interest of—Ejectment of purchaser, by landlord—Re-entry—Execution sale—Voluntary abandonment

The first sub-section of S. 87 of the Act shows that abandonment is the effect of the act of the tenant in vacating the holding, without making arrangement for payment of his rent as it falls due, and for cultivating the land.

Whether there is abandonment or not in any individual case is a question of intention to be determined upon the facts of the particular case.

In order to effect a legal abandonment and to allow a valid re-entry by the landlord, service of notice under sub-S. 2 of S. 87 of the Act is not necessary. The only effect of the service of notice is to make it obligatory upon the tenant to have a speedy determination of the question whether there has been an abandonment or not.

S. 87 of the Act is not exhaustive, and a landlord is not a wrong-doer, merely because he re-enters upon the holding, before he has followed the procedure laid down in that section.

When the holding is a non-transferable one, and the ryot executes a mortgage, the mortgage, is inoperative as against the landlord, but as between mortgagor and mortgagee, the mortgage is operative (a).

Where the mortgagee of a non-transferable occupancy holding purchases the holding in execution of his mortgage-decree and takes possession, the possession of the tenant mortgagor completely ceases, and the holding passes into the occupation of the mortgagee. As against the landlord, the mortgagee auction purchaser is a trespasser. The landlord is entitled to sue him and to obtain a decree for ejectment, in such a suit the tenant who is not in occupation is not a necessary part.

Under the circumstances of the case, the abandonment of his holding by the tenant, although due to the execution-sale, is a voluntary one. Ram Pershad Koeri v. Jawahi Roy, 7 C. L. J. 72 = 12 C.W. N. 899.

A grant of the right to fell timber of a particular class and specified size during a defined period of time, though extremely restricted in its scope, which prohibited the lessee from doing any damage to the banjar mahal, i. e., to the forest, and imposed upon the lessee a condition to notify to the Court any occurrence which might happen and though it obviously granted no interest in the soil itself, was obviously grant of the most valuable of the forest rights; it cannot be regarded as a sale of timber (a).

Act VIII of 1885 (Bengal Tenancy)—(Contd.).

A grant of a fishery right or right of a pasturage or the like may be made independently of an interest in land (b).

A grant of the trees as distinct from the land in which the grantor reserves every forest right except the one which is granted is nevertheless the grant of a forest right within the meaning of S. 193 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and a suit for the recovery of money payable in respect of such forest rights is governed by the three years' rule of limitation laid down in Sch. III, Art 2, cl (b) of the Act

The provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act applicable to suits for the recovery of arrears of rent are, having regard to the phraseology of S. 193 of the Act, designedly made applicable to suits for the recovery of sums that are not rent; and money payable in respect of forest rights is not rent within the meaning of S. 3 (5) of the Act.

The question of limitation, raised in the written statement but abandoned in the Court of first instance, is a clear question of law, and it could be raised in the Court of appeal.

Under S. 184, sub-S 1 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it is obligatory upon the Court to dismiss the suit on the ground of limitation, although limitation has not been pleaded.

Refusal by a counsel or pleader to urge a question of law is a mere admission of law which is not binding upon the party, and the party may raise the question in appeal although not raised in the lower Court, specially where the question of limitation obviously arises upon the admitted facts of the case (d).

Although standing timber is movable property within the meaning of S. 3 of the Indian Registration Act, yet under S. 3, cl. 25 and S. 4 of the General Clauses Act of 1897, standing timber is immovable property within the meaning of the Civ. Pro. Code (e).

Growing trees may be regarded as part of the soil and consequently immovable property (f).

But were under a contract the grantee has no right to the soil, takes no interest in the land and obtains a right to the trees with a view to fell them immediately or within a reasonable time without any stipulation for the beneficial use of the soil but with a license to enter and take the trees away, the transfer

A suit, under the Mamlatdar's Courts Act, 1876, was commenced on the 24th February, 1906. On the 29th October, 1906, the new Mamlatdar's Courts Act, 1906 came into operation which repealed the former Act. On the 26th January, 1907, the Mamlatdar dismissed the suit. The plaintiff presented, on the 12th March, 1907, a petition for revision to the Collector. It was under S. 23 of the new Act. The Collector held on the 6th April, 1907, that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the application.

Held, (1) that the repealing Act, could not give the right of revision in respect of proceedings commenced under the Act of 1876.

(2) that, on the words of the General Clauses Act, 1904, (S. 7), it would be wrong to hold that the Collector had jurisdiction, because, so to hold would be to affect a legal proceeding in respect of a right which had accrued under the old Act.

S. 11 of the Act applies only to suits of the description mentioned in S. 3, cl. (w), i.e., to suits for money due, on account, for the price of goods sold, and on contractual engagements. Clause (y), however, of the same section refers specifically to suits for the sale of the mortgaged property. So, where the money to be recovered is charged on immovable property and the claim is to enforce that charge, the suit is excluded from the scope of the clause (w). (a)

Held that a suit against an agriculturist to enforce a mortgage claim, in the Court with- in whose jurisdiction the mortgaged property was situated, fell under the specific description in cl. (y), and that the more general description in cl. (w) was not applicable, and that S. 11 of the Act was therefore no bar to the jurisdiction of the Court. Nur Mahomed Lalan v. The provisions of S. 13 of the Dekhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879, are imperative. The amount due in a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage in which the provisions of S. 12 of the Act have been complied with is the amount which is found to be due upon taking accounts in the manner provided by S. 13. The section says that the Court, in the course of any proceedings under a decree for sale, may, direct that any amount payable by the mortgagor under that decree shall be payable in such instalments, on such dates, and on such terms, as to the payment of interest as it thinks fit. But the interest is as much payable under the decree as the principal, and the section does not say that the Court may direct that any amount payable under the decree shall not be payable; it merely empowers the Court

Act XX of 1881 (Sind Encumbered Estates)—(Concluded.)

Under S. 10, Bombay Act XX of 1881, the Manager of Encumbered Estates has the power of the Collector for the purpose of recovering rents and profits due in respect of the property under his management. The Collector has also the power under S. 176, Bombay Act V of 1879, to recover a deficit on re-sale or on arrears of land revenue by issue of a warrant.

The deficit on a re-sale of a lease, being merely damages for breach of contract to take the lease, the Manager is not authorized to issue a warrant of attachment. (a)

Where money is recovered by the defendant which, in justice and equity, belongs to the plaintiff under circumstances which render the receipt of it, a receipt by the defendant to the use of the plaintiff, the latter is entitled to recover (b). Bachomal v. Act III of 1888 (City of Bombay Municipality).

(1) City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bom. Act III of 1888), S. 354—Municipal Commissioner—Power to remove objectionable structures—Exercise of the power—"Appear," interpretation of—Danger, kind of, contemplated by the section—Discretion vested in the Commissioner—Court's interference with the discretion—Commissioner can act through agent—Right of the party to be heard in answer to his notice—Injunction to restrain Commissioner from pulling down a building.

The primary object of section 354 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, 1888, is the safety of the public, to secure which the Commissioner must of necessity be given very wide powers. But it does not follow that those powers must be exercised arbitrarily and without due consideration of the provisions of the section and the right of individuals. In the first place, it must appear to the Commissioner that a structure is in a ruinous condition or likely to fall or in any way dangerous to any person occupying, resorting to or passing by such structure. He may next by written notice require the owner or occupier to pull down, secure or repair it.

The word "appear" in the section does not involve "appears to the eye." It is sufficient if it appears to the Commissioner on the representations of a competent officer whose duty it is to make such representations. But the Commissioner's action when "it appears" is judicial, so that he must exercise his discretion in determining what action should be taken. He does not satisfy this test, where he merely signs the notice which is sent to him by the Executive Engineer because it has previously been signed by that officer. It is only by aid of a fiction that it can be said that a notice signed in this way by the Commissioner complies with the section, which should be considered as a notice to show cause. It is not invalid; at the same time it cannot deprive the person served with it of his right to object unless the legislature has clearly deprived him of such a right.

Danger means peril, risk, hazard, exposure to injury from pain or other evil, and can vary in degree according as the apprehended injury is expected to occur at once or at some future time. S. 351 applying to all degrees of danger and prescribing various precautionary measures to be taken to prevent injury resulting therefrom, it follows that first the degree of danger must be ascertained and then the appropriate precautionary measure prescribed.

Discretion must not be arbitrary. The very term itself standing and unsupported by circumstances imports the exercise of judgment wisdom and skill as contra-distinguished from unthinking folly, heady violence or rash injustice (a).

The legislature has vested in the Commissioner a discretion in the matter (S. 354) and the Court would not interfere in his exercise of it merely because the object in view might be carried out in some other way, nor would it lightly impute to him bad faith. But the Court is, in the first instance, entitled to inquire whether the discretion has been exercised. The discretion has to be exercised, first in coming to a conclusion as to the state of the structure, and then in fixing upon the remedy.

3.—Bombay Acts—(Concluded.)Act III of 1888 (City of Bombay Municipality) —(Concluded).

It is obviously impossible for the Commissioner to inspect all structures that are suspected of being dangerous. Therefore, it is a sufficient exercise of his discretion, in deciding what structures are dangerous, if he appoints a competent person to represent to him what structures are dangerous. But if a notice is issued based on the representation of such a person, it is open to the owner to prove that that person has not exercised his discretion or has been actuated by improper motives in prescribing the steps to be taken.

If the owner can prove to the satisfaction of the Court that his house was not in such a dangerous condition as to warrant an order to pull down, that would be prima facie evidence that the person appointed by the Commissioner had not exercised his discretion.

When the Commissioner has per force to act on the advice of his expert advisers, it must be proved that they decided judicially what advice they should offer. If they did not, the provisions of the section have not been complied with. In other words, the Commissioner can exercise his discretion through an agent; but it follows that, if the agent has not exercised his discretion, neither has the Commissioner. The Commissioner has the opportunity to remedy this when the owner complains.

Under certain circumstances, the safety of the public must be considered in priority to the right of private individuals as in the case of imminent danger; but where there is no suggestion of imminent danger the person affected is entitled to be heard as a matter of common justice. Lalbhai Tricamlal v. The Municipal Commissioner for the City of Bombay, 10 Bom.L.R. 821.

(1) S. 51—Municipal Corporation acting bona fide—Imperative duty and permitted act—Karachi Municipality—Dust-bins—Nuisance—Courts, how far can interfere with acts of a Corporation.

Where the plaintiff sued for an injunction prohibiting the Municipality from placing a common dust-bin on the corner of a garden immediately in front of his house, held, that as

S. 54 of Bombay Act III of 1901 imposed an imperative duty on the Municipality to make reasonable provision for cleaning public streets, as the streets could not be kept clean, under the circumstances obtaining in Karachi, without keeping dust-bins in some specified spaces: and as it was not shown that the Municipality was either negligent or not acting with bona fides in placing one at the particular site, the plaintiff was not entitled to the injunction sought for, although the dust-bin in this instance was a source of nuisance to him.

Held, also, that to ascertain whether or not a nuisance is such as to give one a right of action, inquiry should be made into the authority under which the Municipality purported to act, the law on which point may be thus summarised

(1) Apart from the terms of the statute which constitutes it, the corporation has no more authority to infringe a private right than the ordinary citizen.

(2) The corporation can do an act which constitutes a nuisance, if, and only if the power to do the act is expressly set forth in the statute or is necessarily deducible therefrom.

(3) Where the corporation has merely permissive and not imperative authority to do a thing, the inference is that the discretion should be so exercised as not to prejudice the common law rights of others.

(4) If the corporation acts within its express or implied authority without negligence and with bona fides, no action lies against it at the suit of a person who sustains a private injury by its exercise.

(5) The Courts put a wider and more liberal construction on the powers vested for the benefit of the public as a body such as a Municipal Corporation. Hanaraj Hirji v. The Karachi Municipality, 1 Sind L R. 228.

(2) S. 160—Municipality—Acquisition of land—Proposal to acquire—Acceptance of proposal—Inference as to price—Completed contract—The price can be fixed by the Court in cases of difference.

The Poona City Municipality having determined to acquire a portion of the plaintiff's house for the purpose of widening a street, the plaintiff expressed his willingness to allow the Municipality to acquire the same; but they could not agree as to the price. The question was referred to arbitration as required by S. 160 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901; but the proceedings before the arbitrators were not successful. The plaintiff then applied to the District Judge, under S. 160 (3) of the Act, requesting him to ascertain and determine the compensation payable. The District Judge made his award. The Municipality appealed from the award contending that they no longer required the plaintiff's premises and that there never was a completed contract with the plaintiff.

Held, (1) that there was a contract of sale at a *fa*n valuation, where the Court not only can provide, but under a special statute is compelled to provide, the means of ascertaining the price, and of such a contract specific performance would be awardable.

(2) that, therefore, there was a contract between the parties from which the Municipality could not recede

As a general rule where the agreement is that the price of the estate shall be fixed by arbitrators and they do not fix it, there is no contract, as the price is of the essence of the contract of sale, and the Court cannot make a contract where there is none. But the applicability or otherwise of this doctrine depends upon whether the fixing of the price is of the essence of the contract of sale (a)

Where there is a definite and a completed contract to give and take the estate upon terms to be settled thereafter and the valuation cannot be made modo et forma, the Court will substitute itself for the arbitrators (b). The Poona City Municipality v. Ramachandra G. Karve, 10 Bom L. R. 617.

(1) S. 19 (b)—Landlord and tenant—Determination of the tenancy—Trespasser getting into possession during the tenancy—Possessory suit against trespasser at the determination of the tenancy.

The plaintiff let his lands to defendants Nos. 1 and 2 on the 5th June, 1905. In November, 1905, the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 were dispossessed by a trespasser, defendant No. 3. The tenancy ended on the 6th June, 1906. On the 29th October, 1906, the plaintiff filed a suit in a Mamlatdar's Court to recover possession of the lands from defendants Nos. 1-3. It was contended by defendant No. 3 that the Mamlatdar had no jurisdiction to try the suit so far as it affected her.

Held, that a trespasser like defendant No. 3 could not defeat the right of the landlord to recover immediate possession of the land on the determination of defendant No. 1 and 2's tenancy by resorting to the summary remedy given by the Mamlatdar's Courts Act, 1906;

(2) that the plaintiff's remedy having been to bring his suit under S. 19 cl. (b) of the Act, on the expiry of the tenancy, the fact that a trespasser got into possession during the continuance of the tenancy, but more than six months before its determination, is not sufficient to oust the Mamlatdar's jurisdiction.

The Mamlatdar's Act is a remedial measure and must be liberally construed so as to advance the remedy. Deu Dada Gavil v. Sitaram Chinnaji, 9 Bom. L. R. 1179—32 B. 46.

The object of the definition of "Malik makbuz" in the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act of 1881 is merely to distinguish it from all the other kinds of revenue-paying proprietors who may be found in the village. But this does not imply that the same person may not simultaneously possess two distinct estates under different forms of ownership, even in the same mahal in cases where the doctrine of merger does not apply.

The estates of malik makbuz and Malguzar in the same mahal are distinct from, and independent of, one another. And the possession of both by the same person does not produce a merger of these estates.

It is competent for a person in the Central Provinces to be at once a Malguzar and a Malik-Makbuz in the same mahal; and transfers of either one of these estates has no effect upon the ownership of, and legal rights and liabilities appertaining to, the other estate. Mt. Agricultural tenancies in Central Provinces are created by contract and statute, and their devolution is governed by the same statute. The Tenancy Act does not recognize such things as succession by right of survivorship, the vesting of a son's interest by birth, and so on. In the case of Hindus, the Courts, in dealing with agricultural holdings, will follow the Hindu Law of inheritance so far as it may be consistent with the principles of the Tenancy Act and no further; and the peculiar feature in the former, under which a son gets by birth a vested interest in the property of his father which controls the father's power over such property, has no place in the latter. Ghanya v Ukund Rao, 4 N.L.R. 9.

The second clause of S. 92 of the Tenancy Act is enabling or explanatory, and is not exhaustive. A Tahsildar's decision, that a person is a tenant, is not res judicata so as to bar the trial of the issue, whether he is tenant or not, in a civil Court. The fact that a Tahsildar has, under S. 92, reinstated a person as a tenant does not bar a civil Court from deciding whether the landlord has the right to evict that person as a tenant, and still does it bar a civil Court from deciding whether the person is a tenant or not when the landlord brings a suit to eject him as a trespasser. In other words the fact that a Tahsildar has put a person into possession under S. 92, does not make that person a tenant if he is not a tenant. M. T. Durbasa v. Khalaksing, 4 N. L. R. 63.

A receiver appointed by Court is a public officer holding lands in attachment under the order of a Civil Court, within the meaning of S. 85 of the Act. He is, by virtue of the section, to have all the powers of a land-holder and be subject to the same restrictions. The effect of the section is to give a statutory right of suit against him, and leave of the Court is not necessary. Kuppusawmy Iyer V. Suppan Chetty, 17 M.L.J. 483 = 30 M. 505 = 3 M.L.T. 7.

A certain person claimed exemption under S. 60 from payment of profession tax, to the Bellary Municipality on the ground that, during the half-year, he paid "profession tax" to the Bellary Cantonment. Held, that the Bellary Cantonment, not having been declared a municipality under Cl. (14) of S. 3, was not a municipality constituted under the Act, and therefore the payment made by the defendant to the Bellary Cantonment, not having been made to any other municipality, does not, under S. 60, exempt the defendant from his liability to pay to the Bellary Municipality. The Bellary Municipal Council v. Act V of 1884 (Local Boards).

- (1) Duty of maintaining roads—Necessary consequences of such duty—Construction of water-ways necessary to enable road to be safely carried across drainage of country—Extent of authority conferred on Local Boards to construct roads.

The duty cast upon Local Boards of maintaining a public road necessarily involves the duty of maintaining the necessary culverts and tunnels under it. An authority to construct a "road" carries with it the authority to construct the water-ways necessary to enable the road to be carried safely across the drainage of the country, and the same rule applies in the case of a road which was vested ready made in the District Board by the Local Boards Act, 1884.

The Madras Local Boards Act, 1884, enjoins the maintenance of the road and does not confine the Board to its maintenance as originally designed and executed, and, in the absence of any such express restriction, the injunction to maintain imposes the duty to provide such new works as may be found necessary from time to time to provide, in order that the road may be properly maintained (a).

Held, that, in the absence of negligence on the part of a District Board in the carrying out of the work of the repair of a road and of proof that the Board could have constructed a culvert at any part of the road, other than that in dispute, which, while effective to protect the road, would have done no injury to the plaintiffs' lands, they were not entitled to an injunction against the District Board restraining it from increasing the size of the culverts passing under the road. Alyasawmi Aiyar v. (3) Ss. 162 and 165—Agreement for collection of fees in a market—Construction—Penalty—S. 74 of the Contract Act—Limitation Act, Arts. 68 and 115—Felony act—Civil suit without criminal prosecution.

Even if it be an established principle of the law of England, that the policy of the law will not allow a person injured by a felonious act to seek civil redress, if he has failed in his duty of bringing or endeavouring to bring the felon to justice, as to which there seems to be some doubt, the principle does not apply to a case, where the defendant is not criminally liable for the offences committed by his agent, and the suit is not brought against the party, who is alleged to have been guilty of an offence under S. 165 of the Local Boards Act (V of 1884) (a).

An agreement by the defendant with the President of the Taluq Board in respect of the collection of fees in a market, provided, among others, "If I, my agent, or servant, were to act contrary to the above regulations, I shall be liable to pay a fine not exceeding Rs. 50 imposed by the President of Taluq Board, or I am not entitled to object, if my gutta is put up for auction again (myself being)", subject to the loss that may be sustained by the Taluq Board,"

Held, (1) that the agreement in question is not an instrument of the same nature as a bail bond or recognizance, within the meaning of the exception to S. 74 of the Contract Act. It is a bond given for the performance of a public duty or act in which the public are interested

(b) But there is no section in the Local Boards Act, which authorizes or requires the giving of such bond. (2) Under S. 74 of the Contract Act, it is open to the Court to award the party complaining of the breach reasonable compensation not exceeding the amount named in the bond, without reference to any actual loss sustained by the Board. (3) The extortion of unauthorized tolls, from the class of persons, who make use of the market is a serious offence, and the amount of penalty specified in the bond is recoverable as compensation. (4) A suit for the recovery of the penalty is governed by Art. 68 or Art. 115 of the Limitation Act and not by Art. 6 of the Act. (5) The provision authorizing the plaintiff to put the defendant's gutta up to auction does not preclude the plaintiff from recovering upon his contract. (6) The penal clauses of the Local Boards Act, S. 162 (c) and (d) do not preclude the plaintiff from recovering under his contract with the defendant. Taluq Board, Kundapur v. (1) S. 7—Act of 1900, S. 19—Contract before 1886—Compensation, rate of—Whether governed by the terms of the contract.

S. 7 of the Act of 1887 which is re-produced as S. 19 of the Act of 1900 precludes parties from contracting themselves out of the Act by any contract made after January 1st, 1886, but it does not affect the validity of contracts made prior to January 1st, 1886, whether the improvements are made before or after the coming into operation of the Act of 1887.

Where any officer does anything in pursuance of any provision of the Act, and he is authorised to do it by the same Act, then no suit will lie against him under S. 27 of the Act, even if any person suffers any damage, and an action might otherwise be maintainable.

But where the officer in his capacity of public officer purports to do the act complained of in pursuance of any provision of the Act, with reasonable grounds for believing that he is authorized by the Act to do it, or does it irregularly or improperly so as to cause injury to any person, then a suit may lie against him, but it must be brought within the time limited by S. 87. But where the act complained of which is alleged to give rise to the cause of action is not done nor is purposed to be done under any section of the Act, S. 87 does not apply.

So, the section does not bar a suit on a contract brought against the Secretary of State for recovering certain sums deducted with reference to the contract and certain sums spent in performing the contract, if such sums can otherwise be recovered. Muthia Chettiar v. - (2) S. 10—Court of Wards—Reg. V of 1801, S. 30—Regulation Collector—Decree Collector—Construction of the Acts and Rules thereunder—Limitation Act, Ss 1 and 14—Claim in time, but referred after being barred—Right of suit

When the Decree Collector calls on the Regulation Collector to furnish particulars of a claim, then in time, the latter should not keep the claim pending and dismiss it as being time barred.

The construction of the Court of Wards Act and of the Rules framed thereunder is not free from difficulty.

If a claim be disallowed by the Regulation Collector and the Court of Wards, (there being no Decree Collector) the claimant's only remedy is to file a suit in the Civil Court as contemplated in S. 10 of the Act. S. 4 of the Limitation Act will be a bar, unless such suit were instituted within the time allowed by law.

The Regulation Collector is not "a Court" within the meaning of S. 14 of the Limitation Act, "which from defect of jurisdiction is unable to entertain" the claimant's suit. Provision should be made by the Legislature for excluding the period during which the claim was pending before the Regulation Collector.

But where there is a Regulation Collector and a Decree Collector in existence before the making of the claim, the only question of limitation to be decided by the Civil Court is whether the claim was not barred at the time when it was made. If it was not irrecoverable when made and if the sum was then otherwise legally due the Decree Collector must admit the claim and discharge it to the extent of assets in his hands.

The Decree Collector, when in doubt, is bound to refer the matter to the decision of a Civil Court. Such reference by the Decree Collector being made under a special provision of law, S. 1 of the Limitation Act does not apply plaintiff. The defendant, who was a tenant of 15 plots in the mahal, took a mortgage with possession of R's share. This was a suit for recovery of the plaintiff's share of the rent.

Upon the defence that by an arrangement between the plaintiff and R the latter had received the rent of the plots in question and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to sue for it, held, that there being nothing to show that this was intended to be a permanent arrangement or that the arrangement was intended to continue even if R parted with his share, it did not evidence a "special contract" within the meaning of S. 126 of the Oudh Rent Act.

A suit for a declaration that a certain orchard on a portion of the village shamlat is planted by the plaintiff alone at his own expense, and that he is in sole possession thereof, without making any claim regarding the land occupied by the orchard, or the shamlat as a whole, is not a land suit within the meaning of S. 3 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884 and hence no appeal lies as of right.

On the partition of a joint holding, the question whether the garden having been planted on a part of the common land by the plaintiff by his own individual labour, and at his own cost, should, or should not according to the rule laid down in the village administration paper, be allotted to the plaintiff at partition, is a question relating to the mode of making the partition within the purview of cl. A suit for a declaration that a certain mortgage-deed, in which the consideration was stated at Rs. 300, but the land mortgaged by it is worth only Rs. 60-3-6 according to the thirty times jama rule, shall not affect the reversionary rights of the plaintiff, is in effect a suit for a declaration that the plaintiff is reversioner to land, worth Rs. 60-3-6 according to the said rule, regardless of any incumbrances created by the widow (a). The value of the suit is the value of the land calculated at 30 times the jumma, and not the amount of the incumbrances.

By the decree in such a suit, the plaintiff will get the land on the death of the widow, without reference to the mortgage or its precise amount. Held, that acquiescence is not a question of fact, but of law, and, consequently, it is a good ground for a revision under S. 70 (b) of Act XVIII of 1884, as amended by Act XXV of 1899 (a).

Held, also, that there is nothing whatever in the following facts to indicate that D and other reversioners of R ever acquiesced in the gift of his holding in favour of S and others.

"R transferred the whole of his property to S and others by a deed of gift dated 2nd January, 1886. Mutation was finally sanctioned on the 27th March, 1887. With the exception of 17 kanals which R held in his own name, the rest of the property included in the gift, about 158 ghumaos, was possessed by a prior mortgagee G. Despite the gift, R never parted with the possession of these 17 kanals, and the donees neither before, nor after, the donor's death, ever made an attempt to redeem the prior mortgage. But they took actual possession of the 17 kanals after R's death which took place in 1891. Within one year, however, of R's death his reversioners (D and others) instituted a suit for a declaratory decree in respect of the mortgaged portion, and for possession of the 17 kanals of the land, and on 8th February, 1892, their plaint was rejected on account of their failure to amend it. be regarded; on the other hand, in cases of conflict between occupancy tenants and those who would be their natural heirs under custom, or, between persons claiming succession to an occupancy tenancy, the holder of which has died, and alienees of the occupancy rights, the same rule of custom should presumably be followed as regulates alienation of, and succession to, land held in ownership (a).

A, the adopted son and the donee of an occupancy tenant, died sonless leaving a widow, after having formally associated the defendants with him in the tenancy. After the death of the widow a dispute arose between the collateral heirs of the adoptive father of A and the defendants.

Held that, if A was treated as an adopted son, his heirs, under custom and S. 59 (2) of the Act, are his adoptive father's nearest male agnates, and that, if he was treated as a donee, the gift, under custom, reverts, upon failure of his male line, to the heirs of the donor.

Held, also that there was no time bar against the plaintiffs, inasmuch as they could not sue for possession until the death of the widow of A. Saida v. Ismail, 76 P.R. 1907—32 P.L.R. 1908.

(17) Ss. 111 and 112, Scope of,—Right of person to settle, by written agreement, a course of succession different from that prescribed by the Act—Occupancy rights—Succession.

Ss. 111 and 112 of the Punjab Tenancy Act are an amendment of S. 2 of the Tenancy Act of 1868. S. 2 of the old Act saved all written agreements between landlord and tenants and gave the force of agreements to all entries in the Settlement Records made and sanctioned prior to the year 1871, as regards questions of rent, ejectment, alienation, succession and compensation. The intention of the Act of 1887 was to curtail the right of persons to contract themselves out of the terms of the Act especially as regards rent, ejectment and compensation, but the validity given by the law of 1868 to entries in Settlement Records prior to 1871 was maintained, and the right of persons in future to contract themselves out of the terms of the Act except as regards matters above-mentioned was declared. Parties can, therefore, by written agreement either prior or subsequent to 1871, settle on a law of succession different from the succession prescribed in the Act. According to S. 112, an entry in a wajib-ul-az, prior to 1871, with respect to the succession to land, in which a right of occupancy subsists is an agreement to which the provisions of S. 59 of the Act does not apply (a). Puran v. The framers of the Act having given no assistance in the right interpretation of the term, the word "Sheikhs" will cover, consequently, Sheikhs of all classes, until some indication is given that the word "tribe" is used in a narrow sense. Ali Muhammad v. (7) Ss. 11 and 12—Sale of land by vendor not being member of agricultural tribe—Vendee being proprietor in the village, not coming within purview of proviso to S. 11 of Act—Said by member of agricultural tribe claiming pre-emption.

Where a certain land had been sold by a vendor, who was not a member of an agricultural tribe, to a vendee, who was a proprietor in the village but who did not come within the purview of the proviso to S. 11 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act (II of 1905).

Held, that, the plaintiff, a member of the agricultural tribe, having a right of pre-emption under S. 12, had, therefore, a preferential right of pre-emption over that of the vendee (a).

The essence of pre-emption is that the right-holder has a better claim than some one else. Ss. 11 & 12 of the Act have been effectually drawn in such a way as to secure that lands, which had previously passed into the hands of persons not belonging to the privileged class of agricultural tribes, shall, under certain circumstances, revert to members of the privileged class, if they choose to exercise their legal rights. Thakur Das v. A, the male descendant of a female B, sold a property which B had inherited from her father C and others, the male descendants of B's real brother claimed pre-emption under S. 12 (a) of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905, as the persons entitled to succeed to A in the event of his dying without heirs.

The lower appellate Court, disagreeing with the first Court, dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiffs would succeed in default of male lineal descendants of B, not by inheritance but by reversion, and they cannot therefore claim to be "persons who but for such sale would be entitled, to inherit the property" within the meaning of S. 12 (a) of Punjab Pre-emption Act, 1905.

Held, that, the above contention was not sound. According to 32 P. R. 1895 (F.B.), B, when he took the property acted as a mere conduit pipe for eventually transferring it to the real heirs, viz., the male descendants of her father, who would be the persons entitled to succeed in the event of A dying without heirs and therefore entitled to pre-empt under S. 12 (a) of the Act. The fact that A had other male heirs did not matter, for, they had not troubled to assert their right, and it is open to the more remote heirs to sue for pre-emption if the nearer heirs decline or omit to assert their rights (a).

Held, also that under Hindu Law, which is the personal law of the parties, the plaintiffs are bandhus and therefore ultimate heirs of the vendor Dat Ram v. Siv Ram 131 P. W. R. 1908.

(J) Ss. 12 (a), 14 and 18—Sale of agricultural land to remote heirs while nearer heirs existed—Suit for pre-emption by another remote heir of equal degree of relationship with the vendees—Maintainability of suit.

Where a plaintiff sued for pre-emption claiming that he had a superior right, being an owner in the village and an alamqili, whereas the vendees were neither, the vendor having sons and brothers who did not sue, and the Lower Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff and the vendees were equally related to the vendor.

Held that cl. (a), S. 12 of the Act was applicable to the case though the nearer heirs had not sued for redemption, held, also that, under cl. (a), S. 12 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act, the right of pre-emption is conferred on the whole line of heirs, and not merely on the next and nearest heirs at the time of sale, it being further provided that the right inter se would be determined by the order of succession i.e., the nearer heir would exclude the more remote, and that, under circumstances of the case, and under S. 18 of the Act, the plaintiff was not entitled to sue for pre-emption at all.

Held, further, that S. 14 of the Act refers to cases "where several pre-emptors are found by the Court to be equally entitled to the right of pre-emption," i.e., are found to be equally entitled to acquire the property in preference, to another person, i.e., the defendant vendee, and not to the case of a claimant who is not entitled to acquire the land in preference to the vendee. Jang Bahadur Khan v. A person who, in his anxiety to purchase a particular plot of land or to purchase land in a particular village, gives a fancy price is acting in "good faith" within the terms of S. 22 of the Act, although his intention is to render it practically impossible for any one with a superior right of pre-emption to oust him.

Plaintiffs, British Indian subjects, residing in Simla, sued the Secretary of State for India for the value of timber purchased by them from the Rana of Ghond, and confiscated by order of the Superintendent, Simla Hill States while it was within the limits of the Kotli States, preparatory to being brought into Simla. Under the Punjab Government Rules, the sanction of the State Forest Officer was necessary to the felling of the trees, and all trees, before being removed from the forest, were to be marked with the State sale hammer-mark, and any trees removed without such mark were liable to confiscation. The timber in question not having been so marked, held that the confiscation was the act of the Superintendent acting in his political capacity, in respect of a property of a Foreign State, and was done in foreign territory, and as such was not liable to be questioned in a Municipal Court in British India.

There cannot be an act of State by a sovereign against his own subjects. Such proposition, however, refers to an act directed towards the subject, and it does not refer to an act not directed towards the subject, but which indirectly implicates such subject Kembo v. (1)—against remand, when to be presented—Erroneous order carried out—Subsequent proceedings, whether void—Waiver—Final disposal of suit, date of—Validity of remand order when to be challenged—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), Ss. 562 and 564—Alternative but not co-existent remedy.

Per STEPHEN, J.—An appeal against a remand order, presented before the suit is finally disposed of under that order, that is, before the final decree in the suit has been passed, is good, but a party cannot wait till the final disposal of the suit and then appeal against the interlocutory order without appealing from the decree in the suit.

Proceedings subsequent to an illegal order of remand might be valid under certain circumstances (a).

Per MOOKERJEE, J.—Although when a Court of first appeal, purporting to act under S. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, remands a case to the Court of first instance which had not decided the suit merely on a preliminary point, the order is erroneous, yet if the order of remand has been carried out subsequent proceedings are not void merely because of such error, and will be set aside only if it is established that the erroneous remand order has affected the merits of the case. The error does not affect the jurisdiction of the Courts, and consequently may be cured by consent.

The provisions in Ss. 562 and 564 of the Civil Procedure Code were introduced for the benefit of litigants, so as to guard against a fresh trial of the whole cause in the Court of first instance and to protect them from the delay, trouble and expense of a fresh appeal, if, therefore, litigants find it the more advantageous course that the whole case should be re-tried and consent to such a procedure, an order of remand contrary to the provisions of S. 564 of the Civil Procedure Code is not null and void. A party who has consented to such an order is not entitled to treat it as void and incapable of being validated by consent or waiver (b).

Under some circumstances, the final disposal of the suit may be taken to be the delivery of the judgment.

When a litigant has the right to choose between two remedies which are not co-existent but alternative, he may select and adopt one as better adapted than the other, to work out his purpose, but once he has made his choice, and adopted one of the alternative remedies, his act at once operates as a bar as regards the other, and the bar is final and absolute.

Where an order of remand has been made, its validity may be challenged directly and immediately by an appeal under S. 588, cl. 28, or indirectly under S. 591, when an appeal is preferred against the final decree in the suit. The party affected by the order of remand should make his election. He may, if he chooses, prefer an appeal against the order of remand, and obtain a stay of proceedings during the pendency of the appeal; he may, on the other hand carry out the order of remand, take the chance of a successful termination of the suit in his favour and, in the event of defeat, prefer an appeal against the final decree in which the validity of the order of remand may be questioned. He cannot, however, if he has carried out the order of remand and taken the full benefit of it, turn round and prefer an appeal against the order of remand (c). Balkunta Nath Day v. An award was made by a private arbitration, appointed out of Court, in favour of N and S against S, M, and D, and in favour of D against S, M. Then N, S and D applied under S. 525 C.P.C. to have the award filed in Court. S & M raised certain objections which were disallowed by the District Judge who ordered "the award to be filed and decree passed in accordance with the terms thereof."

S & M appealed. At the hearing of the appeal two preliminary questions were raised —

1. Whether an appeal lies against an order under S. 526, C.P.C., directing an award to be filed.

2. If not, whether such an order is open to revision on the grounds urged in the appeal.

Held, by the Full Bench unanimously that an appeal does not lie from an order under S. 526, C.P.C., directing an award to be filed, nor from the decree passed in terms of the award as there is only one decree in the case, viz., the filing of the award and the consequences of the decree being passed in terms of the award, flow from that order and no fresh order is required for those consequences to result, but it is not so in proceedings under S. 523, C.P.C.

Held, also, that no revision lies in such like cases on the grounds on which no appeal is allowed (a).

Held, by the division Bench, that in the appeal no ground for interference on revision is shown. Shankar Mal v. Nathu Mal, 58 P. W. R. 1907 (F.B.) = 1 P.R. 1908.

(3-c) Appeal presented on behalf of deceased party—Legal representative brought on record—Delay—Limitation Act, S. 5.

Although an appeal presented on behalf of a deceased party may be bad, yet the Court has power, in a proper case, to treat the appeal as having been properly filed on the day on which the legal representatives were made parties to the appeal, and to excuse the delay under S. 5 of the Limitation Act, 1877. Noothi

(3-d) Decree—Remand—Civil Procedure Code, S. 562—Declaratory suit relating to two pieces of land dismissed in toto by first Court upon preliminary point—Appellate Court dismissing suit as to one piece and remanding case as to the other piece—Inapplicability of C.P.C., S. 562—Illegality of order—Scope of appeal from order of remand.

Plaintiff prayed for a declaratory decree of title to two plots of land, one in Lahore, the other in Ichra. The first Court dismissed the whole suit on the ground of want of jurisdiction. On appeal the Divisional Judge, agreeing with the first Court, confirmed the decree of dismissal as to the Lahore land, but reversed the decree as to the Ichra land, and remanded the suit as regards that portion of the claim under S. 562, Civil Procedure Code, for a decision on the merits.

Plaintiffs preferred an appeal under S. 588 to the Chief Court impugning the whole order of the Divisional Judge. Respondent contended that as the appeal was only from an order of remand under S. 562, Civil Procedure Code, the rest of the order could not be attacked upon such appeal.

Held, (i) that the appellant cannot be deprived of the right of appeal as to the Lahore land simply because of the form of the Divisional Judge's order, which, while finally adjudicating upon the plaintiff's claim to the Lahore land, was not incorporated in any decree from which an appeal might be preferred.

(ii) That S. 562, C.P.C., was inapplicable to the case, as the Divisional Judge, on appeal, did not reverse the decree of the first Court upon a preliminary point, but upheld it to the extent of the claim to the Lahore land, and reversed it only in part.

(iii) The order was illegal also, because, if acted upon, it would result in two decrees being passed in one and the same suit, which is illegal. Unless the decree as a whole is reversed upon the preliminary point, a remand under S. 562, C.P.C., is not permissible (a). Amolak Shah v. Charan Das, 149 P. W. R. (1908).

Appeal—(Continued).1—(General)—(Continued).*(4) Suit—Dismissal—Appeal by plaintiff and defendant—Procedure.

Plaintiff brought an action for ejectment which was dismissed on the ground that it had been brought for a part of the tenancy, and therefore, not maintainable. The plaintiff appealed and the defendant also filed an appeal against a finding in the judgment as to the nature of the tenancy. The Judge decreed the defendant's appeal and affirmed the order of dismissal:

Held, that the procedure was erroneous. As the suit had been dismissed, the defendant could not appeal. The plaintiff's appeal should have been heard first, and if his grounds proved to have been well-founded, the defendant's objections should then have been considered. Aga Mohammad Medhi Tehar Ali v. (1-a) Grounds of second appeal not affecting the jurisdiction of the Court or the merits of the case, but relating to order of lower appellate Court remanding case for amendment of plaint by having it signed by person duly authorised in that behalf—Whether second appeal lies on such ground—Civ. Pro. Code, S. 578.

In a second appeal to the Chief Court the grounds of appeal were that both the lower Courts had erred in law in not having rejected the plaint, inasmuch as it was not signed by any person duly authorized in that behalf, and that the lower appellate Court was wrong in remanding the case for amendment for the plaint, when the plaint was not properly and duly signed.

Held, these grounds did not affect the jurisdiction of the Court or the merits of the case.

Held, also, under the circumstances of the case, S. 578 of the Civ Pro. Code debarred the Court from reversing or varying the decree,

(3) Finding of fact based upon an incorrect view of the law—Civ. Pro. Code, S 584—Joint Hindu family—Separate transactions by individual members—Writs of separate possession in village records, effect of.

Held that, where the parties have not had the benefit of a proper discussion of the materials on record, based upon a correct view of the law applicable to the same, such as they are entitled to receive from a Court of First Appeal, the proper course is to set aside the decree and remand the suit under S 562, Code of Civ. Procedure.

Held further, that neither the mere occurrence of separate transactions on the part of individual members of a joint Hindu family, nor the fact that property was entered as their separate possession in the village papers, is in any way conclusive on the question of separation (n). Ram Sewak v. (1) Permission of appeal to Privy Council—Amendment of Decree by way of amplification of its wording—Affirmation—Insufficient time given to produce evidence—Foreclosure proceedings—Defective notice—Substantial question of law (Civ. Pro. Code, (Act XLV of 1882), S. 596

Held, that, where on appeal, the decree of the first Court has been so far amended as to include therein expressly, plaintiff's rights in the Shamlat Doh and Shamlat Patti with other appurtenant rights as claimed, but has otherwise been confirmed on all points, the decree has been practically affirmed within the meaning of the last clause of S. 596, C.P.C.—the addition made is simply an amplification of its wording and does not amount to a variation so as to give right of appeal to his Majesty in Council.

Held, also, that none of the following defects is fatal to the foreclosure proceedings and constitutes a substantial question of law under S. 596, C.P.C.

(a) That the notice was bound to state the actual area claimed and not merely the 1½ Biswas' share actually entered in the mortgage-deed.

(b) That as there were two deeds of mortgage, two separate notices were required, notwithstanding the fact that the second deed was one of further charge only.

Held further, that a vague assertion to the effect that sufficient opportunity was not given for producing witnesses cannot be treated as a substantial question of law. Diwan Abdul Hakim v. Hari Lal, 62 P.W.R. 1908.

(1) Power to make co-defendant liable upon appeal by a defendant—Mortgage-suit.

In an appeal by defendants Nos. 2 to 8 against the decision of the 1st Court in which the real contest was whether defendant No. 1 who was joined as a respondent with the plaintiffs or defendants Nos. 2 to 8 were liable for the mortgage-debt, the Appellate Court has power to alter the decree of the 1st Court so as to make defendant No. 1 liable and to direct that a decree to recover the mortgage debt against defendant No. 1 be made in favor of plaintiff Ishwardhary Singh v. Arbitration.

(1) Award set aside by Court of first instance—District Courts setting aside such decision—Decision on merits.

Where a suit was referred to arbitration and an award was made thereon, the defendant applied to set aside the award. The award was set aside, and, the suit having come on for decision on the merits, it was determined in favour of the defendant. The plaintiff appealed and the District Judge, in appeal, decided that the Munsiff was wrong in setting aside the award and, without going into the merits, reversed the decree of the Munsiff and entered judgment in accordance with the award in favour of the plaintiff. Held, the District Judge had authority to inquire into, and decide as to the propriety or otherwise of a decision of a Munsiff setting aside an award. K. The parties to an administration suit consented (at the hearing), to its being referred to the Commissioner to take the usual accounts and to determine their respective shares.

Arbitration—(Continued).

Accounts and Objections were filed before the Assistant Commissioner, and the parties appeared before him, when it was orally agreed, to save the costs of a lengthy inquiry, that the Assistant Commissioner should deal summarily with all matters in dispute and draft terms by which the parties were to be finally bound, and the Assistant Commissioner personally explained to defendants 1 and 6 that they would be bound by his decision even if he decided to give them one rupee. To this they agreed. The Assistant Commissioner in due course arrived at a decision, but defendants 1 and 6 considered that it awarded them an insufficient amount and declined to be bound by it. Upon application being made by plaintiff that an adjustment of the suit might be recorded under S. 375 of the Civil Procedure Code, on the basis of the Assistant Commissioner's decision.

Held, that there had been no adjustment of the suit. There had been no written submission to arbitration as provided by S. 4 of the Indian Arbitration Act, and, consequently, there had been no legal and valid reference to arbitration and the Assistant Commissioner's award (for it really was an award and nothing else) had no legal foundation and could have no legal consequences. As there had been no reference to arbitration and no award, there had been no adjustment.

Semble, that the Indian Arbitration Act applies to such an arbitration.

Where a special procedure is provided for extraordinary extra-judicial methods of settling disputed claims, Semble, that it was the intention of the Legislature that that procedure and no other was to be followed (a). Rukhanbai v. Adamji Shaik Rajibhai, 10 Bom. L. R. 365.

I, Arts. 5 and 43—"Submission" required to be filed and stamped—Award made out of time—Enlargement of time after expiry of original time—Concealment of names and appointment of arbitrators—Notification of time and place of hearing—Frustrance, refusal to hear, when misconduct—Award against a firm—Jurisdiction of Court to set aside award, if may be ousted.*

Contract-notes which contain a provision for the submission of disputes to arbitration ought each to bear eight annas stamp under Art. 5, Sch. I of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, as an agreement not otherwise provided for in the schedule.

Although the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, has made the procedure for the enforcement of an award simpler than the old practice of instituting suit for the purpose, it is still necessary to prove that the arbitrators acted under a valid submission, before an award can be made a decree of Court under the Act (a)

The Rules for the guidance of the arbitration 'tribunal' of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce were construed to contemplate the parties being notified of the names and the fact of the appointment of the arbitrators.

Where the arbitrators appointed by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce under its rules did not appoint a time and place for the hearing of the reference, held, that the arbitrators failed in their duty in not doing so.

Whether the arbitrators should or should not hear evidence and the parties by counsel or otherwise must depend on the particular circumstances of every case, the arbitrators exercising, in a judicial manner, their discretion in the matter.

The refusal to hear evidence in a case where the arbitrators cannot decide a matter in dispute without hearing evidence would amount to a misconduct on the part of the arbitrators. It is improper for the arbitrators not to hear evidence to ascertain as to who are the persons liable on a contract entered into in the name of a firm.

An award made against a firm, without ascertaining as to who are the persons who constitute it, is, on the face of it, bad and no Court can make a decree, in such circumstances, upon the award, against a firm.

It is not competent for the parties by an agreement to oust the jurisdiction of the Court vested in it by S. 14 of the Indian Arbitration Act, 1899, to set aside an award, if misconduct on the part of the arbitrators were shown or if it were shown that the award was improperly procured, when the parties desire that the award should be enforced under the provisions of the Act. Hurdwary Mull v. An assignment of the assignor's interest in a certain sum due from a third party, "until certain advances made by the assignee to the assignor had been paid off with interest," is a conditional assignment. when the assignment is absolute, i.e., when it absolutely vests the property in him.

So, a person, to whom a non-negotiable promissory-note is assigned by the payee, as security for a debt due from the payee to the assignee, until the debt due to the assignee remains unpaid, cannot, as such an assignment is only conditional, sue the maker of the pro-note, in his own name, for recovery of the amount due on the note (a).

On the application by a judgment-creditor for execution of his decree and for attachment of the judgment-debtor's property, the property which was immovable was duly attached under S. 274, C. P. C., subsequent to this, another decree-holder holding a decree against the same judgment debtor filed an application for execution and in this application he set out the facts that the former judgment-creditor had already applied for execution of his decree and had succeeded in having the property attached. He, therefore, prayed that the said property might be held to be attached also in respect of his application of execution, and that he might be permitted to share rateably in the proceeds of the sale of the property (S. 295 of the Code). Held that, when the decree, in execution of which the property was attached was satisfied and there had been a withdrawal of the attachment, the latter decree-holder, obtaining an order in accordance with his prayer for a rateable share in the assets in the proceeds of sale of property attached by the former creditor had no right to claim the benefit of the attachment.

Where after the removal of such attachment, such property was assigned to a certain person held, that the assignee had a good title as against the latter decree holder.

An alienation obtained by one creditor for a genuine consideration which is not inadequate, is not necessarily void, because its obvious effect will be to defeat or delay the claim of a less vigilant creditor. Lahori Mal v. Gangaram, 91 P. R. 1908=148 P. W. R. 1908.

(2) Babuana grant of ancestral property—Grantee's estate, nature of—Custom—Burden of proof—Partition—Babuana grant, nature of.

Per curiam.—Landed property acquired by a grand father and distributed among his sons does not, by such gift, become their self-acquired property so as to enable them to dispose of it to the prejudice of the grandsons. (a).

A Babuana grant of ancestral property by the owner of an impartible estate to ensure for the benefit not only of a junior member of the family but of his male descendants in the direct line does not lose its ancestral character by the grant. It does not become self-acquired property in the hands of the grantee or his direct male descendants. Hence the other members of the family have the rights in it which they can claim under the Mitakshara Law, that is, the right to restrain alienation except in cases of legal necessity and the right to claim partition: and the original grantee has no power to dispose of the property by Will (b).

The custom which operates in the case of the Raj itself does not apply to a Babuana grant without the requisite proof which is necessary in such cases. The burden of proof lies upon the person seeking to establish the particular custom and to take this out of the ordinary category of Hindu family property.

Per Brett, J.—A Babuana grant is made to a junior member of the family and to his descendants in the male line for their maintenance. The grant is not of a portion of landed property to pay off a certain fixed sum of money which the grantee is entitled to claim on account of his maintenance from the Raja, but it is a grant for the maintenance of the grantee and his male descendants so long as there are any. Lalteshar Singh v Bhabeshwar Singh, 8 C. Other girl suing and getting decree for whole estate as keittima adopted daughter of deceased—Suit on behalf of first girl—Boy put on record as party—Decree against second girl directing her to pay 1/3 share to first girl and another third share to boy.

A maiden lady, deceased, had three persons living with her, (1) S, the daughter of B, with whose father the deceased was living, (2) P, a boy, and (3) L, another girl. On her death, Y, the father of S applied, as father and guardian of S, for Letters of Administration to the estate of the deceased, and obtained it from the Court. A similar application was also made on behalf of L, but was refused. L, thereupon, instituted a suit in forma pauperis against the estate of the deceased, administered by Y, for possession of the whole of it, as keittima adopted daughter of the deceased. The suit, to which S and P were wrongly not made parties, and which was very badly conducted, was resisted by Y, but was finally decreed in favour of L, as the adopted child of the deceased entitled to inherit. Afterwards, the sister of Y, instituted, as next friend of S, the present suit on the ground that, S not being a party to the former suit, the decrees in it were not binding on her, and that she alone was entitled to the whole estate. P, who wished to put forward his claim, was permitted to be put on the record as second plaintiff in a suit in which the original plaintiff claimed the whole estate. The suit was decreed in favour of S, who was held by the District Judge to have been adopted by the deceased and not L and P.

Held that S's right to share in the estate as keittima adopted daughter of the deceased had been proved and that L should make or pay over 1/3 share of the property, which she had obtained or may hereafter obtain from Y under the decree in the former suit, to the properly constituted guardian of S, that L's right to share in the estate as keittima adopted child having been established in the former suit where S's claim was represented fully, the question of L's right to share in the estate should not have been gone into in the suit.

Regarding P, though the evidence of his having been adopted was not so strong, yet, the deceased having brought him up also, and Y, the person who should have known best the position P occupied in the house, having ad-

(1) Some probabilities in favour of alleged adoption—One or two important probabilities against it—Adoption not generally published and not notorious—Valid adoption according to requirements of Burmese Buddhist Law, whether proved.

The plaintiff, an adult, claimed to have been adopted by his uncle. He was able to adduce, from the relationship between himself and his uncle, from the latter's circumstances, from his uncle's public letters, through witnesses, and from other sources, a good deal of evidence calculated to render his contention probable and successful. It appeared, however, that the plaintiff, when called upon to state his father's name, gave, not his adoptive, but his natural father's name, thus making it doubtful, whether the idea of giving up all his prospective rights in his natural parents' property, as the result of the adoption, presented itself to his mind at the time of the alleged adoption, and, also, that his relationship with his uncle was not published generally and was not notorious, as it ought to have been, had it been true.

Held, that he failed to prove that he had been validly adopted according to the requirements of the Burmese Buddhist Law.

In the absence of anything to show what is necessary to constitute the adoption of an adult, the general principle is that an adult cannot be adopted without his or her consent. But, as an adult (cannot be deprived of any rights without his or her consent),—an adoption depriving rights of inheritance in natural parents' property—it must appear that he or she consented to renounce all his or her prospective rights in his or her natural parents' property.

Per Fox, C. J.—Notoriety amongst the people with whom the parties ordinarily mixed in social life is what is required in evidence of the adoption of an adult (a).

Per Hartnoll, J.—When a person claims a share in an estate on the ground that he was adopted as an adult, the burden of proof lies heavily on him, the more especially as such an adoption is not usual even if it is sanctioned by the Dhammathats. Ma Gyi v. Maung Po Tha, 14 Bur. L. R. 15

(2) Evidence of adoption—Adoption taking place long ago—Variation in evidence as to time of adoption, effect of.

A suit was instituted for a declaration that the plaintiff was, equally with the defendant, the keittima daughter of a Burmese lady and, as such, entitled to share in the latter's estate equally with the defendant. The Court of first instance gave a decree to the plaintiff. The Chief Court reversed this decree on the ground, that the evidence adduced by plaintiff as to the time and manner of the alleged adoption varied widely and the publicity of the adoption was proved. On appeal, the Privy Council observed that neither ceremony nor written document being required to constitute, or initiate the relation of, keittima adoption, there must be, on the one hand the consent of the natural parents and, on the other, the taking of the child by the adoptive parent with the intention and on the footing that the child shall inherit. On weighing the evidence their Lordships found that the keittima adoption had been proved and that, as the adoption took place long ago, the variation in the evidence as to the time of adoption was not very material. Ma Me Gale v. Ma Sayi, 32 C. 219 (P. C.) = 4 L. B. R. 172.

- (1) Child of divorced couple—Rights of inheritance—Maintenance or renewal of filial relations sufficient to entitle plaintiffs to inherit property acquired during second marriage.

There seems to be a great weight of authority in favour of the proposition that a child of a divorced couple is entitled to inherit from the parent, with which he or she lives, and is generally not entitled to inherit from the other parent, (when that other parent has married again and has children by the second spouse) property acquired during the second marriage, and that visiting the other parent and receiving presents or even maintenance from him does not constitute a continuance or resumption of filial relations, such as would entitle the child to inherit such property (a).

The fact that the divorced wife and the children received nothing at the time of divorce makes no difference, at any rate so long as it was not alleged that there was any property to divide. Ma Paw v. Ma Mon, 11 Bur L R. 236—4 L.B.R. 272.

Buddhist Law—(Continued).—6.—Marriage—(Concluded)

The texts declaring that the husband is lord of the wife must be construed in the present day in a strictly limited sense. Practically in respect of their respective rights to property, the Burman Buddhist husband and wife occupy a position of equality.

It is settled Law that the husband is not at liberty to alienate joint property without his wife's consent, but that he can make a valid transfer of his share and interest in such property. The same rules apply to the case of alienations by the wife.

Thus, where a wife mortgaged her interest in a house and land which was linapazon letetpu a without the consent of her husband, it was held, that the mortgage was valid Nga San Ya v. Nga San Ya, U.B.R. (1907), Fourth Quarter, Buddhist Law—Marriage—Joint Property, 1.

Carriers.

(1) Liability of, for negligence and damage to goods—Bill of lading—Provision as to exemption from liability, effect of—English, American and Indian Law—Contracting against liability—Public policy—Contract Act, Ss. 23 and 151.

Carriers—(Continued.)

The goods (rice bags) belonging to the plaintiff were shipped in a steamer belonging to the defendant company, for delivery to the plaintiff's agent at another port, and, on arrival at that port, were placed by the company on the foreshore, where, however, they were destroyed under the orders of the Municipal authorities, on the ground that they had become damaged by rain and unfit for consumption.

The condition in the Bill of lading ran thus:—"In all cases and under all circumstances, the liability of the Company shall absolutely cease, when the goods are free of ship's tackle, and, thereupon, the goods shall be, for all purposes and in every respect, at the risk of the shipper or consignee."

In a suit by the plaintiff for recovery of the value of the rice so damaged,

Held, per White, C. J., and Sankaran Nair, J.—The contract was not terminated by the deposit of the goods on the foreshore, and it was for the defendants to show that the plaintiff's goods were ready for delivery at the time they were damaged, and not for plaintiffs to show they were not ready; and as there is no evidence to show that the bags were ever ready for delivery by being separated from the rest, the defendants were negligent (a).

Per Wallis, J.—The plaintiffs' claim is not so much for non-delivery of the bags as for failure to deliver them in good order and condition, and the plaintiffs failed to prove that the condition of the bags, when put at their disposal, justified them in refusing to take delivery.

Held also, per White, C. J. and Sankaran Nair, J. (Wallis, J., contra)—A ship-owner is not exempted from liability for negligence, unless the contract which exempts him is both clear and express; and as the contract in this case, though clear, is not express, the defendant are not protected by their bill of lading (b).

Per White, C. J., and Wallis, J.—The law of the United States of America forbids a carrier to exempt himself by contract from liability for negligence, while the law of England does not. On a question of this character the Courts in India ought to follow the law of England (c).

Per Sankaran Nair, J.—The question of liability is not concluded by authority in India. A rule of English Common Law ought not to be followed, when it is opposed to the principles followed and acted upon by the Indian Legislature. A contract exempting a ship-owner from liability for the negligence of himself or his servants in not taking the care required by S. 151, Contract Act, is contrary to public policy and, therefore, void under S. 23 of that Act. Such an exemption clause is clearly against the interests of the mercantile community and not necessary in the interests of the shipowners.

(2) Perishable goods shipped—Destruction of decayed goods at port by order of Municipal authorities—Obliteration of marks—Portion of goods not identified—Rest delivered—Claim for short delivery—Negligence—Liability of carrying steamship Company.

In July 1907, 2,035 baskets of onions were shipped from Madras to Moulmein by the B.I.S.N. Co. They travelled to Rangoon by a certain steamship and were there transhipped to two other steamships and conveyed to Moulmein in three different voyages. Three of the consignees of these onions were A, R, and P, and to them were consigned 100, 100 and 150 baskets respectively. A, pleaded that he only received 70 baskets, and so he sued the Company for short delivery of 30 baskets. Under similar circumstances, R and P respectively sued the Company for short delivery of 25 and 54 baskets. The Company denied their liability by reason of the clauses of their bills of lading, and they especially relied on the endorsement on the bills. "Onion bags and baskets frail. Carried at shippers' risk. Steamer not responsible for condition or outturn of contents." On the merits of the case, they pleaded that the 2,035 baskets were shipped to 17 consignees in Moulmein and arrived in Rangoon on the 21st July (a Sunday, when no transshipment is done), and that the consignment was reshipped to Moulmein as per account stated by them. The Company stated that, by order of the Municipality, 176 baskets and 11 bags, containing 50 baskets, were destroyed in Moulmein, owing to the deterioration of their contents and that, after delivery, 32 baskets still remained in the godown, and they urged that, owing to the baskets being frail and their contents having become bad and the consequent obliteration and destruction of all marks, it was impossible to say to whom any portion of the 258 baskets were consigned. The plaintiffs A, E, and F were invited to bear a rateable proportion of the loss. The plaintiffs had also been offered a portion of the 32 baskets in the godown, which they refused to accept, with the result that, on the 30th August, the whole 32 baskets were destroyed as rotten. These baskets bore no marks. The plaintiffs did not urge that the onions had been damaged owing to the negligence of the defendant Company, but contended that the defendant Company had to show what had become of each cargo consigned to them. The Company, however, did account for the whole 2,095 baskets consigned to them.

Held that, having regard to the perishable nature of the goods, the frail packing, and the terms on which the Company undertook to carry, in the absence of any proof of negligence on the part of the carriers the Company could not be held liable for all the baskets destroyed by order of the Municipality and that the loss should fall on the owners of the goods, and that with respect to the baskets bearing no marks and, hence, undelivered, the several owners of the consignments became tenants in common of the baskets in proportion to the quantities which should have been delivered to them respectively, and the plaintiffs, who refused to take shares though offered, could not hold the defendant Company responsible. The British India Steam Navigation Company Ltd. v. (1) S. 2—Decree—Settled accounts, order directing re-opening of—Attorney and client—Settlement of untaxed bills, when liable to be re-opened—Fiduciary relationship—Omnis of showing good faith—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), S. 16—Evidence Act (I of 1872), S. 111—Independent advice, opportunity to obtain—Promissory note, assignment of, without endorsement.

Plaintiff, a solicitor, had advanced various sums of money to a client from time to time on a mortgage bond and three further charges. The consideration for the third further charge was not paid in cash, but was made up of (1) amounts due to the plaintiff on several promissory notes in the plaintiff's favour, (2) certain promissory notes executed by the client in favour of a third party, which the plaintiff is said to have "taken up," (3) balance of amount due as interest on the mortgage and two further charges, and (4) a certain amount stated to have been found due to the plaintiff as costs for acting for him in various suits, upon a settlement made of amounts due under various taxed and untaxed bills, a large remission having been allowed in consideration of all the bills not being taxed.

In a suit by the plaintiff against the heirs of the deceased client to realize the amounts due on the mortgage and the three further charges the plaintiff obtained a decree on the first three bonds, but the 4th bond was ordered to be re-opened, and it was directed that the plaintiff "do get all his bills of costs up to the 3rd August, 1903 taxed by the Taxing Officer of the High Court, and then re-file the bills in this Court, that then a Commissioner be appointed to take accounts in the light of the observations in this case that after the Commissioner's report is received and the parties are heard thereon, final decree will be drawn up under S. 89 of the Transfer of Property Act."

Held, that this order was a decree. The fact that the subordinate Judge intended hereafter to adjust the equities arising out of the contract, did not in any way do away with his adjudication that the contract, as it stood, was not binding on the defendants (a).

As between attorney and client, the existence of fiduciary relationship alone, or the fact that certain bills of costs were not taxed but were settled out of Court by execution of a deed, will not justify a Court in re-opening accounts settled on which the bond is based, unless sufficient grounds of suspicion exist, or the bills are prima facie shown to be extortionate (b).

Section 16 of the Contract Act only presumes undue influence by a person in a position to dominate the will of another, when the contract appears on the face of it to be unconscionable.

To prove "good faith" of a transaction in which one party stands in a fiduciary relationship to the other, it is certainly not necessary to prove that all the accounts on which the contract is based are correct.

Under the practice obtaining in the original side of the High Court, taxation of bills of solicitors is deemed to be optional with the client and bills of costs are not infrequently adjusted without taxation.

The case of Monohur Doss v Romanath Law (I.L.R. 3 C. (473) was decided on the special circumstances of that case and does not lay down any general rule of law

An attorney may be bound under certain circumstances to advise his client to take independent advice. It is not his business to see that the attorney selected by his client fulfills his duties to his client and is not guilty of any remissness or negligence. If he sends his client to another attorney and is ready to comply with all reasonable demands for information, he cannot be expected to do more, or to be responsible for another's omissions.

If the parties to a promissory note agree that on the promisor executing a bond for the amount due in favour of a third person, the promisee would cancel the note, this arrangement would be a perfectly valid contract, whether the third party paid any money to the promisee or not.

Although a negotiable instrument can only be assigned by endorsement, that does not prevent any arrangement not to negotiate the note but to put an end to it. Shamuldhone Dutt v. Srimutty Susila Bala Debi, 12 C.W.N. 1102.

On the 22nd June the appeal was posted to the 1st July on which date it was called for hearing and, appellant not being present either in person or by pleader, was dismissed for default. Held, the Judge did not exercise his discretion wrongly in declining to hold that the appellant was prevented by any sufficient cause from attending when his appeal was called on. A decision, dismissing a suit under S. 102 for default of appearance of the plaintiff or dismissing an appeal under S. 556 of the Code for default of appearance by the appellant, is not a decree within the meaning of S. 2 of the Code, inasmuch as there is no 'formal' expression of an adjudication upon any right claimed or defence set up. Dakshinamurthy Pillai v The Municipal Council of Trichinopoly by its Chairman, 3 M L T. 336=31 M. 157.

A then sued to eject B, and to recover mesne profits. The Court made a decree for ejectment and allowed mesne profits from the date of the service of notice under S. 167. B preferred an appeal. During its pendency, A sued B for rent for the period between the date of his purchase and the date of the service of notice:

A person suing for possession of land as mortgagee is not required to put forward in the suit his claim to succeed to the property as a reversioner, and his omission to do so does not prejudice his right in any way, as S. 13 of the Civ. Pro. Code is not applicable to such cases.

Held that the parties to the suit, Sarsut Brahmans of Gopalpura village of Amritsar District, though owned land for generations, were governed by Hindu Law, and not by custom, and that daughter's sons excluded near collaterals according to Hindu Law.

In a suit for redemption, the Chief Court held that interest and profits realized by the mortgagee balanced each other, where the mortgagee had failed to keep accounts of the profits realized from the mortgaged property. Amin Chand v. Tirath Ram, 95 P.L.R. 1908.

S. 13, C.P.C., as applied to Berar, is not the same law as it is in British India. In British India, it is Act XIV of 1882 enacted by the Governor-General in Council. In Berar it is a replica of this enactment set up by an executive order of the Government of India in the Foreign Department.

The Court is not precluded under S. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code from trying an issue whether the rent of the holding is payable entirely in cash or partly in cash and partly in kind, as it was not directly and substantially in issue in a previous litigation between the same parties, where the substantial relief sought was a declaration that the appraisement made by the Collector under S. 69 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was invalid.

S. 69 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is applicable upon the assumption that the rent is taken by appraisement or division: the only matter in controversy between the parties is as to the quantity value or division of the produce, the section ceases to be applicable when there is a bona fide dispute as to the character of the holding itself (a).

If a tenant relies upon clause (a) of Art. 2 of Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, he must prove that there was an application which fulfilled the requirements of S. 61, sub-S. (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that a deposit was made under S. 61 after the arrear had fallen due, he must also show that notice under S. 63 was served on the landlord and prove the date when the service was effected.

There is no presumption that a letter, which was posted, was properly addressed, and the presumption, that the letter reached the addressee, has no application till it is established that the letter was properly addressed (b).

Before the presumption of due service can be applied, it is necessary to prove that the notice was sent in a cover which was properly addressed (c).

The presumption that a notice sent by post was duly served is not a conclusive presumption of law; it is merely a presumption of fact; and whether it arises in a particular case or not depends upon all the circumstances (d).

An ex parte entry in the order-sheet is by no means conclusive evidence, if it is admissible in evidence at all, as against the landlord, who was not a party to the proceedings for deposit under S. 61 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (e).

When rent is due to the member of a joint Hindu family, it is not open to the karta alone to maintain a suit for rent without joining the other members either as plaintiffs or as defendants, except when the tenant has dealt with such karta as sole landlord (f).

When the co-owner landlords were not unwilling to join as co-plaintiffs but did so with the utmost readiness as soon as objection was taken by the tenant defendants, they should have been joined as plaintiffs in the first instance and if they are brought on the record after the expiry of the period of limitation, their claim is barred by limitation and the entire claim is barred as the claim was joint and indivisible (g).

If the tenancy was created before 1836, Batta Company is prima facie not an abwab, but if the creation of the tenancy is of subsequent date, it is prima facie an abwab (i). Mir Tapurah Hosseln v Gopi Narayan. 7 C L J. 251.

(28) S. 13, Expl. II—Res judicata—First suit decided on a preliminary point—Second suit on a point not decided in the first suit.

Explanation 2 to S. 13 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, must be read in conjunction with, and as part and parcel of, the leading provisions, of the section itself. According to those provisions, several conditions are necessary to constitute a matter res judicata. Two of those conditions are (1) that the matter must have been in the former suit directly and substantially in issue and (2) that it must have been heard and finally decided in that suit.

The explanation does no more than lay down that if a matter, which might and ought to have been made a ground of defence in the former suit is not made such a ground, it shall be dealt with as falling within the first of the above-mentioned conditions. That is, the omission shall have the same effect given to it as it would have had if it had been made a ground of defence. But to constitute res judicata a second condition is necessary; it must have been finally decided, and if the former suit went off on a preliminary ground, not calling for adjudication on any other grounds of defence, whether raised or not, those grounds remain undecided.

The same effect must be given to a matter which might and ought to have been, but has not been made, a ground of defence in the former suit, as must be given to a matter which was made a ground of defence in the former suit. Abdullakhan Usman Khan v. A purchased village S in execution of a decree obtained by him against C in the Small Cause Court. Subsequently A through B instituted a mortgage suit against C and in execution of the decree obtained therein purchased some lands in the same village S. C instituted two suits, one to set aside the sale in execution of the Small Cause Court decree and the other to set aside the decree and sale in the mortgage suit. The latter suit was dismissed for default but the former succeeded. In this suit, A did not set up as a ground of his defence the title obtained by him at the mortgage sale.

Held—that A was not bound to do so, and a suit by A to recover the lands in Village S purchased at the mortgage sale is not res-judicata under Expl. II of S. 13 of the Civ. P. Code.

Per Brett, J.—Expl. II of S. 13 of the Civ. P. Code refers to the title litigated in the former suit as distinguished from relief claimed. When several independent grounds of action are available, a party is not bound to unite them all in one suit though he is bound to bring before the Court all grounds of attack available to him with reference to the title which is made the ground of Action. This rule equally applies to the converse case of a defendant when pleading in his defence (a). Mohabir Tewari v. Purbhoo Nath Chowbey, 12 C.W.N. 292=7 C. L. J. 504.

Held, that the plea of payment now raised should have been made a ground of defence in the previous suit, and the defendant was precluded from claiming a set off in regard to it by Expl. II of S. 13 of the Civ. P. Code (a).

In 1875, N. & S. sued in the Court of a Munsiff, 1st class, to contest the validity of the adoption of K. by H. That suit was dismissed, it being found, firstly, that N. & S. were not collaterals of H., and so had no locus standi to object, and, secondly, that the adoption was valid.

K having died without issue, N & S. filed a suit for possession of the movable and immovable property of K, as collaterals of his adoptive father H. D and others, proprietors of and in possession of the land, also filed another suit for declaration of their title to succeed as the proprietary body denying the relationship of N. & S. with H.

Held—(I) That the question, whether N and S. are collaterals of H. or not, is not barred by res judicata by reason of its being decided in the previous suit in 1875, as—

(a) The Court trying the first suit, a Munsiff with jurisdiction up to Rs. 1,000 only, had no jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit which was valued at more than Rs. 1,000.

(b) D & C. cannot be said to be suing as representatives of H. and K, who were defendants in the previous suit. The claim is simply a claim founded on the custom of escheat in favour of the proprietary body who no more represent the deceased than the crown does in cases in which property lapses to the Crown for want of heirs.

(II) A party claiming as an heir can and should sue for the whole of the estate, both movable and immovable, in one and the same suit (a).

(III) Although a presumption exists by law in favour of the correctness of the pedigree table as prepared at a settlement, such presumption is greatly weakened, if the contents of that document are vague.

(IV) The contention of N. & S. that they were also members of the proprietary body, along with D and others, could not be entertained in the Chief Court, where it was raised for the first time on appeal. Ram Singh v Dula Singh, 58 P W R. 1908 the sale, after deducting commission, were made over to another defendant, who was the mortgagee-creditor of the defendant, and the plaintiffs sued the mortgagee creditor for a refund of their two-thirds share of the purchase money.

Held that the suit directly affected an interest in immovable property, and, as such, was one "for the determination of any right to or interest in immovable property," within the meaning of S. 16 (d) of the Civ. Pro. Code, that it could only be taken cognizance of by the Court within whose jurisdiction the property was situate, and as such was not maintainable in British Courts (a); nor, should there be any doubt on the question of jurisdiction, was it a proper case for interference on revision. Hari Ram v. The plaintiff sued as heir of her father to recover from her brother and from certain transferees from him her share in the property of her deceased father. The suit was brought in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bareilly. Part of the property claimed was situated in the Bareilly district and part in the district of Bara Bangi in Oudh. During the course of the suit a compromise was arrived at regarding the Bareilly property and the suit proceeded with reference to the property in Oudh alone. Held (1) that the plaintiff had properly impleaded her brother and the transferees from him as co-defendants in one suit, and (2) that, there being no fraud or improper motive alleged with reference either to the compromise or to the filing of the suit in the Court at Bareilly, that Court was not by reason of the compromise divested of jurisdiction to hear and decide the suit in respect of the property situate in Oudh. Kubra Jan v. Plaintiff is a resident of Lahore and defendant a resident of Cochin. Plaintiff paid in advance, a part of the price fixed, and the balance was to be paid by a bill drawn by defendant on plaintiff's firm at Lahore.

The goods were not despatched, and plaintiff sued for the recovery of the money paid in advance and for damages, and the question was whether the Lahore Court had jurisdiction.

(41) S. 17, Expl. III—Promissory note executed within jurisdiction of one Court—Note payable on demand—Place of payment not specified—Plaintiff suing in place different from place of execution of note—Cause of action where arises—Jurisdiction of Courts

The note sued upon was executed by the defendant at T, of which he was a resident; and within the local limits of the jurisdiction of another place, K, the plaintiff brought the suit. It was payable on demand, no place of payment being fixed in it. The plaintiff claimed the right to sue at K, on the ground that the debt was impliedly payable there, (S. 17, expl. III (iii), Civ. Pro. Code). The defendant objected that the Court at K had no jurisdiction;

Held that the general rule that, where the place of payment is not specified, expressly or by implication, in a promissory note, the debtor must seek his creditor to pay him, cannot be relied on as controlling the express words of a statute prescribing the conditions which give a Court local jurisdiction (a), viz., of S. 17, expl. III, Civ. Pro. Code. The place where the cause of action, arises is governed, not by any general rule of law, but by S. 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and it is the place where, in performance of the contract, any money to which the suit relates is, expressly or impliedly, payable.

Held, further, that as in the present case the only fact, either with reference to the terms of the contract, or with reference to the circumstances in which the contract was made, which can be said to raise a implication that the money was to be payable at K, is the fact that the plaintiff resides there, and as this fact is not sufficient to raise this implication and as there is no evidence that it was the practice, in the ordinary course of business, for money to be paid at K, the Court at K had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit against the defendant. Raman Chettiyar v. (45) Ss. 26 and 28—Suit by transferee of mortgage against mortgagor and mortgagee (transferor)—Portion of mortgage debt discharged prior to transfer—Misjoinder of defendants—English rules 1 and 4, order XVI.

Per Benson and Wallis, JJ. (White, C. J., Diss). Where the transferee of a mortgage has brought a suit for sale against the mortgagor and has joined therewith a claim against his transferor (the original mortgagee) for damages in case it should appear that any portion of the mortgage debt had been discharged by the mortgagor before the date of the transfer and so not be recoverable in the present suit from the mortgagor, held, the suit is not bad for misjoinder of defendants.

Per Wallis, J.

The use of the less definite words "in respect of the same matter" in S. 28 (than the words "in respect of the same cause of action" in S. 26) would seem to show that it was intended to allow joinder of defendants not only when relief was sought in respect of the same cause of action, but also when relief is sought in respect of separate causes of action against the different defendants so long as they all arise "in respect of the same matter."

English decisions under Rule 4, order XVI, are not applicable to S. 28, Civ. Pro. Code, as the scope of the section is wider than that of the rule.

Obiter. English decisions on rule 1, order XVI, apply to cases of joinder of plaintiffs under S. 26 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Aiyathurai Ravuthan v. San Muhammad Meera Ravuthan, 18 M. L. J. 238—31 M. 252.

Held, that the suit was rightly framed inasmuch as there was one interest between all the plaintiffs and only one cause of action.

The whole aim and object of the suit was to regulate the collection and distribution of the property of the temple, and even though there was no application for the removal of the Dharmakarthas (in which case there could be no doubt that the Court would have power to appoint a receiver pending the appointment of fresh Dharmakarthas to take charge of the property of the temple) the subject of the suit was the same in both the cases, namely the property of the temple. K.A. Objections on these grounds were taken for the first time in second appeal.

This cannot be overridden by an agreement between the debtor and the creditor that separate suits might be brought. Where there are several breaches of covenants made under one contract, one way of looking at the matter is that, at the date of the latter breach, the right of action based on the earlier breach, if it is not barred by limitation, is merged in that arising out of the latter breach. An arbitration award was to the following effect:—"Let the entire village of Batama be sold to the creditor for Rs. 3,300. Let the remainder of the debt be forgiven. Let the whole of the sir and khudkasht land be left for the maintenance of the debtors. Let the house which is mortgaged to the creditor be given to the debtors free of incumbrance."

A decree was passed by the Court for specific performance of the award, and the defendants having failed to obey the decree of the Court, the Court itself executed a sale deed under S. 262 of the Civ. Held, that the plaintiff was not compelled by S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act to add a prayer for possession in the previous suit for specific performance, and that S. 43, C.P.C. (1882) was no bar to the present suit by the plaintiff for possession. Sheodia v. Mt. Godhi Bai, 4 N.L.R. 14.

At the hearing, the plaintiff sought leave to amend the plaint by relying on a document which brought the claim within time, but which was not mentioned in the list of documents annexed to the plaint—

Held, that the plaint which was bad on the face of it could not be allowed to be amended in the way suggested.

All amendments in a plaint which do not cause an injustice to the other side are allowed; but if the amendments put the other side into such a position that they must be injured, they ought not to be made (a).

- (74) S. 51—Plaint to be signed by plaintiff—Cases when signature is dispensed with—“Good cause,” significance of the words.

S. 51 of the Civ. Pro. Code contains a rule and an exception to that rule. The rule is that plaintiff and his pleader, if any, shall sign the plaint. Where there is a pleader to sign, no exception is made. But for plaintiff's personal signature an exception is provided for specified reasons. When resort is had to the exception, such reasons must be asserted in every case. It is a misinterpretation of the proviso to say that “absence” is a good cause of not signing. It is only absence of such a kind as makes signature impossible that would make this part of the proviso applicable. But the words “other good cause” are of a wider significance, and, in effect, leave the matter to the discretion of the Court, for each case must be treated by itself. So, unless by reason of absence or other good cause, the plaintiff is unable to sign, the language of S. 51 is imperative that he shall sign (a). Chandra Mal v. Ganpat Rao, 4 N.L.R. 117.

Plaintiffs sued for an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with their dealings, in respect of certain property of theirs, of which the defendant had taken wrongful possession. On the defendants pleading title to the property, plaintiffs prayed for amendment of their claim by claiming possession and damages.

Held, that a suit for a declaration cannot be regarded as inconsistent with one for possession (a) and that an alteration in the relief prayed for, would not alter the character of the suit, so as to prevent an amendment of a plaint in that respect (b) Harji Mal v. At the hearing of a suit, after the plaintiff closed his case, the defendant contested the whole case of the plaintiff, filed some documents himself and examined some witnesses. On the fourth day after the defence began, as some of the expected witnesses for the defence had not turned up, application for adjournment was made by defendant's Counsel. The case was adjourned for the next day, first, to enable the witnesses to attend, and secondly, if such witnesses did not attend, for a proper application, supported by affidavit, for adjournment being made. On the next day the application for adjournment was refused, and the suit was decreed ex parte. The defendant, without appealing against the order refusing adjournment, applied under S. 108, C. P. C., for setting aside the ex parte decree. Held.

A suit against a father and his minor son, who was stated to have been adopted by the father's uncle, for the recovery of mortgage money, was, owing to alleged negotiations for a compromise, and at the request of the parties, finally adjourned, after the settlement of issues to the 26th June 1901. On the 24th June, the alleged adoptive mother of the 2nd defendant, being his guardian ad litem, presented a petition praying for two months' time to enable her to produce evidence on the 2nd defendant's behalf. On this petition being rejected, the vakil, who till then appeared for the 2nd defendant and who moved the application, informed the Court that he had no instructions and abstained from taking any further part in the suit. The case was proceeded with, the guardian ad litem of the 2nd defendant only being absent and a decree, including also the share of the 2nd defendant, (who had pleaded that, owing to his adoption, the mortgage was not binding on him to the extent of his interest in the land), was passed in favour of the plaintiffs. On the plaintiff's proceeding to execute, the 2nd defendant's guardian ad litem applied, under S. 108, C.P.C., to the District Judge, to have the decree set aside, who dismissed the application, being of opinion that the decree should be taken as on passed under S. 158, C.P.C.

Held, the case not being one in which time had been specifically granted to the 2nd defendant to produce his evidence or to cause the evidence of his witnesses or to perform some other act necessary to the further progress of the suit and the adjournment being an adjournment of the suit for the convenience of all the parties, that the ground taken by the District Judge in dismissing the petition was clearly unsustainable, that the action of the Court must be taken to have been under the first part of S. 157 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and that the latter part of S. 157 had absolutely no application to a case, like the present where the Court at once proceeded to trial and judgment (a).

Held, further, that the decree passed against the 2nd defendant must be held, under the above circumstances, to have been ex parte, although his pleader was present and applied for adjournment (b).

In cases where a pleader informs the Court that he has no instructions, it would be well explicitly to ascertain whether the pleader severs his connection with the case. Ramanuja Reddiar v Ramaswami Aiyangar, 3 M. L. T. 225—18 M. L. J. 51.

S. 350 of the Civ. Pro. Code contemplates that on the date fixed for hearing, the Court shall examine the judgment-debtor in the presence of the persons on whom notice has been served or their pleaders. This should be strictly carried out.

If the objector had no notice of the application for insolvency, he is entitled to apply under S. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside an ex parte order passed under S. 350 of the Code, but if notice had been served on him and he was prevented by any sufficient reason from appearing and if the case was heard ex parte under S. 350, he is entitled to make an application under S. 623 of the Civ. In an application under S. 108, of the Civil Procedure Code, on the grounds of fraud and suppression of summons, the Munsiff rejected the application holding there was no fraud and no suppression. On appeal the District Judge passed the following judgment:

"This was an application under S. 108; Civil Procedure Code. After hearing arguments of pleaders, I am of opinion that this is a fit case for remand. Ordered accordingly that the appeal be allowed and the suit be remanded to the Lower Court for trial on merits."

Held, this was not a proper judgment. The case having been in fact tried on the merits, the District Judge had no jurisdiction to remand it, but should have come to a conclusion on the evidence. Sonaulla Sarkar v. Beake Mandal, 7 C. L. J. 379.

An ex parte decree was set aside under S. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure by the Munsiff. A rule to set aside this order was discharged by the High Court. Subsequently on appeal from the final decree, the District Judge set it aside on the ground that the order under S. 108 was not proper.

Held, the District Judge had no jurisdiction to consider the propriety of the order, after the discharge of the rule by the High Court.

Held further.—It was not open to the plaintiff to challenge the validity of the order in an appeal against the final decree. S. 591 of the Code of Civil Procedure has no application to such a case (a).

When a plaintiff seeks to produce documents at the trial which he had failed to mention in the list annexed to the plaint, the Court has clearly a discretion under S. 139 of the Civil Pro. Code whether to receive or to reject them. But in exercising this discretion the Court has to bear in mind that the section was enacted to prevent fraud by the late production of suspicious documents and not to shut out formal evidence beyond suspicion such as certified copies of public documents or records of judicial proceedings (a).

When a subordinate Court has refused in the original exercise of its discretion to receive documentary evidence which ought to have been accepted, the High Court has ample power to interfere under S. 584, C. P. C. (b).

Unless called upon by the Court, it is not obligatory on the plaintiff to produce documents on which he relies but which he has not filed with the plaint, at the first hearing when issues are framed (c). Talewar Singh v. Bhagwan Das, 12 C. W. N. 312=8 C. L. J. 147.

(102) S. 158—Power of dismissing suit—Plaintiff adducing some evidence—Non service on some of Plaintiff's witnesses.

It is only under very exceptional circumstances, and when no other provisions of the Code are applicable to a case, that resort should be had to the very stringent provisions of S. 158 of the Civ. Pro. Code. Where four of the witnesses of the plaintiff were examined, it is not open to the Court to dismiss the suit under this section without taking into consideration the evidence on the record, simply because some of the plaintiff's witnesses who had been summoned to attend on the date of hearing were not served with notice. Kartar v. One Ramkaiangan, when he was joint with his younger brother K and acted as karta of the joint family, conveyed, on 12-10-1908, to one Puri a portion of the joint property. In January, 1905, K sued to obtain possession of half the aforesaid share, claiming that the sale was void for want of consideration, and, in any case, could not bind him, as it was neither necessary nor beneficial to his interests. The defendant, inter alia, alleged that the plaintiff was adopted soon after October 1898 by one S.

thereby losing all title to the property of his natural family. The defendant had the burden of proving that the plaintiff had been adopted by S. The general rule that the best evidence should be given required him to put the adoptive father into the box. But he deliberately closed his case without tendering S, though both sides had included S in their lists of witnesses. After the case was closed and was posted for judgment, the defendant applied for leave to examine S, who was present in Court. The first Court refused to examine S.

Held that S. 181, Civ. Pro. Code, had no application under the circumstances, that there was no reason whatever why the first Court should have exercised the power conferred on it by S. 165, Civ. Pro. Code, and that it was not bound to examine S, but exercised the discretion allowed in such matters, not only legally, but wisely (a). To countenance a manoeuvre of this sort would only lead to laxity in the conduct of litigation.

If a party wants a certain person examined, he must tender him for examination, and S. 181, Civ. Pro. Code, does not require a Court to examine a witness, simply because he may be present in Court (b).

It was objected, also, that the pleadings did not include an allegation that S, being a nu-lung, could not adopt, and that the first Court should not have relied on orders recorded in a suit not inter partes, showing that J, whom the defendant's witnesses described as having taken a prominent part in the adoption ceremony in 1900 or later, was already dead in April 1899, held that the fact that J died early in 1899 was relevant under S. 11 of the Indian Evidence Act, and, if he was treated as dead, in a civil suit to which he was a party, the Court's order was good evidence of a fact which might be proved otherwise (See S. 43 in the Indian Evidence Act). Ramkrishna Puri v Kisangir, 4 N. This suit was tried in the District Court partly by one Judge and partly by another. In a preliminary order the first Judge came to certain findings and directed that after certain evidence had been taken with regard to the mortgage of the lands the final decree should take a certain shape. The Judge who finished the case disagreed with his predecessor and gave a different decree to that ordered by the first Judge.

Held, that the order of the first Judge did not have the force of a decree and that it was the decision of the second Judge that decided the suit, and that it was that decree that was appealable, and not the order of the first Judge. Ma Nyo v. Ma Yauk, 4 L. B. R. 256.

It was directed by a decree that N should pay Rs. 90 and Rs. 11-5-3 as costs and A should pay Rs. 30 with Rs. 3-12-4 as costs. The application was rejected on the ground that it came within cl. (b) of S. 232 of the Civ. Pro. Code.

Held that the decree for money so far as it related to the Rs. 90 and costs was not a decree against several persons but against one person that is N, and so far as that part of the decree was concerned, the transfer did not fall within cl. (b) of S. 232 of the Civ. Pro. Code.

S. 244 bars a regular suit, where the question relating to execution of a decree is raised bona fide. But when the decree itself is, on the face of it, wholly irrelevant to the question raised, and the wrong-deer takes the plea of bar to shield his unlawful gain secured even against the express orders of the executing Court, possibly in collusion with the officer executing the decree, and in the absence of the judgment-debtor, S. 244 would seem to have no application. So, where a person sued to enforce his right of pre-emption, in a property subject to mortgage, and got a decree directing delivery of possession of the equity of redemption therein but, in execution of the decree, the Patwari delivered possession of the property itself, instead of the equity of redemption, a regular suit by the mortgagee, claiming restitution of the property so wrongfully delivered cannot be said to be barred by S. 244, as the question raised in the suit does not relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree (a). Even if there were any room for doubt on this point, the plaint may be treated as an application for execution of decree for claiming restitution of lands wrongfully delivered by the Patwari in executing the decree (b). Karam Chand v. (136) S. 244—Purchaser under decree of puisne mortgage obtaining possession of mortgaged property—Subsequent purchase under decree on the first mortgage—Suit for possession by subsequent purchaser—Redemption.

A puisne mortgagee obtained a decree against the mortgagor without impleading the first mortgagee, and bought the property in execution of his mortgage-decree, and also obtained possession thereof.

The first mortgagee then sued on his mortgage and bought the property in execution of his own mortgage-decree. The first mortgagee afterwards sued the puisne mortgagee, and claimed that the puisne mortgagee should either give up possession or redeem him.

Held, that the suit was not barred by S. 244, C.P.C. (a).

In order that S. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, should apply, two conditions must be fulfilled—

(a) the question must relate to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree, or stay of execution thereof;

(b) the question must arise between parties to the suit or their representatives.

In the present case the question at issue arose only after the satisfaction of the original decree, and it was not between parties to the same suit or their representatives, but between representatives of the same party.

Held, also, that, the defendant being a puisne mortgagee, his only right was to redeem the plaintiff (b). He was not concerned with the account taken in the plaintiff's suit to which he was not a party, nor was he concerned with the price paid by the plaintiff at his purchase. Thakurdas wd. Mulchan v. A person, for whom the predecessor of the judgment debtors was the benamidar and who is, therefore, really interested in protecting the property, is a "representative" of the judgment debtors within the meaning of S. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The word "representative" has a wide import, and includes not only heirs and executors, but also assignees or legal representatives in the strict sense of the words, that is, persons interested in saving the property from being sold, and whose interest would be jeopardized if the sale were not set aside. Shibkumar Lal Panday v. These persons resisted the application upon the ground that they were not the legal representatives of the widow, and the lower appellate Court decided that they were not and dismissed the decree-holders' application for execution.

(149) S. 244, whether bars the trial of an issue involved in the questions mentioned in the section—Issue raised at the instance of a defendant in a suit brought against him.

The effect of S. 244, Civ. Pro. Code is to debar a plaintiff from bringing a suit for the determination of a question relating to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of a decree which has arisen between himself and the defendant as parties to the suit in which the decree was obtained, but not to debar a defendant from setting by way of defence a matter which relates to the execution, discharge, or satisfaction of a decree obtained in a suit to which he and the plaintiff were parties. All that S. 244 enacts is that certain questions therein specified shall be determined by the order of the Court executing the decree and not by separate suit; the section bars a suit brought for the determination of certain questions, but does not bar the trial of any issue involved in those questions, if the issue is raised at the instance of a defendant in a suit brought against him. Yenkataramanachariyal, v. There is no substantial distinction in regard to questions arising in execution, between the position of legal representatives added as parties to the suit before decree and legal representatives brought in after decree under S. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1832). All questions between them and decree-holder relating to execution must alike be disposed of under S. 244 of the Code.

Where the sons of a deceased Hindu debtor are added as legal representatives in the course of a suit and before the decree is pronounced, it is open to them to dispute in execution proceedings the liability of the ancestral properties for the debt of their father on the ground that the debt was tainted with immorality or illegality. They cannot insist on the decree-holder resorting to a fresh suit to enforce their pious obligation as Hindu sons to satisfy the debt out of the ancestral properties, because the question having arisen in execution proceedings between the decree-holder and themselves as parties to the suit, a separate suit is rendered inadmissible by the provisions of S. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882.

Where only some of several persons affected by a decree have appealed against it, the date of the appellate decree forms the basis from which the period of limitation, under Art. 179 of the Limitation Act, should be computed, even in the case of those who have not appealed against the original decree. Shivram Dhondu Pujara v. Where two of the judgment debtors executed a kustubundi bond in favour of the decree-holder hypothecating certain property in order to secure the decretal amount, and the bond further provided that, on failure of payment of the instalments, the decree-holder would be competent to execute the decree:

Held, that it was more than a mere agreement to give time within the meaning of S. 257 A. Civ. Pro. (168) S. 258—Payment out of Court—Duty of decree-holder receiving payment—Failure to certify payment to Court—Suit by judgment-debtor to recover amount—Damages.

The law casts on a decree-holder receiving payment of the judgment-debt out of Court, the duty of certifying such payment in satisfaction of the decree; and if he fails to do so, there is a breach of that duty. So, where a judgment debtor remitted money by Post Office Order, which was received by the decree holder who failed, however, to certify receipt of the amount and enter satisfaction in Court, it was held, that a suit would lie to recover the amount so paid, as damages, by reason of the defendant's failure

(179) Ss. 274 and 314—Sale proclamation—Service, it should be in every part of the property—Value, statement of, if material—“Property.”

The statement in the sale proclamation of a value which proves to be inadequate is an irregularity but not a material irregularity. Such statements are made without much consideration and it is well-known that purchasers do not take serious notice of any statement in the sale proclamation as to the value of the property to be sold.

S. 274 of the Civ. Pro. Code, does not require that the sale-proclamation should be served in each of the villages comprised in the property to be sold. The word “property” in that section evidently refers to each “lot” to be sold separately from the rest.

Though it is a sound rule to follow, i.e., to serve a separate proclamation in each of the villages embraced in the same process when they are at such a distance from one another that there is no moral certainty of communication to persons on or interested in the one of what is publicly done on the other, the fact, that the processes were not served in each does not necessarily constitute an infringement of the provisions of S. 274, Civ. Pro. Code (a) Moulvi Abdul Kashem v. Benode Lal Dhone, 12 C.W.N. 758.

Plaintiff derived his title to certain property both from the judgment-debtor and from the judgment-creditor. But he released his rights derived from the judgment-creditor, reserving the rights derived from the former.

It was held that the transfer by the judgment-creditor impliedly warranted that he had a good title to the property, and that the plaintiff, having accepted a title on the footing that the title under the execution-proceedings was good, was consequently estopped from disputing such title.

It was also held that, under the provisions of S. 276, Civ. Pro. Code, the plaintiff acquired no rights under the transfer from the judgment-debtor which could prevail against the attachment, and that his reservation of those rights gave him no title as against the parties who claimed by sale from the judgment-creditor, Maryadi Appala Narasiah v. Civil Procedure Code—(Continued).

An application seeking to have a sale set aside, on the ground that no notice had been issued to the applicant in the matter and that, in consequence, the property was sold at an undervalue, does not fall within the purview of S. 311 of the C. P. C., 1882; and an order dismissing the same is not covered by S. 312 of the Code. The order falls under S. 244 (c) of the Code, and is appealable as a decree.

The non-issue of notice to a party concerned is not a material irregularity in publishing or conducting the sale under S. 311 of the C. P. C., 1882. It is rather an irregularity in proceedings which are anterior to the publishing or the conduct of the sale.

The words "publishing or conducting" in S. 311 of the Code refer respectively to the proclamation of sale under S. 287 and to the action of the officer by whom the sale was held.

The circumstance that the decree has already been executed does not make S. 244 (c) of the Code inapplicable, where the question involved is none the less a "question relating to the satisfaction of the decree (a)." Parashram Hanmanta v. Balmukund Lachiram, 10 Bom. L. R. 752.

(912) S. 312, 316—Sale in execution—Confirmation—Title, when it accrues—Purchaser—Mortgage debt, if extinguished by judgment.

Although an auction-purchaser does not acquire a full title till the confirmation of the sale, yet, upon general principles, he may have equitable rights, arising out of his purchase, before the date of confirmation of the sale (a).

Scope of S. 316 of the Civ. Pro. Code examined.

Although the title to the property sold vests in the purchaser from the date of the confirmation, he does not acquire the right, title and interest, of the judgment-debtor, as they stand on that date. If he has purchased in execution of a money decree, he takes the property as it stood on the date of the attachment and is not affected by any subsequent dealings therewith on the part of the judgment-debtor. If he has purchased in execution of a decree on a mortgage, he takes the property as it stood on the date of the creation of the mortgage and persons who have subsequently become interested in different fragments of the equity of redemption cannot claim a superior title.

The mere fact that a judgment has been obtained on a mortgage does not extinguish the debt, and the mortgage continues as a lien till it is satisfied or the judgment is barred by the Statute of Limitations (b). Bhowani Koer v. Mathura Prasad, 7 C.L.J. 1.

(224) S. 351—Application by debtor for declaration of insolvency and appointment of receiver—Unfair preference to creditors—Disposition of property—Bad faith—Test of unfair preference—Presumption.

Where the object of a compromise entered into by a debtor with some of the creditors was to put an end to ruinous litigation, and not to benefit them, though it may be that the transaction was in fact beneficial to them, such a compromise does not amount to an act of bad faith within the meaning of S. 351.

It is sufficient to constitute an unfair preference, if preferring the creditor was the substantial, effectual or dominant view with which the debtor made the preference, and it is not necessary that it should have been the sole view (a). If a man, on the eve of bankruptcy makes a payment to a particular creditor, the presumption immediately arises that he makes that payment, with the dominant view of giving a preference to that creditor over his other creditors. There is no need for any evidence that that view was expressed in so many words by the bankrupt; it is a presumption which would arise from the transaction (b). The same principles apply to assignments of "actionable claim" which are "dispositions of property." But where dispositions of property were made by a debtor, not with the dominant view of preferring some of his creditors but with the object that he might continue to receive financial support from such of the creditors, and were made under pressure by these creditors, such circumstances negative a preference being the dominant view with which the dispositions were made. Angappa Chetty v. (228) S. 368—Application to bring on record the representative of a deceased defendant—Death of the defendant before the presentation of the plaint—Jurisdiction of Courts to substitute his legal representatives.

Although the rule, that, on the death of the defendant, the action abated and the Court lost jurisdiction over it, was abolished in England by the Common Law Procedure Act, it is still retained in a modified form in the Civ. Pro. Code, which provides in S. 368, that unless, the plaintiff applies within the prescribed time to substitute the representatives of the deceased defendant, the suit shall abate. Now only there is then nothing in the Court to

Consequently, when a plaint is presented by a plaintiff for the purpose of instituting a suit against a defendant, in accordance with the provisions of the Code, and it afterwards turns out that the defendant had died before the presentation of the plaint, the Court has no jurisdiction to substitute the representatives of the deceased as defendants and allow the suit to proceed against them. Yeerappa Chetty v. S. 373 of the Civ. Pro. C. is, 1892, contains a withdrawal not of the suit but from the suit, and such a withdrawal may be either with or without liberty to bring a fresh suit. If a party desires to withdraw from the suit with such liberty, then he must apply to the Court to permit him so to withdraw. If he does not desire to have that liberty, then he can withdraw of his own motion and no order of the Court is necessary.

Hence, where a plaintiff applies to the Court for permission to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit, and the Court is not minded to give the liberty, the proper order to pass is that the application for permission to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the subject-matter of the suit be dismissed with costs. It is not competent to the Court to order on such application that the suit may be withdrawn and the plaintiff to bear all costs and to pay all costs. Mahant Biharidasji v. Early in 1905, a redemption suit was filed in the Subordinate Judge's Court at Thana. The Dekhan Agriculturist's Relief Act was extended to the District in August 1905. At the trial, the Subordinate Judge took the accounts of the mortgage upon the footing of the application of Ss. 12 and 13 of the Act and gave the plaintiff the benefit of those provisions. There was an appeal: and whilst it was pending the case of 9 Bom. L.R. 917 was decided. The plaintiff then seeing that by reason of the above ruling the defendant's appeal was likely to succeed, applied to the Court for leave under S. 373 of Code of Civ. Procedure to withdraw the suit with liberty to file a fresh suit upon the same cause of action, in order that he might in the fresh suit obtain the benefit of Ss. 12 and 13 of the Act. This was allowed.

Held, (1) that the Judge in permitting the plaintiff in the stage of appeal to withdraw the suit with liberty to file a fresh suit under S. 373 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and thus get the benefit of an alteration in the substantive law, acted without jurisdiction.

Held, (2) that the suit should have been tried upon the footing that the Dekhan Agriculturist's Relief Act had no application between the parties.

An order giving leave to withdraw a suit and file a fresh suit on the same cause of action, on the ground that leave under cl. 12 of the Charter to institute it was granted by the Registrar, was held to be ultra vires, and the order was regarded as one only directing the plaintiff to be returned to the plaintiff (a).

S. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply except to cases where the suit is properly pending in a Court in which the leave was granted.

A plaint was filed well within the period of limitation. But, the leave to institute it under cl. 12 of the Charter was obtained from the Registrar. Under the practice laid down by the Court, it was by leave withdrawn, and on the same cause, a fresh suit, with proper leave, was then and there instituted but on a date when, under the usual circumstances, the suit would be barred by limitation.

Held, that the leave to withdraw was not granted under S. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that therefore, S. 374 of the Code could not operate as a bar to the fresh suit and that, under S. 14 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877),

The father of the plaintiffs mortgaged a portion of ancestral land to the defendant and, during the father's lifetime, the plaintiffs brought a suit against the mortgagee for a declaration that the mortgage should not affect their right of inheritance after their father's death. The parties came to terms and filed a razinama in Court by which it was agreed that the plaintiffs were to pay certain amount within one week and take possession of the mortgaged property. Upon this, the Court passed a decree in favour of the plaintiffs for possession of the land in accordance with the compromise. Held, that the compromise and the decree passed in accordance therewith were not limited, and did not relate to the subject-matter of the suit, which was merely for a declaration of the plaintiff's right to have the mortgage of the land by their father declared void and ineffectual, so far as their rights of succession were concerned, and not for the possession of the land. Held, that, therefore, the decree did not "relate to so much of the subject-matter of the suit as was dealt with by the compromise," and was not final within the purview of S. 375, and that an appeal, therefore, lay from that decree (a).

Held, that the proper course for the lower Court to adopt, in the circumstances, was to inform the parties that the terms of the compromise could not be embodied in a decree and if it appeared that the compromise was arrived at conditionally upon its being incorporated in the decree to proceed with the suit (b). Bhag Singh v. (217) Ss. 407 & 409—Suit in forma pauperis—Evidence taken for deciding limitation—Jurisdiction.

A Court has jurisdiction to decide the question of limitation under Ss. 407 & 409 of the Code (a). The Court before which an application is made to sue in forma pauperis has power not only to enquire into the question of pauperism, but also as to whether the applicant has a prima facie good and subsisting cause of action; and for the purpose it may take evidence under S. 409, Civ. Pro. Code. In case of doubt the Court whose permission is asked to sue in forma pauperis should grant the application if the applicant has made out that he is a pauper; but even in such a case, if the Court proceed to shift the matter, it cannot be said to exceed its jurisdiction, but at the most would be acting irregularly. E. N. Venkoba Rao v. Thunla Nataraja Chetty, 4 M. L. T. 302.

Where a person is permitted to sue as a pauper, but the suit is withdrawn under a compromise, and he gives up his claim to the subject of the suit, the suit must be deemed to have failed within the meaning of S. 412 of the Code. It did not succeed in attaining its object, and it is immaterial whether the plaintiff voluntarily gave it up or lost it by the decision of the Court (a). He is liable to pay the Court-fees payable by him if he was not allowed to sue as pauper.

(253) Ss. 440 and 443—Representation of minor plaintiff—Leave of Court—Certificated guardian not appointed—Compromise—Court to decide if for benefit of minors.

Where the mother of a minor is allowed by Court to act for her son, it is a fair inference that she was appointed guardian by the Court, even though there is no formal order in the record so appointing her.

Where the Court acts in contravention of S. 443, Civ. Pro. Code, and, overlooking the claims of the certificated guardian, appoints somebody else guardian of the minor, it is a more irregularity. (a)

Even though there be no order which states in so many terms, that the Court has considered the compromise and held it to be for the benefit of the minors, it must be assumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the Court did its duty in the matter. Midnapore Zemindari Co. v. established—Consideration for sale higher than the amount necessary to raise.

A minor plaintiff filed a suit, through his mother as his next friend, against his father, and the case was decreed. The defendant appealed making the mother as guardian of the minor plaintiff-respondent. A question was raised whether the mother could continue to act as guardian, notwithstanding the provisions of S. 457 of the Civ. Pro. Code. The Chief Court did not consider it necessary to take the matter up of its own motion, when the appellant elected to proceed with the appeal as brought.

Where necessity for sale of ancestral property by a father is established, no declaration should be given in favour of sons that the sale would not affect their interests after the father's death, for the mere fact that the property was sold at a higher price by a small sum than it was necessary for the father to raise. Wadhwa Mal v. A compromise of a suit is not one of the acts contemplated in S. 29 of the Guardian and Wards Act; hence a certificated guardian can compromise a suit without obtaining the sanction of the District Judge. The statutory provision for safe-guarding the interests of minors in suits, is contained in S. 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

The Court in sanctioning a compromise on behalf of an infant under S. 462 of the Code of Civil Procedure, should record the fact that the application was made to it by the next friend or guardian, that the terms of the compromise were considered by it, and should in terms state that the question whether the compromise was for the benefit of the infant was considered. From the mere fact that the Court passed the decree in accordance with the compromise, it cannot be inferred that any of those steps preliminary and necessary to the making of the decree had been taken by the Court (a).

Where a decree is passed on adjudication, no separate suit lies to set aside the decree except on the ground of fraud, but where it is passed simply upon a compromise, a suit lies upon grounds other than that of fraud (b).

Where the minors were defendants represented by their mother and guardian, in the original suit as also in the review petition, and the application for review was discharged with the express direction that the applicant's proper remedy was by way of suit and not by way of review, a suit by the minors through a new next friend, their mother and former guardian ad litem being impleaded as a defendant, lies to set aside the decree on grounds other than that of fraud (c).

Where the plaintiffs valued their claim in the Munsiff's Court at Rs. 500, and issue was taken on the point, (which if decided in favour of the defendant would have ousted the Munsiff's jurisdiction), but no evidence was adduced, there was no waiver of jurisdiction and the High Court can interfere on second appeal (d). Biku Halwai v. - contract or refer to arbitration on minor's behalf—guardian ad litem—Right to give relief to illiterate women imposed upon—Pleader and client.

The mother of a Mahomedan minor, not being the legal guardian of his estate, has no power to make a binding contract on behalf of the minor; nor can she pass a valid reference to arbitration on behalf of the minor.

But, if she be duly appointed as the Guardian ad litem of the minor, and makes an application under S. 525 to have an award filed in Court, and a decree is passed in terms of the award, the minor is bound by it, unless good cause be shown to set aside the decree.

Such a decree is not a nullity on the ground that previous sanction of the Court was not obtained under S. 462, C.P.C.

S. 462, C.P.C., applies only to an agreement or compromise entered into by a next friend or guardian for a suit. It can have no application to an agreement to refer to arbitration where no suit is pending. If an award is filed under S. 525, and a guardian ad litem is duly appointed, but shows no cause why the award should not be filed, and allows judgment to be given in terms of the award, then also S. 462 has no application, for there is no agreement or compromise. But where a guardian ad litem is actually a party to an application to have the award filed, that is a party to an agreement that no objections shall be filed on either side, then sanction of the Court under S. 462 becomes necessary. And if such sanction is not obtained, the Court has power to set aside the decree so far as the minor is concerned.

Though the Court will always be ready to give relief to illiterate women who have been imposed upon, yet it must observe the ordinary recognized rules of law and procedure in granting such relief.

In dealing with questions arising between pleader and client, the client must be identified with his pleader, and suffer from the consequences of his dishonesty or want of skill. Mir Main Ghulam Hyderkhan v. Mussamat Hayat Khatun, 1 Sind L.R. 160.

The practice as to the form of an order when a memorandum of objections has not been stamped and has not been moved, does not seem to be uniform, but orders dismissing the memorandum in such circumstances have been made and there is jurisdiction to make the order. ing an injunction. It is not to be assumed that the use of the word "disobedience" in the paragraph entitled the Court to treat a breach of the terms of an injunction as an offence and to punish such offence of its own motion. The Court can act under this section only when set in motion by the party, who deems himself aggrieved. (g).

In a suit to cancel an instrument of sale of paddy, the Court issued an injunction restraining the defendant from selling the paddy specified in the document.

The injunction was served on the defendant and afterwards the suit was decided in favour of the plaintiff, who afterwards presented a petition complaining that, while the injunction remained in force, the defendants had sold some of the paddy, and asked for sanction under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, to prosecute defendant under S. 188, Penal Code. The Judge caused a preliminary inquiry to be made and then called on defendant to show cause why he should not be committed under S. 493, C. P. C., and he committed the defendant (present appellant) to the Criminal jail for four months, the order being passed explicitly as a punishment for disobeying the injunction.

There is no authority for the view that arbitrators can take cognizance only of claims in respect of which the Regular Courts will give relief. In deciding whether an award should be enforced or not, the Courts have only to look to the provisions of Ss. 520, 521, Civ. Pro. Code and determine "whether any of the grounds mentioned or referred to in those sections is shown against the award. The fact that the applicant could not have sued the respondent for damages cannot be regarded as "an objection to the legality of the award." The Buddhist Dhammathats provide for the payment of compensation for seduction, and though such cases are not now decided according to Buddhist Law, compensation for seduction is still frequently paid by private arrangement between the parties or their families, and there is nothing immoral in such an arrangement. According to English Law, the consideration of past cohabitation and previous seduction does not make a bond void. Such consideration is not held good so as to support a promise not under seal, but it is not illegal. Mi Hla Waing v. Nga

In a suit pending in the Court of a Munsiff, the matter in dispute between the original parties was referred to arbitration. To this arbitration a third person who had been brought upon the record as a defendant under section 32 of the Code of Civil Procedure was not a party. An award was made dismissing the plaintiff's claim, but on an objection being preferred to the effect that all the parties to the suit were not parties to the arbitration, the Munsiff set aside the award, proceeded with the suit, and on the merits granted the plaintiff a decree. An appeal against this decree by the defendant was dismissed. Both Courts found that the defendant who had been added under section 32 had no interest in the subject matter of the suit. The plaintiff appealed, on the ground, inter alia that "the Courts below had no jurisdiction to set aside the award so far as the parties to this appeal are concerned."

Held that an appeal lay, and was not barred (a). Ramiawan v. Nawal Singh, A. W.N. (1908), 242=5 A.L.J. 644=4 M.L.T. 400.

(289) S. 539—Public charitable trust—Breach—suit—Jurisdiction—Court in which suit should be brought.

Under S. 539 of the Civ. Pro. Code, one of two conditions must exist in order to bring a suit within its purview. Either there must be an alleged breach of any express or constructive trust created for public, charitable or religious purposes, or there must be some direction of the Court deemed necessary for the administration of any such trust. If in any suit one of these two conditions exist, it must be filed in the Court (mentioned in the section) either by the Advocate General or by two or more persons interested in the trust, with the sanction of the Advocate General previously obtained.

It is not necessary to such a suit that a relief should be claimed of the description of the clauses (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) in that section. These reliefs are not exhaustive and any other relief may be claimed in such a suit. Amritram Harinarayan v. Ramji Vallabh, 10 Bom. L.R. 87 = 3 M.L.T. 172.

Statutes imposing restrictions upon the subject's right of suit must be construed strictly. Hence a pre-existing right of suit cannot be held to be taken away by the words of S. 539, C.P.C., those words being merely permissive or directory, and not mandatory.

Under Hindu Law, a member of the Hindu community, interested in a public "tkana" or place of worship, can maintain a suit in respect of such "tkana." And no certificate of the Advocate-General is necessary under S. 539, C. P. C.

Questions relating to jurisdiction (as, the question that the certificate of the Advocate-General is necessary under S. 539, C. P. C., for the institution of the suit) may be raised in second appeal, though waived in the lower Courts.

In 1880, Z leased certain property to the defendant; in 1892 the successor of Z granted a lease of the same property to the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued the defendant, and the then representative of his lessor for a declaration that the lease to the defendant by Z was invalid and for possession. The Court gave him a decree for possession, subject to the payment of a certain sum to the defendant as compensation for improvements. The defendant gave up possession of the property on receipt of the compensation money in March, 1895. The representative of the lessor proffered an appeal against the decree making the defendant a party. The High Court in August, 1897, held that the lease to the defendant by Z was valid and dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

Held, that, under S. 544, C. P. C., the decree of the High Court, of August, 1897, enured for the benefit of the defendant also; that the defendant was entitled to possession under his lease of 1880, which was never determined; that the refunding of the compensation money by the defendant was not a condition precedent to his obtaining relief by way of restitution; and that he was entitled to ask that the account might be adjusted by setting off mesne profits against the compensation money, received by the plaintiff from the time he had been wrongfully in possession up to the date of the High Court decree (August, 1897).

Held, further, that, the relief claimed by the defendant being in the nature of equitable relief,—he being bound to do equity in seeking equity, it was not equitable that he should be permitted for his own convenience, because, at the time his right to relief arose, i.e., in August, 1897, he was unable or unwilling to refund the purchase money, to postpone applying for the relief until the mesne profits had amounted to a sufficient sum to wipe off the amount of the compensation money, and that the accounts should be adjusted on the footing that the defendant had done what he ought to have done, viz., applied for restitution on the dismissal of the plaintiff's suit by the High Court in August, 1897. Erat Madhavan Man-nadi v. (303) S. 559—Decree made against wrong party—Appeal by that party—Decree-holder alone made respondent—Appellate Court could not bring on record persons against whom the Court of first instance should have made decree.

Looking at the language of S. 559, C.P.C. apart from authority, it would appear to have been inserted to protect parties to the suit who had not been made respondents in the appeal, from being prejudiced by modifications made behind their backs in the decree under appeal. The party whom it is sought to bring on is required to be interested in the result of the appeal, that is to say, he must be shown to be interested in the result of the appeal before he is brought on, for once he is brought he may be said to acquire an interest as a result of being brought on. When a defendant has been exonerated and there is no appeal against so much of the decree as exonerates him, no decree can be passed against him in an appeal by any other party to a suit as he is no party to such appeal, and he cannot be said to be interested in the result of such appeal by another party unless the decree sought to be obtained against the respondents in the appeal would have the effect of prejudicing him in some way or other. A decree having been made against a wrong party, it is not competent for the appellate Court, in an appeal by that party in which the decree-holder alone is made respondent, to bring on the record those persons against whom the Court of first instance should have made the decree. Subramaniam Chetty v. revise the order declaring that the objection was insufficiently stamped; and the memo of objections was, in consequence, dismissed for default. The appeal against the Appellate order was also insufficiently stamped. Held:

That the order, rejecting the objection as under-stamped after default made to pay the duty ordered, is an "order" and not a "decree"; and it is an order against which no appeal is provided by the Civ. Pro. Code.

Even if it be taken to be a decree, and appealable as such, the High Court, in appeal, should not interfere, unless it is established that there was in fact no default or that there was sufficient cause for excusing the default.

The failure of the party to obey an order for the filing of additional Court-fees is a default, irrespective of the legal merits of the order, and it affords no sufficient ground for excusing such default, that the party considered the order to be wrong.

The procedure of a Court cannot be regulated by what may be the opinion of a party or by what he may hope to establish against the opinion of the original Court in appeal.

There having been a wilful disobedience of an order in this case, the dismissal was but proper.

If a party feels himself aggrieved by any stamp-order, he may, within the period allowed for compliance therewith, move a higher Court against it but if he has not succeeded in getting the order set aside by the last date fixed for obedience, the party must obey the order, or subject himself to a valid disposal of the case on the ground of his default.

S. 582 A of Civ. Pro. Code has no application, inasmuch as the under-stamping was deliberate, and not due to any mistake; and this is not a case in which it will be proper to allow any extension of time under S. 5 of the Limitation Act.

The appeal to the High Court is under-stamped. (a).

No opportunity need, however, be given to the appellant for making good the deficiency in the High Court, for two reasons, namely,

(1) the appeal does not lie, and

(2) it could not now be stamped within the period allowed by the law of limitation for its due institution in the Court. Ghasiram v. Jhingwa, 4 N.L.R. 168.

(315) S. 562—Remand—Preliminary point, what is—Liability for compensation—Amount of damages.

Where by reason of the decision on one or more of the issues recorded in the case, there has been no necessity for the consideration of the other issues, the suit was dismissed, on a preliminary point. The appellate Court finding that the issues considered were wrongly decided and the suit wrongly dismissed, remanded the case for disposal of the suit after consideration of the remaining issues :

Held, the suit was properly remanded under S. 562.

There were two questions in the case, viz., the liability of the defendant to compensate the plaintiffs, and the amount of damages. The Court of first instance held the plaintiffs were not entitled to damages and dismissed the suit on this preliminary point. On appeal, the Court of appeal held the plaintiff was entitled to damages and remanded the suit for ascertainment of damages :

Held, the remand was proper (a). Salim Sheikh v. Nasir Khan, 8 C.L.J. 159.

When a Court of first instance decided the suit, not upon a preliminary point, but on the merits, the Lower Appellate Court remanded the case under S. 562, C.P.C., for having a new plan prepared. Held that the order of remand was illegal. (a)

Even though the plaintiff was not prejudiced by the order of remand, the High Court had jurisdiction to interfere with the remand.

The illegal remand could not be treated as a mere irregularity, (b) and S. 578, C.P.C., has no application.

The illegality is not cured by the plaintiff's consent or waiver.

Failure on plaintiff's part to appeal under Cl. (28) of S. 588 cannot be treated as consent or waiver, (c) as he had the alternative remedy of taking objection to the remand in second appeal (d).

Nor was it in the power of the plaintiff to prevent the trial, after remand, before the first Court from going on.

The High Court had no alternative but to set aside all the proceedings subsequent to the remand—the decree of the Lower Appellate Court, the second decree of the first Court and the remand order of the Lower Appellate Court and to remand the original appeal to the Lower Appellate Court for disposal according to law. Palin Chetty v. When, in second appeal, it appears that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court does not substantially comply with the requirements of S. 574, C. P. If the judge of the Court to which the case is remanded is the judge who heard the appeal in the first instance, and if he considers that he can properly dispose of the remanded case without a re-hearing of the appeal, the writing of a judgment which satisfies the requirements of S. 574, without re-hearing the appeal, would be a compliance with the order that the case be disposed of according to law. But in all cases, where the judge of the Court to which the case is remanded, is not the judge who heard the appeal in the first instance, and in all cases where the judge of the Court is the judge who heard the appeal in the first instance, but he does not consider that he can properly dispose of the remanded case without a re-hearing of the appeal, a re-hearing is neces-

In a suit on a mortgage bond, the defence of the contesting defendant was that the bond was executed by collusion between the plaintiff and certain other defendants who did not appear. The Lower Appellate Court recited that the Court of first instance had found that the plaintiff was entitled to no relief, and then concluded as follows:—"The point in dispute is a question of fact and I see no reason to differ from the finding of the Lower Court. The appeal is dismissed."

Held, that the appellate judgment did not comply with the provisions of S. 574, Civ. Pro. Code. The points for determination were set out, but the reasons for the decision were not stated.

Held, also, that the facts of the case demanded fuller treatment than they received, and the defect was not cured by the provisions of S. 578 of the Code.

Damage was caused to two members of a firm by the same wrongful act of the defendant. The two members brought a suit as co-plaintiffs for damages. But the plaint was so framed that each plaintiff was suing, individually, for the injury to his personal reputation and credit. Held, that, in such a case, each plaintiff had a different cause of action, and that the joint suit was not maintainable. But the two plaintiffs might, had they so chosen, have instituted an action for the joint damage suffered by the firm.

Though it is open to plaintiffs in England to join in one suit distinct causes of action under certain circumstances, there is no such privilege conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure. Under the Code, the plaintiff can do so only in respect of the same cause of action.

The powers of the Courts are derived in India entirely from Legislative enactments, and their jurisdiction does not commence till a suit has been instituted in the manner allowed by law. Hence, misjoinder of causes of action is not cured by the provisions of S. 578, C. P. C. Mangham Mal Rochiram v. Michuma Rowachand, 1 Sind. L. R. (Civil), 181.

(337) S. 586—Second appeal—Pecuniary limit—Practice—Issue—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), S. 231—Contract by Agent with third parties, where principal is undisclosed—"Discloses himself."

S. 586 of the Civ. Pro. Code contemplates rather the original character of the suit than the character which it may subsequently assume by operation of findings of the Courts.

Where the rights in a case have to be determined by reference to the words of the legislature, then those words should be used for the purpose of the issues so far as circumstances permit.

S. 231 of the Indian Contract Act deals with the rights (a) of the principal and (b) of the third party in cases where the contract is entered into by the agent without disclosing his principal. The first clause refers to the general cases where the rule is that the third party shall have as against the undisclosed principal the same rights which he would have had as against the agent if the agent had been the principal. The second clause deals with the particular case where the principal discloses himself before the contract is completed. The second clause should be read as governed by the preceding clause.

The words "discloses himself" in S. 231 of the Indian Contract Act must be construed strictly. The third party's right to repudiate the contract arises only where the principal himself makes the disclosure; it cannot arise where the disclosure is made by some other person or the information reaches him from some other source. Lakshumandas Narayandas v. Where a suit to annul incumbrances by the purchaser of a putni at a sale for its own arrears was dismissed by the Subordinate Judge, on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove the service of notices under S. 167, Bengal Tenancy Act, but the High Court, on appeal held that the service of notices was proved and remanded the suit for the trial of the other issues in the case.

Held, that though the order of the High Court was in form an order of remand, it finally decided the cardinal point in the case, viz, whether the notices were properly served or not. The main question at issue in a suit for partition of movable and immovable property being whether the family was or was not joint in title and interest, the defendants, on being asked what they would call evidence to prove, set down a series of facts which they alleged that they could prove, and which, they contended, indicated that the family was, at the time of suit, joint as to property as well as in other respects. The plaintiff admitted the facts so alleged, and the parties therefore summoned no witnesses on either side. Some documentary evidence, however, was put in, mainly consisting of the will of the late head of the family.

Held that the finding on these data as to what was the status of the family was a finding of fact merely and could involve no "substantial question of law" within the meaning of section 596 of the Code. Parotam Rao Tanjia v. Janki Bai, A.W.N. (1908) 7 3 M. L. T. 169.

Under S. 622, C.P.C., the High Court can interfere in revision with the order of the Court below only when the latter has acted illegally or without jurisdiction, and the fact that it may have been wrong on a question of law is not a reason for the High Court to interfere. Subramania Othuvay v. (350) S. 622—Charter Act, S 15—Analogous appeals in superior and inferior Courts—Duty of inferior Court to await decision of superior Court.

The High Court has powers either under S. 622, C. P. C. or if not, under S 15 of the Charter Act to interfere in cases where the lower Courts have not acted correctly in accordance with law.

Where a plaintiff failed to secure the production of an important document from the records of another Court though he took all reasonable steps for that purpose and the suit was disposed of by both the Court of first instance and the Appellate Court without reference to that document the High Court in revision set aside the judgments of both the Courts.

When appeals preferred in analogous cases are pending, some in an inferior and others in a superior appellate Court, the inferior Court of Appeal would exercise a wise discretion to await the decision of the superior appellate Court. Mohant Gobind Ramanuja Das v. A complaint made by letter by a litigant to the Subordinate Judge charging a pleader with professional misconduct was "filed" by the Subordinate Judge; but on a similar complaint being sent to the District Judge, the District Judge having inquired into its authenticity, sent it to the Subordinate Judge for inquiry and report. The Subordinate Judge thereupon instituted an inquiry under section 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act, as a result of which he granted sanction to the Pleader to prosecute for perjury one of the witnesses who had appeared before him in the course of the inquiry, and this order was confirmed by the District Judge.

Held that the High Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with the order of the Subordinate Judge under either section 195 or section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure; nor could it interfere under Section 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, inasmuch as the Subordinate Judge (though he possibly mistook the meaning of the District Judge's order addressed to him) had jurisdiction to inquire into the truth of the charge made against the pleader. *Mahar Hasan v. The Transfer of Property Act gives no authority to a landlord to enhance the rent of his tenant during the term of the lease, whether it be in perpetuity or for a definite term.

The word maurasidar does not convey the idea of a right to fixity of rent; durmaurasid mokarari implies fixity of rent.

The right of enhancement is not an incident of every contract of Tenancy.

Compensation—(Concluded).

In a proceeding for appointment under the Land Acquisition Act, no abatement of rent can be made without the consent of the parties.

The compensation is to be apportioned between the parties according to the value of the interest which each of them parts with. The Zemindar has a right to the fixed rent and the loss he sustained is of so much of his rent. Any other possible injury, such as the chance of the putnidar throwing up the land and its being diminished in value by what has been taken by Government, and still remaining, as it did, liable to pay the same revenue, is not appreciable and cannot be taken into account. If there is no abatement of the rent and the putnidar continues liable to pay to the zemindar the same rent as he had to pay before, there would be nothing for which the zemindar is to receive compensation. The same rule applies to the case of a lease in perpetuity with fixity of rent (a).

The burden of proof is on the zemindar to make out his claim and show as to the value of a particular contingency to him (b). Satis Chunder Chattopadhyaya v. Rai Jatindra Nath Chowdury, 7 C.L.J. 284.

Held, that when a Judge signs and dates a judgment, and the parties lawfully compromise the case, and the compromise has been brought to his notice before he actually delivers the judgment to the parties in open Court, the Judge has no power to decline to after it, but is rather bound to decide it in accordance with the terms of the compromise.

Compromise—(Continued).

Held, also, that it is illegal to sign and date a judgment before it is actually delivered in the presence of the parties in open Court.

Held further, that even after a complete legal judgment there is no prohibition for the parties to come to any lawful terms they wish in respect of the subject-matter in dispute. A guardian appointed under Act VIII of 1890 can at any time, withdraw from the guardianship and, if he does so, the Court should proceed to act under S. 40 of the Act and discharge him Guranditta Mal v. Radha Kishen, 67 P.W.R. 1907.

Pro. Code (XIV of 1882), S. 375—Suit nature and scope of.*

The provisions of S. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) do not apply to proper judicial proceedings whether consisting of pleadings filed by the parties or of orders made by Court when registration would be otherwise necessary.

The question whether any particular term of a petition of compromise incorporated in a decree, made under the power given by S. 375 of the Civ. Pro. Code, relates to the suit or is covered by its subject-matter must be decided from the frame of the suit, the relief claimed, and the relief allowed by the decree on adjustment by lawful agreement. The mutual connection of the different parts of the relief granted by a consent decree is an important element for consideration in each case in deciding whether any portion of the relief is within the scope of the suit. No hard and fast rule can be laid down, each case being governed by its own facts.

A decree passed on a compromise cannot be regarded as ultra vires simply because it goes beyond the subject-matter of the suit and contains other conditions; if these other conditions are the considerations for the compromise of the subject-matter of the suit, they must be incorporated in the decree (b).

The Transfer of Property Act contemplates a difference between mortgages and charges, though, no doubt, the mode of granting relief and the nature of the relief that may be granted are similar, because a decree for sale is the only relief that may be granted for the enforcement of a charge.

A mortgage is a transfer of an interest in specific immovable property; a charge only secures payment of money out of that property. Either may be created by act of parties, but when the "transaction does not amount to a mortgage," and does not therefore operate as a transfer, it is a charge on immovable property. A document which only gives a right to payment out of a particular property without transferring it, creates a charge.

If an instrument is expressly stated to be a mortgage and gives the power of realization of the mortgage-money by sale of the mortgaged premises, it should be held to be a mortgage. The fact that the necessary formalities of due execution were wanting would not convert the mortgage into a charge. If, on the other hand, the instrument is not, on the face of it a mortgage, but simply creates a lien, or directs the realization of money from a particular property, without reference to sale, it creates a charge (d). Gobinda Chandra Paul v. Dwarka Nath Paul, 7 C.L.J. 492 = 12 C.W.N. 849 = 35 C. 837.

—3—(of Deeds).

(1) Maintenance deed, construction of— "Putra Prudradi santan," meaning of—Intention.

In construing a deed, the question is, not what the parties to a deed may have intended to do by entering into the deed, but what is the meaning of the words used in that deed. (a).

The words "Putra Pautradri santan" (sons, grandsons and the like issue) have a definite and well-ascertained meaning and mean all the heirs, male and female, though the two heirs expressly mentioned are the first two of the male heirs (b).

The word "santan" means issue both male and female (c).

In a deed of maintenance, the grantor used the following words. "Upon your death, your sons, grandsons and the like issue, that is, your male successors in the descending line shall continue to get the same."

Held, that the words "your male successors in the descending line" are not explanatory, but are used in a restrictive sense to exclude female heirs.

Held, on a construction of the deed, that, upon the death of the wife leaving a daughter, no right to the maintenance allowance accrued to the husband. Kishori Mohan Sanyal v. Shilb Chandra Lahiri, 7 C.L.J. 291.

(2) Deeds executed in the mofussil—Liberal construction—Charge—Intention to make land security for payment of debt—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), S. 100.

The form of expression, the literal sense, is not to be so much regarded as the real meaning of the parties which the transaction discloses."

Where having regard to all the circumstances of a transaction, there remains no doubt that a document is sufficient and does show an intention to make the land security for the payment of the money mentioned therein, the document deed create a charge. Janardana Vishnu v. (3) Grant—Construction of—Forfeiture—Right of re-entry.

T granted a miras taluq to his widowed daughter at a rent, for her life, and on her death to her adopted son, if she adopted one, for life, and after him to his sons, grandsons, &c., by right of inheritance, in the male line but without any power of alienating the property. In case the grantee adopted no son or her adopted son died without any heir in the male line, the property was to revert to the grantor or his representative. It was also provided that the property could not be attached or sold for any debt incurred by the grantee or her adopted son, grandson, &c. In case of attachment or sale, it would be void and the property would come into the khas possession of the grantor or his representative.

Held, the grant did not create an absolute estate in the daughter. At the same time the grantor had no right to re-enter in case of a voluntary alienation. That right was limited to cases of attachment or sale.

When therefore the grantee made a gift of the property to her adopted son, held, the gift was void, but the grantor or his representative

- (4) Government Kist—Enhancement—Whether mortgagor or mortgagee bound to pay—S. 76, Transfer of Property Act—“Contract to the contrary”.

Where the question was whether the amount of enhancement in the Government kist was to be paid by the mortgagor or the mortgagee and turned on the construction of the kanom or mortgage deed, which contained these terms: =“In consideration of an advance of Rs. 79, 580, the mortgagee is to hold possession for 12 years, of land yielding a pattam of 80 paras of paddy and Rs. 40 and is to pay a pura pad of 12 paras of paddy and 12 fanams and 50 coconut leaves having deducted interest and Government revenue:”

Held, that there was nothing in the deed to throw on the mortgagor the burden of providing the enhancement in the Government revenue, there being no contract to the contrary within the meaning of S. 76 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that the law required the mortgagee to bear the burden if he was not relieved of it by his contract. M. Pro.

Code, Ss. 272 and 470—Interpleader—Attachment of debt—Running of interest not stopped.

Where a debtor is ready to pay the debt due from him, but, owing to the death of the creditor and the absence of a legal representative, there is none to whom the payment can be made, the interest payable under the terms of the contract stops running until the appointment of a proper representative of the deceased creditor, to whom the payment can be made with safety, and who can give a proper discharge for the debt.

At Common Law, when interest is payable by the terms of the contract, it runs ordinarily up to date of payment or legal tender (a)

Where interest is payable, not under the terms of a contract, but by way of damages, the Courts will deprive the representative of a deceased creditor of interest, when he has omitted to take out administration and thereby prevented the debtor from paying (b).—Obiter.

When interest is payable under a contract up to the date of payment of the principal, payment of interest, being in performance of the contract, must be governed by the provisions of the Contract Act relating to the performance of contracts.

The word "promisee" in S. 3, Contract Act, includes the representative of a deceased promisee.

Where the promisee died, leaving a will but without naming executors, unless and until such executor is appointed, there can be no representative of the deceased to whom performance can be made.

When a debtor requires a representative of his deceased creditor to come and receive payment, and further makes the payment conditional on his producing a succession certificate, the tender so made is not proper, as it does not fulfil the conditions mentioned in S. 38 of the Contract Act (c).

By S. 2 (c) of the Contract Act, the word "promisee" means "the person accepting the proposal," only unless a contrary intention appears from the context; and so in S. 67 of the Act the word "promisee" must include a person interested in the estate of a creditor who has died leaving a will but without executors, as, otherwise, between the date of the death of the deceased and the appointment of a legal representative, there will be no promisee at all within the meaning of the section.

Under S. 67 of the Contract Act a debtor has to show that his non-performance (failure to pay) has been caused by the absence of reasonable facilities for paying, and to successfully do this, he has to prove that he had the money ready, and was only prevented from paying it by the absence of reasonable facilities.

Under S. 67 of the Act, a debtor to the estate of a deceased creditor is, like any other promisor, entitled to be afforded reasonable facilities for the performance of his contract; and he cannot be said to be afforded "reasonable facilities, if no one is provided, "within a reasonable time," to whom payment may be made with safety; and such "reasonable time" must be calculated from the time when the debtor intimates his desire to pay, rather than from the time of the death of the deceased creditor.

Where a debtor, not aware of the will left by his deceased creditor, gives notice of his readiness to pay to one who would, had there been no will, have succeeded to the estate of the deceased, such notice is sufficient and proper lend him and afterwards to purchase his property, held, that, in a suit to recover the property upon the ground that the contract was by reason of his minority void, the plaintiff was liable in equity to make restitution of the benefit he had obtained (a). In a case like this the liability attaches to a minor, not on the ground of estoppel, but on the ground that an infant shall not take advantage of his own fraud (b).

In case of any litigation regarding will propounded, facilities can be afforded by getting appointed an administrator pendente lite, who could give a discharge to the debtor.

A debtor is not bound to file an interpleader suit under S. 470, C.P.C., for stopping the running of interest.

An attachment of a debt, made under S. 272, C.P.C., does not stop interest running thereon. Administrator-General of Madras v. Jaghirdhar of Arni, 4 M.L.T. 335.

Per Richards, J. :—Even assuming that an infant is liable for fraudulent misrepresentation in an action for deceit, and that the fraud of an infant may be set up as a defence when the infant seeks to set aside a transaction induced by his fraud, a fair test, in a case when the infant sues to recover property sold by him, for awarding restitution of the money to the vendee, is to consider whether the defendant vendee on the evidence could succeed if he were suing as plaintiff in a suit for damages for fraudulent misrepresentation. The vendees in the present case, not having proved that they were induced to enter into the contract of sale by the fraudulent misrepresentation of the minor plaintiff, were not entitled to restitution of money (c).

Obiter :—Per Banerji, J. :—“ I do not deem it necessary to express any opinion on the point, although it seems to me to be difficult to hold that in no case would the doctrine of estoppel be applicable to infants.”

Where a professional money-lender sued a person in difficulties for money, on a pro-note, the consideration being a much smaller sum than that mentioned in the pro-note, it was held that, at the time of executing the note, the defendant was clearly under the plaintiff's thumb, and a hard, unconscionable and exorbitant bargain was driven with him taking advantage of his necessities, and that the plaintiff could recover only the sum actually advanced by him, but with a high rate of interest (e.g., 18 p.c.), as he ran considerable risk when he lent out the money. Ram Das v. (8) S. 16, cl. 1—Undue influence—Loan borrowed by a person in urgent need of money—Lender imposing terms on the loan—Promise to pay time-barred debt with interest—Unconscionable bargains—Fraud—Coercion.

Under S. 16, cl. 1 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, where two persons enter into a contract, first there must be subsisting between them some relation of the kind described in the clause; and, secondly, the dominating position arising out of that relation must have been used by the party holding that position to secure an unfair advantage over the other party.

When a man, who is in urgent need of money on account of his poverty and pecuniary difficulties, asks for a loan from another, the latter is in one sense in a position to dominate the will of the former by proposing his own terms and getting the borrower to agree to them. The borrower's necessity is in such cases the measure of the terms agreed to. That is a feature of every contract of money lending, where the borrower is a man without credit and the lender is exposing his money to considerable risk. But that is not the vague kind of relation and domination contemplated by the plain terms of cl. 1 of S. 16 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.

There are well-known relations such as those of guardian and ward, father and son, patient and medical adviser, solicitor and client, trustee and cestui que trust and the like, which plainly fall within cl. 1 of S. 16 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872. Where no such specific relations exist and the parties are at arm's length, undue influence may be exerted but its existence must be proved by evidence; and in such cases, the nature of the benefit, or the age, capacity, or health, of the party on whom the undue influence is alleged to have been exerted are of great importance. In short, the test is, confidence reposed by one party and betrayed by the other, which means there must be an element of fraud or coercion, under either of which the acts constituting undue influence must range themselves.

The term "unfair advantage" in cl. 1 of S. 16 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, is used as meaning an advantage obtained by unrighteous means.

A promise to pay a time-barred debt is valid. The same principle applies to a promise to pay such a debt with interest.

A Court of equity will not set aside a contract merely because it flows from moral, not legal, obligations, unless it is proved that the defendant was forced, tricked or misled into it by the plaintiff by means of fraud, using that word not merely in the restricted sense of actual deceit but in the larger sense of an unconscientious use of power arising out of certain circumstances and conditions and showing that the defendant being victimised by the plaintiff's unfair and improper conduct was unable to understand what he was doing. Ganesh Narayan v. Whole consideration—One single consideration cannot be separated to validate an agreement.

Pending a criminal charge against L, his pleader stood bail for him; and as an indemnity for the bail took from him a sale deed and a rent note regarding his house, in the name of the plaintiff. The consideration for the sale deed was a sum of Rs. 8,000, of which Rs. 5,000 were the indemnity for the bail-bond and the remaining Rs. 3,000 represented the advances to be made thereafter by the plaintiff. The plaintiff sued on the rent note to recover from L the sum of Rs. 2,000 as rent.—

Held, that the contract for indemnifying the pleader for his bail bond was illegal and this illegality rendered the sale-deed void in law (a) that the rent note was tainted with the same illegality which affected the sale-deed and could not stand on any separate footing, that the agreement was an indivisible agreement, part of a single consideration for one object was unlawful, and, therefore, the whole agreement was void under S 24 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872.

Held, further that the deposit allowed under S. 513, Cr.P.C., is allowed in substitution only of the bond which the principal himself would otherwise execute, not in substitution of any bond which his surety executes. Laxmanlal K Pandit v. Mulshankar Pitambardas, 10 Bom. L.R. 553 = 32 B. 449.

Held, that monies paid on wagering or Badni Contracts are not recoverable, and, that an agent, before he can recover from his principal the amount claimed for losses in wagering contracts, entered into under the principal's instructions, must prove either actual payment on his principal's behalf, or that a liability has been incurred which is enforceable by law, and that a surrender of claim to profits made under a Badni Contract does not constitute an actual payment.

Held also, that an agent is entitled to recover actual expenses, which he has incurred out of his own pocket, under the direct instructions of his principal, and on his behalf, but the onus of proving this lies heavily on him (the agent).

Held further, that, in the present case, the plaintiff failed to prove that he was acting as an agent, and that the allegation of agency was made for obvious reasons as is generally done in the Badni Contracts to evade the consequences of S. 30 of the Indian Contract Act, IX of 1872 (a). Kashmiri Mall v. Where both parties to a contract are agreed as to the sale and purchase of a particular parcel of goods, the mistake of the defendant as to their quality does not invalidate the contract (a).

The Contract Act, 1872, does not sanction or permit an action for breach of contract of sale, save where specific damage is proved to have resulted from the breach. Section 73 of the Act not only confines the right of relief to the party who suffers, but provides how his loss is to be measured, what it is to include and what to exclude and what circumstances the Court must take into account in estimating the loss.

Hence, in cases of breach of contract, it is not permissible to the aggrieved party to file a suit to recover the price of the goods in dispute. Under the Act, the aggrieved party must sell the refused goods and then seek to recover the loss if any accruing on such sale. P. R. and Co. v. Bhagwandas Chaturbhuj, 10 Bom.L.R. 1113.

(38) S. 245—Liability of retiring partner.

A partner who has retired before a certain transaction with the firm to which he had belonged takes place, cannot be held responsible unless it can be shown that the transaction was with either a previous customer or one who was aware that the retired partner had been a partner. When a person enters into a transaction with a firm without even knowing that a certain person who has already retired ever had been a partner, such latter person is clearly not liable to him whether he has notice of the retirement or not (a), unless he has actually held himself out to be a partner, a position which gives rise to a different class of consideration.

If a person is a member of a firm, and known to be such, persons dealing with the firm may be influenced by his credit, and unless he takes proper steps to make his retirement clear, he will be held responsible to them who knew of his partnership and might have been influenced by the fact. But it is definite personal knowledge which is required, not the vague impression that, because a firm once belonged to a joint Hindu family, all members of that family, who may exist, although not personally known to the customer to exist, will for ever be liable, unless they take definite steps to disabuse him of his vague impression. It cannot be held as a principle that when a person has dealings with a man who was once a member of a joint Hindu family and competent to pledge the resources of that family, such person can hold all the members, who once

A co-sharer, who cultivates joint waste land (known as baujar land) previously uncultivated cannot deny the rights of his co-sharers to joint possession of that land (a). The co-sharers, who are thus entitled to a decree for joint possession, should pay their quota of the expenses of bringing the land under cultivation, if a claim for the same is made by the co-sharer cultivating the land. *Ratanlall v. (2) Express surrender of holding by tenant, how effected—Right of co-owners—How one of several co owners of an undivided village acquiring a tenant-right exclusively for himself, may be treated by other co-owners—Unreasonable delay, what amounts to—Arts. 120, 127, 144, Sch. II, Limitation Act

An express surrender by a tenant of his tenant-right can only be effected by a contract between the tenant and his landlord. Where there are several co-owners constituting the landlord, one may act for all, with express or implied authority from the others, in taking a surrender from a tenant. But one of several co-sharers, dealing with a tenant for his own benefit, is neither "the landlord," nor an agent of the proprietary body. Where the proprietary body consists of several persons in an undivided village, the term "landlord," as used in the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, applies only to the aggregate of such persons. It has therefore been held that where, by law, the transfer of a tenant-right requires the consent of the landlord, such consent can only be validly given by the whole proprietary body. No one co-owner acting for himself, or otherwise than for the whole proprietary body, can accredit it. A transaction whereby one such co-owner acquires, (not in his representative capacity) a tenant-right in the village under a contract with the tenant amounts to a transfer and not to a surrender of the holding.

Where one of several joint co-owners of an undivided village acquires the occupancy right of a tenant and thereby becomes himself the exclusive occupant and cultivator of a parcel of the joint tenancy, the other co-owners may either conjointly ratify the transaction and accept the acquiring co-owner as a tenant of the whole proprietary body, or allow him to occupy the land exclusively, as part of the general arrangement among the co-owners for the occupation and enjoyment of the undivided estate. Otherwise, they may individually regard the right to occupy the land as lapsed to the proprietary body, and each may claim joint physical possession thereof with the acquiring owner to the extent of his share (a) But a claim of this kind is one to be dealt with in accordance with principles of equity (b), and any unreasonable delay in advancing it must defeat it upon the basis of the principle, "delay defeats equities." What amounts to an unreasonable delay is a question for determination by the Court according to the particular circumstances of each case as it comes up to decision. A suit to enforce this particular claim for joint or common occupation by one co-owner of joint or common land against another co-owner, who has taken up exclusive enjoyment of such land, not in denial of the joint or common title, but merely as a mode of enjoying his share in the property, is a suit governed by Art. 120 of the Limitation Schedule. Art. 127 or Art. 144 is not applicable to the case. Ramdayal v. Gulabai Bai, 4 N.L.R. 120.

(3) Joint property—Right of co-owner to have partition—Agreement among the owners that shares should remain joint—not enforceable.

There were four brothers jointly entitled to certain Zemindari property. One of the brothers died childless. Another brought a suit against the sons of the two others for partition. A compromise was entered into among the then defendants that their shares should remain joint. The plaintiff who was a defendant to that suit now applied under S. 110, Land Revenue Act, to have his share separated :—

Held, that the application was maintainable.

The right of a co-owner to have partition of his share is incident to the right of ownership, and an agreement not to partition for an indefinite period would be contrary to that right,

(4) Co-sharer landlords—Separate collection—Right of sharer to sue for whole rent making co-sharers defendants—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), S. 188—"Required or authorised to do" under the Act—Filing of suit—General principles of legal procedure.

Agreement, either expressly proved or implied by the conduct of the parties, may establish the right of co-sharer landlords to sue separately for the shares of rent receivable by them. But such an arrangement merely affects the right to sue separately for rent, and in no other respect modifies the terms of the holding. The right to bring the tenure to sale for arrears of rent remains intact, as also the right of one sharer to sue, making his co-sharers defendants when they will not join as plaintiffs.

The filing of a suit is not a thing, which the landlord is, under the Bengal Tenancy Act, required or authorised to do, and S. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is no bar to a sharer suing (under the general rules of legal procedure) for the whole rent of the tenure, making his co-sharers, who refuse to join as plaintiffs, defendants in the suit. Raja Pramada Nath Roy v. Copyright.

(1) Copyright—Infringement—Catalogue, illustrations in—Copyright in a portion of a publication, how far protected—Fraud on the public—Misstatements—"Puffing" statements.

The fact that the copyright in some of the illustrations in the plaintiff's catalogue is vested in other persons does not preclude him from suing to restrain an infringement of such of the illustrations as he has the copyright in (a).

Copyright—(Concluded).

The objection that the catalogue contained certain statements which were not strictly accurate (no case of fraud on the public having been made in the written statement) was held to be no answer to an action to prevent infringement of the copyright, such statements being held to be in the nature of "puffing" statements (b).

It was not sufficient for a defendant merely to give an undertaking not to publish in future those illustrations which he admits to be infringements of copyrights. He ought to have, at the commencement of the suit, offered to consent to an injunction being recorded regarding them. S Lawrence v. W. Bushnell, 12 O.W.N. 753.

Corporation.

(1) Bank of Bombay—Shareholder's right to inspect and take extracts—Special interest and definite object, necessary—Suit for declaration of right to inspect, in the nature of application for writ of mandamus—Conditions on which relief can be given.

A suit brought against the Bank of Bombay by a shareholder for a declaration that he is entitled to inspect the register of shareholders and to copy and take extracts from such register is, in its nature, though not in its form, somewhat of the character of an application for a writ of mandamus, and the principles regulating the issue of that prerogative writ should apply to a great extent to the granting of the relief prayed for in such a suit.

A writ of mandamus will not be allowed to issue unless the applicant shows clearly that he has the specific legal right, to enforce which he asks for the interference of the Court, that he has claimed to exercise that right and none other, and that his claim has been refused.

When, therefore, before the suit, the plaintiff claimed an absolute right to inspect and take extracts from the Bank's register of shareholders—to which he was not entitled—and was refused, but in the suit claimed a more qualified or restricted right, held, that the suit could not succeed.

The right to inspect the documents of a corporation which at Common Law belongs to every member of such corporation is not an absolute right, but is confined to cases where the member of the corporation has in view some definite right or object of his own and to those documents which would tend to illustrate such right or object.

Where it appeared that the plaintiff had no special interest in any of the matters he complained of, or any interest other than or different from that of each member of the corporation, and had no definite right or object of his own to aid or serve in asking for inspection of the register, or right or object which the register would illustrate, but his object was to obtain the inspection in order to communicate with the shareholders with the view of securing their help in bringing about an improvement in the administration of the corporation's affairs.

Held, that no relief could be granted to the plaintiff (a). The Bank of Bombay v. Suleman Somji, 12 C.W.N. 825 (P.C.)

Attachment of certain property in execution of a decree being made, objections were put in by persons, who claimed the attached property as their own. These objections were successful, but, for some reasons not explained, the objectors were not allowed costs. The objectors instituted a suit against the decree-holder to recover damages for unlawful attachment and the costs incurred in making objections. Held, that the costs claimed could not be recovered by means of a separate suit. Salig Ram v. allowing of costs—Taxing Master's decision—Review by the Chamber Judge—High Court Rules and Forms, Rule 577.

As a general rule, the Judge in Chambers will not interfere with items of taxation which are entirely within the Taxing Master's discretion, or go into details of such discretionary items but there is nothing to prevent him from doing so, if it appears to him, that the interests of justice require his interference; and it would be his duty in all such cases to review and revise taxation and judge and decide for himself what would be a just order to make under the circumstances.

Where a party to a suit has already briefed two Counsel for hearing, and a third is instructed to make an application to transfer the case from one Judge to another, the costs shall be, in the absence of any order making the costs, costs in the case, disallowed between party and party, though they may be allowed between attorney and client.

A party to a defended long cause is entitled to appear by two Counsel. If both Counsel attend throughout the hearing and the other party is ordered to pay the costs of the suit, their brief fees and full refreshers would be allowed on taxation against the losing party. If the suit is conducted by one Counsel only throughout, the full refreshers of the conducting counsel and a nominal refresher of 2 G. Ms. of the other Counsel would be properly allowable against the opponent if ordered to pay costs. If the absent Counsel attends for portions of the time the case is at hearing, his refresher proportionate to the time he attends would also be properly allowable in addition to the full refresher allowed to the Counsel who attends and conducts the case.

When a party to a defended long cause engages two Counsel, he has a right to the services of at least one of them. He is under no obligation whatever to engage a third Counsel. If both Counsel find that they would, owing to other engagements, be unable to go in, and conduct the case when it is called, it is obviously the duty of one of them to return the brief.

A party is at liberty at any time to employ a third Counsel, but this right of employing a Counsel must not be allowed to work hardship on the losing opponent.

Costs—(Continued).

If three Counsel are engaged before the hearing, it will be for the Taxing Master to consider the fees and refreshers of which two he will allow between party and party, and which Counsel-fees should go between attorney and client. A Solicitor engaging three Counsel is entitled, in the event of his recovering costs from the opponent, to have his third Counsel's costs taxed between attorney and client, if he proves express authority from his client, or if he proves that some peculiar contingency arose, which made it necessary for him to engage a third Counsel in order to safeguard his client's interest.

If a third Counsel is added after the hearing of the suit has commenced, such addition must be at the cost of the party doing so. Banoo Begum v. Mir Aun Ali, 9 Bom. L.R. 983 = 32 B. 262.

The petitioner sued for possession of a house, which he valued at Rs. 90, in the Court of a Munsiff of the first class, and obtained a decree for possession, on payment of Rs. 684-7-0, value of improvements to the house by the defendant. He appealed to the District Judge against so much of the decree as awarded compensation for improvements, and the District Judge held that he had jurisdiction and that the Court-fee must be made up to Rs. 650, and, on failure to make up the Court-fee, dismissed the appeal.

Held, that, the subject matter of the suit being a house, the market value of the house as found by the first Court for Court-fee determined the course of an appeal under S. 39 of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884; that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain and hear the appeal, and, that, under S. 7 (V) (e) of the Court Fees Act read with S. 9 of the Act, the valuation for the purposes of Court-fee and for jurisdiction should be the same (a). Abdur Rahman v. Where a suit is brought under S. 283 of the Civ. Pro. Code, the proper Court-fee payable on the plaint is Rs. 10 under cl. (1) of Art 17 of Sch. II of the Court Fees Act (a).

When a suit asks for a declaration and for an injunction, it is not one merely for a declaratory decree, but also for consequential relief.

When a plaintiff seeks to challenge a decree in execution of which his property has been attached, the value of the action is the value to the plaintiff, so that, if the execution debt exceeds the value of the property, the latter is the value of the suit, and if the execution debt is less than the value of the property, the former is the value of the suit.

In suits to set aside summary decisions, as also in those dealing with arbitration awards the amount of Court Fees payable on the plaint does not depend upon the value of the suit. Bibi Phul Kumari v. Gansyam Misra, 7 C.L.J. 36 (P.C.).

Court of Wards.

- (1) Trespass—Court of Wards, what estate can be taken possession of by—"Proprietor," meaning of—Infant beneficiary, if proprietor, when estate vested in executrix—Residuary legatee, when estate vests in—Court of Wards Act (IX of 1879, B.C.)—Notice of suit, when necessary—Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), S. 424—Injunction, suit for, if notice required for—Jurisdiction

Cause of action—Immoveable property within jurisdiction—Acquisition by executrix—Mal-administration, who to determine—Trespass, under order of higher official, who liable for—Power of Court of Wards to override wishes of testators—Possession, disturbance of—Remedy, injunction or ejectment action.

The Court of Wards can take possession only of an estate of a minor, if he can be said to be the proprietor thereof within the meaning of the Court of Wards Act, and has no right to take over an estate from an executrix in whom the estate is vested in law, until the infant beneficiary becomes the proprietor.

A residuary legatee does not become the "proprietor" of the estate until the administration has been completed and the residue ascertained and made over by the executrix to him.

The Court of Wards Act was never intended and the language thereof does not warrant the construction that it should have power, to override private rights, such as the wishes of testators and proprietors generally in desiring and directing that their estate should vest in and be managed by an executor or in creating a trust inter vivos for the benefit of an infant.

When public officers are sued not in their admitted official capacity but as individual trespassers, no notice under S. 424 of the Code of Civil Procedure is necessary.

Even in a case where such a notice would be otherwise necessary, so far as the suit sought relief by an injunction to restrain the commission of an act, no notice under that section would be necessary.

An acquisition by an executrix for an estate, out of the assets of the estate, is a part thereof, even if the acquisition has taken place after a declaration by the Court of Wards taking over the management of the estate.

The High Court may entertain an action in respect of immoveable property, provided that a portion of such property is within the jurisdiction.

Where, although but a portion of the estate regarding which certain declarations and injunction are sought in an action is within its jurisdiction, the High Court has power to grant the same declarations and injunction as regards the whole estate.

Court of Wards—(Concluded).

Where there had been an undoubted disturbance of plaintiff's possession, some rents having been collected and appropriated by the defendant and the plaintiff's establishment directed to obey the order of the defendant, but, no mutation of names having been effected, the rents had been collected and money-orders cashed in the name of the plaintiff and her establishment taken over by the defendant in the plaintiff's absence and without her consent, to which the plaintiff at once protested, and she also made certain collections on her own behalf.

Held, that the possession of the estate had really remained in the plaintiff, and, there had been a continuing trespass for which the plaintiff was entitled to have an injunction, and it was not necessary for her to institute an action in ejectment against the defendant.

It is not for the Court of Wards to determine whether there has been mal-administration of an estate by an executrix, and on its own determination, take possession thereof on behalf of an infant residuary legatee, before the administration is complete.

It is not essential that the defendants should all actually commit trespass to be liable to the plaintiff; a trespass committed by a subordinate officer under orders from the superior officers is in substance the act of them all and both the subordinate as well as the superior officers are liable to the plaintiff as trespassers. Ganda Sunderi Chaudhurani v. (1) Ss. 87 and 88—Forfeiture of ancestral property of a criminal subject to Punjab Customary Law for absconding or committing a crime—Extent of his interest—Necessity—Sale—Right of his reversioner—Full owner defined.

Held, by majority (Clark, C. J., and Chatterji, J.) that when ancestral property of a person subject to Punjab Customary Law is attached and sold by order of a Criminal Court under the Indian Criminal Law, for his committing a crime or absconding, the sale disposes of the life interest of that person only, but not the right of inheritance, after his death, of his male lineal descendants or of collaterals descended from the original holder of the property.

Per Johnstone, J.—Contra. Upon such a sale, the fee-simple of the property is sold and nothing remains for the heir to inherit (a).

Per Clark, C. J.—The reversioner has such indefinite interest in the ancestral property that the owner in possession cannot, by his crime or absconding cause that interest to be forfeited.

Per Chatterji, J.—A full owner, in jurisprudence, is a person who has a right over a determinate thing, indefinite in point of user, unrestricted in point of disposition, and unlimited in point of duration, or, in other words, having the fullest and freest right of possession, enjoyment and disposition (b).

The plaintiff sued for recovery of possession of a mica mine under S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act, on the allegation that he was dispossessed by the defendant, therefrom on the 13th February, 1907, in consequence of the final order of the Magistrate of Giridh, passed under S. 145 of the Crim. Pro. Code, on the 11th February, 1907, after the property had been in attachment under the proviso to cl (4) of the section :

Held, that, under these circumstances, the plaintiff could not be said to have been dispossessed otherwise than in due course of law, and the plaintiff is, therefore, not entitled to maintain an action under S. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (a).

Although S. 145 of the Crim. Pro. Code, does not expressly authorise the Court to put the successful party into possession, the effect of it is to entitle him to take it.

Per Mookerjee, J.—A matter may be considered to have happened in due course of law, if it is the result and operation of the law, invoked by the ordinary method of any judicial proceeding.

The view that the effect of an order under S. 145 of the Crim. Pro. Code is to entitle the successful party to take possession is consistent with the observations of the Judicial Committee (c). Leo Moore v. Manoranjan Guha, 7 C.L.J. 547 = 12 C.W.N. 696.

Code, made by Civil or Revenue Court in the ordinary course of its business, to be made by High Court.

Jurisdiction being conferred on the Courts in British India by a codified adjective law, any jurisdiction conferred upon any Court by the Code of Criminal Procedure must be a criminal jurisdiction, if there is any meaning in the name given to that Code. The Civ. Pro. Code jurisdiction is limited to matters of a civil nature; it is wrong to speak of an order or sanction to prosecute for a criminal offence as a matter of a civil nature. Where a single officer or a single Court is invested with several powers of different natures, the question as to whether that Court is a civil, criminal, or revenue Court must be answered with reference to the nature of the proceedings before it in each case, and, in every proceeding held under the authority of the Crim. Pro. Code, it would be a criminal Court, and it makes no difference whether such jurisdiction is ordinary or exceptional. Though the nature of the ordinary business carried on by a Court offers a convenient basis for its appellation, and for its general administrative control by higher authority, that cannot alter the law and change the nature of a jurisdiction which the Legislature has conferred upon such Court, and, it is that nature upon which depends the judicial control over every proceeding held by any subordinate Court. Each of the superior authorities mentioned, e.g., in S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, obtains such power of control, not by virtue of his ordinary jurisdiction, but by a special jurisdiction conferred upon him by S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, without which he would have no authority whatever over any order made under that section. Hence, in exercising the control, each superior tribunal itself becomes, pro tanto, a criminal Court within the meaning of S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code (a).

The Legislature never intended that a particular power of superior control, given under a particular section of the adjective law, shall be exercised more than once, and by different Courts, in the same case. Sub-S. 6 of S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, contemplates one proceeding only, in a single superior Court, after which the power given by it is exhausted, a view supported by the language of Sub-S. 7, cl. (a) of the same section (b).

The powers under Sub-S. 6, S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, especially in the direction of granting a sanction refused on reasonable and valid grounds, should be most sparingly used (c).

In a suit brought in 1903 against the appellant, he had made a statement, and, in a suit brought in 1906 against him, which was dismissed as false and malicious, he made a statement alleged to be contradictory to that made in 1903. An application for sanction to prosecute the appellant for perjury in respect of the alleged contradictions in the statements of 1903 and 1906 was dismissed by the Court of the first instance, but the District Judge accorded the sanction asked for with reference to the discrepancy between the statements. Held, that the application should be dealt with under S. 439 of the Crim. In a probate case before a District Judge, the present petitioners, among others, opposed the grant of probate. The District Judge, after hearing the evidence of both the parties, held that the will propounded had been duly executed and that the petitioners had conspired to prevent the grant of probate and had given false evidence in furtherance of that conspiracy. He, thereupon, instituted proceedings against the petitioners under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, and directed their prosecution under S. 193, I.P.C., in respect of the false statements made by them.

Held that it was doubtful whether the High Court, exercising civil jurisdiction, could stay the criminal proceedings, that no case had been made out for the interference of the High Court, under S. 622, Civ. Pro. Code, and that the provisions of S. 15 of the Charter Act did not appear to give the High Court power to interfere in the case (a).

Held, also, that the High Court must have regard to the nature of the revisional jurisdiction and must not, in a case arising under S. 476, any more than in any other case, allow, what would virtually be, an appeal from the order of the Court below (b).

Held, further, that where the Court below, being asked to postpone passing orders, under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, until the disposal of the appeal to the High Court, refused to do so, but thought it fit, in the interests of justice, to take immediate action, the High Court ought not to stay proceedings, merely on the ground that a civil appeal is pending before it (c). Hem Chandra Ray v. this suit in a Civil Court. The defence contended that the suit was not maintainable, and that the order of the Magistrate was conclusive. Held, the Crim. Pro. Code does not bar a suit in the Civil Court. It simply enables a Magistrate to pass an order for maintenance under a given state of circumstances. Further S. 11 of the Civ. Pro. Code allows a civil suit in respect of a matter of a civil nature unless a suit is barred by special enactment. there being no enactment barring the cognizance of a suit, it was maintainable. If the Magistrate had passed an order, no suit might lie for setting aside the order. That is not this case (a).

It was contended, also, that the Hindu Law does not authorize maintenance being granted to illegitimate children (b). Held, apart from the Hindu Law, maintenance is awardable in such cases, on general principles. The defendant having begotten the child, he was bound to provide for its maintenance. Ghana Kanta Mohanta v. Gerell, 32 C. 479 = 13 C.W.N. 150.

(1) Custom—Adoption—Inheritance—Rohtak, Riway-i-am—Unchaste widow entitled to succeed—Adopted son's right of collateral succession.

Held, that, in the absence of proof of any custom to the contrary, a widow by not remaining chaste does not forfeit her interest in the property left by her deceased husband (a).

Held, also, that, in Rohtak District, in common with the portion of the old Delhi Territory, adoption, where effected, is of a formal nature, and not the mere customary appointment of an heir as is usually met with in the Punjab proper; and the adopted son merges in his new family and there is no limitation of his right of collateral succession. *Mussammat Dhohan and Sohan Lal v. Held, that according to custom prevailing among Jats of Amritsar District, adoption by a childless proprietor of a distant agnate in the presence of nearer ones is not invalid. Nidhana v. Shaman, 7 P.L.R. 1907—43 P.W.R. 1907—10 P.R. 1908.

(4) Custom—Brahmins of Dialpur, Tahsil Kasur—Adoption of wife's brother's son—Right of collateral of eighth degree to question the validity of adoption—Burden of proof.

Brahmins of Dialpur, Tahsil Kasur, Lahore District, who are full proprietors with share of Shamlat and had settled with the founder, and agreed to the same conditions as the Jats, as to the alienation of land and as to the non-succession of daughter, are, in matters of adoption, governed by custom and not by Hindu Law (a).

Held that the defendant on whom lay the burden of proving that the collaterals of the eighth degree were not entitled to challenge the validity of adoption, had not discharged that burden (b).

Customs (2.—Punjab) —(Continued).—1.—Adoption—(Concluded).

Held also that the onus of proving that an adoption of wife's brother's son was valid by custom in the above community lay on the defendant and that he had failed to discharge the burden (c). Ram Chand v. Thakar Das, 94 P.R. 1907 = 29 P.L.R. 1908 = 123 P.W.R. 1907

—2.—Alienation.

(1) Rajputs acquiring out of savings from Government service urban immoveable property—Powers of alienation—Sale of ancestral land to pay off debt really due—Onus of proving immoral nature of debts.

The presumption in favour of a restricted power of alienation of ancestral immoveable property, as laid down in Gujar v. Sham Das (107 P.R. 1887) (F B) applies only to agriculturists by occupation and members of village communities. But, where a family, though belonging to an agricultural tribe, has altogether drifted away from agriculture as its main occupation and has settled for good in urban life and adopts trade, industry or service, as its principal occupation and means and source of livelihood, no initial presumption would exist or apply that the power to alienate ancestral immoveable property by the members of such family is necessarily restricted.

The rule applies to property connected with ancestral lands and not to house property altogether unconnected, which is acquired in a town or a city as a means of investment (a).

A Rajput is not necessarily an agriculturist, nor is he governed by customs of agricultural tribes as a matter of necessity.

Where a Rajput acquired urban immoveable property out of savings made while in Government service and settled to urban life permanently, held, that his descendants were not governed by customary law of agriculturists as to matters relating to power of alienation of ancestral immoveable property, merely because they were Rajputs. The test in such cases would be not merely caste, but permanent and hereditary occupation as well (b).

Where ancestral property is sold to pay debts really due, the alienation made to pay such debts is a necessity. The onus is on the person who seeks to have the alienation set aside that the debts were really incurred for immoral purposes and in reckless extravagance (c). Muhammad Hayat Khan v. Sandhe Khan, 55 P.R. 1908 = 105 P.W.R. 1908.

(2) Arains of mauza Agwan Ladhar, tahsil Jagraon, Ludhiana District—Power of male proprietor to make gifts of ancestral immoveable property with the consent of childless son to daughter—Right of reversioners to contest the alienation.

An Arain of Mauza Agwan Ladhai, tahsil Jagraon, Ludhiana District may validly make a gift of ancestral immoveable property to his daughter, with the consent of his son and next heir who is himself childless. (4)—Alienation—Competency of reversioners related to a childless proprietor in 9th degree to contest alienations made to reversioners one degree further removed in Mauza Timmawal Tahsil, and District Amritsar—Effect of delay in suing—Necessity—Res judicata—S. 13 of the Code of Civ. Pro., 1882.

Held, that, the reversioners related to a childless Jat proprietor of Amritsar District in 9th degree can successfully contest the alienations made by him without necessity in favour of the other reversioners one degree further removed.

Held, also, that when reversioners have made great delay in suing to protect their reversionary rights, justice requires that Courts should not seek to narrowly scrutinize the acts of the alienor, but where the deed of transfer is in itself silent as to the detail, and there is no satisfactory proof, of necessity, the reversioners cannot be deprived of their just rights on the ground of mere delay.

Held, also, that the dismissal of a previous declaratory suit, brought by some of the reversioners on the ground that they are so distantly related to the alienor that they have no locus standi to object to his alienation, does not bar the other reversioners, not party to the former litigation, from maintaining another suit to challenge the alienations.

The Gilani Sayads of Mauza Masania being agriculturists, and having adopted agricultural customs in matters relating to succession and alienation, the initial presumption against an unrestricted power of alienation is applicable to them. It is not sufficient to rebut such presumption that a number of alienations were effected by members of the tribe to which the parties belonged, unless it is further proved that the alienation effected were such as are unauthorised by the customary law. But a member of the tribe is justified in incurring expenditure for a religious ceremony such as the aqqa ceremony of his son and the marriage of his first cousin, each item being a necessity, and he is, therefore, justified in alienating a small portion of his ancestral land for such purposes. Shah Nawaz v. Azmat Ali, 40 P.R. 1907=10 P.L.R. 1908.

(6) Mode of calculating degree of relationship—Alienation by widow—Consent of nearer reversioners—Right of remote reversioners to contest the alienation—Presence of daughters, effect of—

In the Banu district, tahsil Isa Khel, the mode of computing degrees of relationship is from the collateral to the common ancestor, both being counted.

The fact that plaintiff is not the nearest reversioner will not be a bar to his maintaining a suit for a declaration that a sale or immovable property effected by the widow should not affect his reversionary rights, and where a nearer reversioner consents to the alienation, or stands aside and refuses to sue, a more remote reversioner can come in and contest the validity of the alienation (a).

The degree of relationship will no doubt be considered, and where the suit is purely speculative, and the plaintiff has a very remote chance of inheriting, the Courts will, in their discretion, refuse him the relief.

The reversioner of the sixth degree sued for a declaration that an alienation of immoveable property by the widow of a sonless proprietor should not affect their reversionary rights. There were reversioners of the fifth and lesser degrees and daughters of the deceased in existence. It was found, that, by the custom of the village, the daughters of the deceased succeeded in the absence of collaterals of the fifth degree.

Held, as it was highly improbable that the daughters would interpose to contest the alienation by their mother, with whom they were living until their marriage, and as it was by no means certain that the daughters would ever succeed as heirs, as there were several collaterals of the fifth and lesser degrees in existence, that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue. Girdhari Ram v Faizullah Khan, 48 P.R. 1908 = 98 P.W.R. 1908 = 166 P.L.R. 1908.

Where a childless male proprietor sold ancestral immovable property, the fact that the next reversioner challenged the sale, not for want of necessity, but on the ground that he was ready to pre-empt, which he never did, and his omission at mutations to attack the sale as unnecessary, are circumstances proving that the sale was acquiesced in as a valid sale, and such reversioner's son is, therefore, estopped from suing for possession of the property sold, on the ground that the sale was not effected for necessity. Lakha Singh v Jota Singh, 35 P.R. 1907 = 14 P.L.R. 1908.

Under agricultural custom, among Bukhari Sayads of Gujrat District, daughters, in the presence of near collaterals, cannot take as full proprietors, but can merely hold the estate till their death or marriage. But, when a gift is made to daughters by a sonless proprietor, it is taken to be a gift for the benefit of the daughters and their issue.

A Khanadamad is a son-in-law who has married a girl of the family in her father's lifetime and has taken up his abode in the ancestral house. The original idea of the institution was that the son-in-law, by coming and residing with the girl's father, would help him in cultivation and management of the estate and so earn a right something like that of son. A testator cannot nominate as Khanadamads the future husbands of his daughters, who have not, during the testator's lifetime, taken their abode in the ancestral house. Hayat Saha v. (16) Adopted son alienating adoptive father's property—Right of sons born before the adoption of their father to contest the alienation

Sons born before the adoption of their father cannot contest an alienation by their father of property inherited by him from his adoptive father, when the latter belongs to a different tribe. The right to contest alienations, as laid down in 107 P.R. 1887, is based on the theory that all the persons, who are descended in the male line from the original owner of the property, have a sort of "residuary interest" in it, or, in other words, that the property, in a sense, belongs to all the male descendants in the male line of the original owner. Where the father and the adopted son are of different tribes and in no way related to each other the theory will not apply. Tulsi v. Ram Rakha, 66 P.R. 1908 = 110 P.W.R. 1908.

Held, further, that when the ancestral property is so mixed up with the self-acquired that it is impossible to differentiate between the two, the whole of it is to be regarded as self-acquired. Attar Singh v. Thakar Singh, 128 P.W.R. 1908 (P.C.).

(21) Sayads of Gurgaon District—Suit for declaration by sister of last male proprietor and his son to contest alienation of ancestral property by daughter of such proprietor—Right of female prospective heir to contest alienation.

When a female with a right to succeed to the estate held by another female seeks to control an alienation by the latter, she must first prove two things: (a) that she is in fact entitled to succeed on the death of the alienor; (b) that the alienor is holding as a female with only a limited estate resembling that of a widow. When a female is holding an estate on the same tenure as a male proprietor or male sonless proprietor, another female is not competent to contest her alienations.

The parties to this suit were Sayads of Gurgaon District. The defendant succeeded to the property of her father in default of male heirs and alienated portions of it. The plaintiffs, who were a sister of the father of the defendant and her son, sought for a declaration that the alienations shall not affect their rights after the death of the defendant.

Held that, as the alienor had succeeded by custom to the ancestral landed property of her deceased father as a full owner, the plaintiffs had no locus standi to maintain the suit. Maqaud-ul-Nissa v. Kaniz Zohra, 135 P.R. 1908.

Held, that, Gulfrush, i.e., flower selling city Arains of Lahore and Amritsar are governed by Mahomedan Law and not by customs of the Punjab agriculturists, in matters of inheritance and alienation.

Held, also, that where a deed of gift begins with numerous conditions limiting the rights of the donee, the first being that the donee would keep the property for life, but it ends by declaring that the donor or his heirs would have no claim or title to the gifted property, it is a deed of gift conferring absolute ownership on the donee (a).

Held, further, that as the deed of gift in dispute was executed in 1870 and no effort was made in time to challenge it, the claim was also barred by limitation. Mussammat Talia Bibi v. Mehr Bakhsh, 72 P.W.R. 1908.

Where it is sought to be proved, that a high caste Hindu community (like the Aroras of the City of Amritsar) are governed by a custom, directly in contravention of their personal law, the burden of proof lies heavily on the party making such an allegation (a).

It cannot be accepted as an axiom, that the Aroras of Amritsar are bound by custom, found to obtain in other parts of the country, but rulings of Courts on question of custom obtaining among Aroras in other parts may be usefully examined.

Held, that, in this case, the defendants had not established the custom they set up, of collaterals succeeding among the Amritsar Aroras, to the exclusion of daughters (b) Radho v. Harnaman, 99 P.R. 1907=167 P.L.R. 1908

Among Awans of Pind Dadan Khan tahsil of the Jhelum district, a daughter, succeeding to her father's non-ancestral property by inheritance, has, in the presence of collaterals of the deceased of the ninth degree, only a limited estate, and not a full power of disposition (a).

The case of gift by a father of his self-acquired land to his daughter is quite different from the case of inheritance of such land by her. In the former case, she might well have full powers of disposition, because her father, whose powers were absolute, chose to confer all his own rights on her, but, when he dies intestate and she succeeds, a totally different situation arises. Bahadur v. The custom as to the order in which the daughters succeed to the property of their father varies among the various tribes, and so it is unsafe to lay down as a general rule of customary law, regardless of tribe and creed, that daughters are excluded from succession by collaterals however remote

Held, also, that the plaintiffs in the case have failed to prove a custom to the effect that among Chohan Rajputs of Mauza Kharwan, Jagadhri tahsil, Umbala District, collaterals of the seventh degree were entitled to succeed in preference to a married daughter of the deceased sonless proprietor Abdul Karim v Sahib Jan, 5 P R 1908 = 29 P.W.R. 1908 = 99 P.L.R. 1908

- (31) Shamsi Khojas, Lahore, governed by custom and not by Mahomedan Law in matters of succession.—Presumption—Practice Representation, right of

There is no initial presumption in favour of the applicability of the personal law to matters of inheritance under the provisions of the Punjab Laws Act, the parties being townsmen and not members of an agricultural tribe. The initial presumption, if at all, is in favour of their being governed by custom which must in each case be ascertained by investigation and enquiry. The Court conducting the trial must ascertain at first the rule of decision by enquiry into the alleged custom, and, on failure of proof of such custom, apply the provisions of the personal law. But the question must be approached with a free mind without any bias in favour of the personal law being applicable (a).

In matters relating to succession, the Shamsi Khojas, Lahore, despite their conversion to Islam, follow and are governed by the rules of Customary Law as found to prevail generally, and not by the strict provisions of the Mahomedan Law (b)

The rule of Mahomedan Law, which excludes issue of predeceased persons from succession, is wholly inapplicable to Shamsi Khojas, Lahore. The usage relating to representation in case of collateral succession, though opposed even to the provisions of Hindu Law, is found to prevail generally in Punjab, without distinction of caste, creed and calling. So sons of a predeceased collateral have a right to succeed by right of representation in presence of their uncle (c) Mehtab-ud-din v. Abdullah, 140 P R 1908

(4) Mohalla Parachian, Rawalpindi City—Pre-emption based on vicinage—Sale of house—Value of cases decided on admission.

The custom of pre-emption based on vicinage does exist in respect of sales of house property in Mohalla Parachian or Matta or Wans Khan, Rawalpindi City. Where the right of pre-emption is shown to exist, there is ex necessitate rei a presumption in favour of vicinage (a)

Confessions of judgment and admissions are, of course, of much less value than contested cases properly decided where the custom has been found to exist after due inquiry, but such admissions are not irrelevant and by no means valueless, as they may proceed from the consciousness of the existence of the right and the hopelessness of contesting it (b). Than Singh v. In a suit for possession by pre-emption of a house situate in Katra Kanhayian in Amritsar, the plaintiff, whose house was situated opposite to the house in suit on the other side of a narrow gully, succeeded in proving that the custom of pre-emption prevailed generally in that place, but did not prove that it would apply in the case of houses, not adjoining or contiguous but opposite to one another. Held that the suit should be dismissed, as it was incumbent on the plaintiff to prove, not only the general custom, but such special incident as would make it applicable to his case (a)

Per Johnstone, J.—Where the plaintiff's house is separated from the house in suit by a road or lane, then, even if the custom of pre-emption prevails in the mohalla or town generally, there is no initial presumption that plaintiff has a right of pre-emption as against a stranger vendee, but plaintiff must prove by instances in the usual way that he has such right. Mahtub Singh v. The custom of pre-emption based on contiguity exists in Muhalla Wadharian, Sialkot City

Where a purchaser of a house, subject to the right of pre-emption, makes improvements on it, in spite of the pre-emptor's notice not to do so, the purchaser would not, generally, be entitled to recover the market-value of the improvements and would only be allowed to remove them, when it could be done without injuring the house. But, where the improvements are not unusual and do not greatly enhance the value of the property so as to make it difficult for the plaintiff to pay for them, the plaintiff will have to pay the defendant's expenditure Buta Singh v. (2) Alienation by sonless proprietor of ancestral immoveable property to daughters—Right of collaterals of eighth degree to contest alienation Rattal Jats of Jallo tahsil Lahore

Among the Rattal Jats of mouza Jallo, tahsil Lahore, a sonless proprietor made a will in favour of his daughters bequeathing his ancestral immoveable property to them. This alienation by will was contested by his collaterals of the eighth degree. Held, the collaterals cannot succeed, on the ground, that it was not shown that they had the right to contest such an alienation made to a daughter, or that they had the right to succeed in preference to a daughter among the tribe to which they belonged.

Pedigree tables which extend beyond the seventh or eighth degree are, in most cases, as visionary as those which, in the case of some exalted families, derive descent from the Sun and the Moon. Though Hindu Law in its strictness is never followed in agricultural communities, yet the influence of ideas inherent in Hindu Law is certainly not without its effect upon customary law in the case of Hindu tribes or tribes of Hindu origin. Rajo v. Decree.

- (1) Decree prescribing a condition—Appellate decree confirming it—Time for performance of condition—Construction of decree.

A decree of the appellate Court merely confirming the decree of the lower Court does not give the plaintiff fresh time for performing a condition of the original decree (a)

A decree of the original Court provided that on the plaintiff's paying into Court the balance of consideration, within a month from the date of the decree, the defendant should execute a sale-deed of the suit land in plaintiff's favour. The plaintiff did not pay the amount within the month, and after the expiration of that period, the defendant appealed. The decree of the appellate Court simply confirmed the decree of the lower Court. Held, that the plaintiff would not be entitled to execute the decree, on making a deposit of the amount within a month from the date of the appellate decree.

It is desirable that appellate Courts should frame their decree in such a manner as to leave no doubt as to whether it is intended to extend the time for performing the conditions precedent imposed by the original decree. Ramasamy Kone v. Sundra Kone, 17 M.L.J. 495 = 3 M.L.T. 26 = 31 M. 28.

(2) Suit to set aside—No fraud—Right to sue—Civ. Pro. Code, Ss. 447—Next friend ceasing to be a guardian under the Guardian and Wards Act.

H instituted a suit for redemption which was decreed. The decree was affirmed on appeal by the High Court. On appeal to the Privy Council, the decree of the High Court was reversed, the Privy Council directing that an account should be taken of the defendant's receipts and payments under the mortgage deed and the ultimate balance due should be certified. H had died before the High Court gave its decision, and his three minor sons were substituted on the record, and then mother appointed as their next friend. She had also been appointed by the District Judge as their guardian under the Guardian and Wards Act. After the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council, the High Court transmitted then order to the Court below, under S. 610 of the Civ. Pro. Code, with directions to carry it into execution. A pleader appeared for the minors in these proceedings, but, on the 9th of May 1905, after the accounts had been rendered by both the parties, and it only remained to examine and consider these accounts, the pleader informed the Court that he had no instructions and could not proceed further. The Court, however, after considering the accounts passed a decree on the 16th of May 1905. Meanwhile the mother of the minors had made an application to the District Judge stating that one of the minors had attained majority and praying that he might be appointed in her place, guardian of the other two minors. This application was granted on the 3rd of February 1904. The Subordinate Judge was not informed of this, nor was any application made on behalf of the two minors for substitution of their major brother as their next friend in place of their mother who accordingly continued to be their next friend in the case pending before the Subordinate Judge. Then the major son of H applied on his own behalf and on behalf of his minor brothers for a re-instatement of the case and a re-hearing after investigation of the accounts, alleging that they were not represented when the accounts were examined by the Subordinate Judge. This application was refused and no appeal was made against the order refusing it. Then the present suit was commenced, the sole prayer for specific relief being that the decree of the 16th of May 1905 may be set aside.

Decree—(Continued).

Held, that the suit did not lie inasmuch as the only relief claimed was that the decree passed by the Court may be set aside. Even if fraud on the part of the defendant had been alleged, the Court would not have any jurisdiction to set aside the decree. If other relief had been prayed for, and there were proof of fraud in obtaining the decree, it might be open to the Court to treat the decree as a nullity and to give suitable relief. But fraud not having been alleged or proved and no specific relief having been asked for, except the setting aside of the decree the suit could not be decreed (a). Banarsi Pershad v. (4) Its construction—What specific moveable property—Its execution against the judgment-debtor admittedly not in possession of the property—Power of executing Court to refer to judgment and other documents to interpret decree—Civ. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882), Ss. 206, 208 and 259.

Decree—(Continued).

In a suit for recovering three-fourths of an estate, consisting of moveable and immoveable (valued at Rs. 6,800) property, a decree, based on the compromise, was passed in the following terms:—"It is ordered that decree by consent or three-fourths of Nur Bakhsh's estate, both moveable and immoveable property, be given in plaintiff's favour. Plaintiff pays to defendants Rs. 5,000 for expenses, and &c. No costs allowed, Rs. 5,000 paid into Court."

Held, with reference to the compromise and the plaint, that this decree sufficiently complies with the provisions of S. 208 of C.P.C., and under it the decree-holder can recover three-fourths of the moveables or its value, Rs. 6,800 by executing it as provided under S. 259 of the same Code, against any of the judgment-debtors, it being immaterial whether any of them has or has not possession of the moveable property decreed (a).

Held, also, that an executing Court's business is simply to interpret the decree as it stands and not to question its correctness, but it is at full liberty to refer to the judgment or any other document on the file in order correctly to interpret it, and when there is a divergence between the decree and the judgment, the proper course is to direct the decree-holder to apply for amending the decree to the Court which originally passed it. Radha Mal v. (6) Execution sale—Property purchased subject to a mortgage, but not mortgage executed by judgment-debtor—Estoppel—Purchaser equally bound as judgment-debtor.

The question raised in this case was one of law and it was this. (7) Right to recover losses and expenses contingent on an uncertain future event—Decree, whether executable—Civ. Pro. Code, S. 314.

Where a decree directed that the plaintiff should satisfy certain debts due jointly by him and the defendant, and that, if he failed to do so, and if any creditors made defendant pay any amount, the plaintiff should be liable to pay the same along "with losses and expenses," to the defendant, who should be entitled to have the money by execution through the Court, held, that the right to recover losses and expenses, being a right contingent on uncertain future events, could not be ascertained in execution of the decree itself, but was merely declaratory. It could only be enforced in a regular suit instituted in that behalf (a).

Held, also, that the direction that the defendant could by execution recover something which was altogether dehors the decree was therefore meaningless and incapable of being enforced. Gokaldas Dwarkadas v. Otandas Dwarkadas, 2 Sind. L.R. 33.

Where a minister in charge of a charitable institution having promised to perform the marriage between a lady attached to the mission and the plaintiff, subsequently wrote to the lady, on further information supplied to him, regretting that he could not conscientiously have anything whatever to do with her marriage with the plaintiff, informing her at the same time that he had not sought for information and made inquiries, but that facts had been brought to his notice which he had taken trouble to look into, and that he was forced to the painful conclusion that the plaintiff was altogether unworthy of her, held that such communication by the clergyman was a privileged communication, and that a suit to recover damages for defamation by the plaintiff could not be sustained, no malice having been proved. Where the existence of a privileged occasion is established, the plaintiff must give affirmative proof of malice, that is, dishonest or reckless ill-will, in order to succeed. It is not for the defendant to prove that his belief was founded on reasonable grounds, and there is no difference in this respect between different kinds of privileged communication. To constitute malice there must be something more than the absence of reasonable ground for belief in the matter communicated. X v Z, 83 P.R. 1908 = 152 P.W.R. 1908.

In December, 1866, it was decided, as between Government on the one hand and the defendants or their predecessors on the other, that the whole of the town of Tanda should be regarded as Nazul property with the exception of the hamlet of Nawagunj. This decision was upheld in appeal in 1871. In March, 1871, the Deputy Commissioner passed an order directing that the boundary should be demarcated. An amni was appointed to demarcate and he submitted a report, together with a map in which the boundary was shown. This demarcation was accepted by the Settlement authorities and the Settlement papers were drawn up accordingly. The demarcation of the boundary was accepted as correct by the defendants or their predecessors in title under a raznamah dated the 29th May, 1872. The defendants or their predecessors had been in possession of the land, which was demarcated as their property, ever since 1872, and this area of land was included in the had-bast village M. which was settled with the defendants and their co-sharers. In 1904, the Government brought a suit for possession of certain lands, alleged to have been wrongly included in the hamlet of Nawagunj and impugned the correctness of the proceedings and demarcation which had taken place in 1872.

Held that, having regard to the circumstances of the case and the conduct of the parties through a long period of more than 30 years, the plaintiff was bound to abide by the demarcation proceedings of 1872 and could not be allowed to impugn their correctness. Lach-

The circumstances that the Digwar has all along been responsible to Government for the due discharge of his duties, that the appointments to and dismissals from the office have been all along made by Government and that the (Digwari) tenure has passed to the persons whom Government has appointed, show that the holder of the tenure is not a servant under the landlord responsible to him for the due collections of the rent of the estate, and that he did not hold the tenure as a simple ijardar under the landlord responsible to him for the rents of the tenure and receiving as his remuneration only the man lands.

The Digwari tenure is an ancient and hereditary tenure held subject to the payment of a fixed rent to the landlord, and on condition of the performance of certain police or public services, for the due discharge of which the holder has been responsible to the Government, which alone has exercised the power of appointment to or dismissal from the office.

The Government having all along asserted a right in the Digwari mouzals on the ground that they are public service lands, and in granting permission to the Digwar to lease out the property, subject to the condition that the settlement was to be made without prejudice to the rights of Government, the same position having been maintained by Government, without any objection having been raised by the landlord, and the landlord having advanced an exclusive right to the sub-soil profits, in which the Government has a substantial interest as affecting the profits derivable from the tenure, the Government is, in a suit brought by the landlord for a declaration that the sub-soil belongs to him and not to the Digwar or his lessee a necessary party (a)

Constructive possession applies only in favour of a rightful owner and need not (as a rule) be extended in favour of a wrong-doer, whose possession must be confined to land of which he is actually in possession (b)

Occupation by a wrong-doer of a portion of land only cannot be held to constitute constructive possession of the whole so as to enable him to obtain a title by prescription.

Where the right to the sub-soil coal has not been asserted by the Digwar openly to the knowledge of the landlord for more than the statutory period of twelve years, though there may have been no concealment that the Digwar has been working the coal, a suit by the landlord for the sub-soil cannot be held to be barred by limitation (c).

The enactments dealing with the Ghatwals of Burbhun are not of the nature of private statutes.

A clear distinction must be drawn between the grant of an estate burdened with certain duties and the grant of an office, the performance of whose duties is remunerated by the use of certain lands; and a further distinction must also be drawn between a grant for services of public nature and one for services, private or personal to the grantor. The former class of grants in such instance are liable to resumption by the grantor, while the latter class are not so liable (d).

The Digwari tenure having been created in the first instance to enable the holder to discharge public duties, and it all along having been so regarded, it is not liable to resumption by the landlord.

The position of the Digwar is analogous to that of the Ghatwals in Birbhum and the Digwar having been recognized throughout as possessing the same rights, it must be held that the immaterial rights in the tenure do not belong to the zemindar (e).

The tenure was created as a permanent tenure on a fixed rent and was heritable, the zemindar reserving only a fixed quit-rent (f).

The Digwar as holder of a permanent tenure possesses all underground rights including mining rights, unless there is an express reservation to the contrary (g) Brojo Nath Bose v. Raja Sri Sri Durga Persad Singh, 5 C L J. 583 = 34 C 753 = 12 C.W.N. 193.

(2) Service tenure—Resumption—Digwars of Ramgurih—Dismissal by Government and re-settlement with them as sikim talookdars—Default, proof of—Act VIII, B.C. of 1878, settlement under—Effect.

The Digwari service in this case corresponded closely with what in other cases have been termed ghatwalli. There is nothing in the use of the term Digwar to raise any presumption in favour of the contention that the holders of land by a service so named hold as personal servants of the Rajah. If anything, the presumption would seem to be the other way.

The power of Government although generally exercised through the Rajah was always recognised as supreme with respect to the supervision over the Digwars in regard to the discharge by them of their police duties. The Rajah of Ramgurih never possessed or exercised a right to dismiss the Digwars and to resume the Digwari grants, save in cases of default, and by the terms under which persons held Digwari grants, no such power was given or reserved to the Rajah

Digwari tenure—(Concluded).

The dismissal by Government of the Digwars and the substitution for them of a new system of rural police supposed to be of superior quality did not entitle the Rajah to resume the lands as for default.

The subsequent settlement of the lands by Government, purporting to act under Act VIII B.C. of 1878, with the dismissed Digwars, treating them as Sikim talookdars, and imposing on them assessments for road and police purposes of an amount far beyond the burden, which previously rested on the holdings in the shape of supplying patrols, amounted to a continuance, in the form imposed by statute, of their public duties. There was no default. Nam Narain Singh v. Tekait Ganjhu, 12 C. W. N. 178.

Easements.

Easements—(Continued).

The right of the owner of the dominant tenement is a right to the reception of light and air in a lateral direction; but to constitute an actionable obstruction, the same must amount to a nuisance.

The question, that has to be decided, is not how much light is left in spite of the obstruction, but whether there has been such a diminution of light as to constitute an actionable nuisance (a).

Where it was urged that, although the natural light coming into the dominant tenement had been diminished, the reflected light had increased with the result that the rooms were better lighted than before, but it was admitted that if the building was raised, the light coming into the building would be seriously affected.

Held, that the right of the dominant owner (to light) should not be made dependent on his refraining from exercising his undoubted right of raising the height of his building, there was thus a substantial interference with his rights.

(3) Easement of necessity, how arises—Claim to take plough and water through another's land—No allegation of severance—Imitation Act, S. 26, Cl. 2.

Easements may arise in several ways. One of these ways is by implied grant. Upon severance of heritage into two or more parts a grant may be implied of all those easements without which the enjoyment of the severed portions could not be had at all, and this class are usually termed easements of necessity.

An easement of necessity cannot arise in any other way than on severance of tenements (a).

Easements—(Continued).

Where a person claims the right to take plough and water through another's land, and there is no allegation of severance, such a claim can only be based on S. 26, cl. 2 of the Limitation Act (b). Po Kin v. Maung La, 4 L.B.R. 246.

(4) Ancient light—Easement, non-user of, how far a release—Transfer of dominant tenement—Alienation of easement after attachment—Code of Civ. Pro. (XIV of 1882), S. 276—Lucense—Damage—Mandatory injunction.

The non-user of an easement is not an implied release of it, and the transfer of the dominant tenement carries with it the easement which then existed, although in suspense for the time being.

The easement of light and air falls within the definition of immoveable property and can be extinguished by the dominant owner releasing it, expressly or impliedly, to the servient owner.

If an easement enjoyed by the dominant tenement is expressly released, after the latter is attached under a decree, it is an alienation of a portion of that property within the meaning of S. 276 of the Code of Civ. Pro. (XIV of 1882), and the transaction will be void.

Merely blocking up of the apertures of ancient windows would not necessarily amount to an abandonment of rights of easement. Krishna Dhone Mitter v. Nandaranee Dassee, 12 C.W.N. 969—35 C. 889.

(5) Riparian owners, upper and lower—Relations between such regarding right to use of river water—Upper riparian owner acquiring easement to irrigate his land—Limitation Act, S. 26—Sch. II, Art. 47—Custom—Vicinity.

An upper riparian owner can acquire an easement apart from the mode of acquisition mentioned in S. 26 of the Limitation Act (a). But, if he relies on custom, he must prove that it was ancient, continuous, peaceable, reasonable, certain, compulsory and consistent with other customs regarding the right to irrigate from the river.

Riparian owners claiming a right to the extraordinary use of water, i.e., to irrigate their village lands from the water of a river running through their village by putting up dams thereon, must not interfere with the rights of the lower riparian owners (b). Any such interference would be unreasonable and inconsistent with the rights of others. It can be allowed only in pursuance of some arrangement arrived at between the parties interested, or as entailed by the successful acquisition of a prescriptive right (c).

When a suit is not one to recover any property, but one for a declaration of the plaintiffs' right to put up dams in a river and to irrigate their lands by means of such dams, Art. 47 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act has no application. Eshan Chandra Samanta v. Nil Moni Singh, 35 C. 851.

No grant of an easement can be implied from a defendant using a land for eight years without any objection on the part of the plaintiff.

Per Mookerjee, J.—There is no implied reservation of an easement in case one transfers a part of his land over which he has previously exercised a privilege, in favour of the land he retains, unless the burden is apparent, continuous and strictly necessary for the enjoyment of the land retained (a).

Implication of a grant of easement, upon the severance of a tenement, extends to a way which is a formed or metalled road.

It is open to a defendant to set up alternative defences e.g., to set up as a defence, that he was the owner of the property in dispute and if he was not the owner, he had a right of easement over it (b).

A plaintiff will not be allowed to raise any objection as to the defendant's setting up alternative defences, at the appellate stage of the suit, when no such objection was raised in the Court of first instance, and it was not shown that he was in any way prejudiced (c). Purnendu Narain Roy v. - (5) Suit for—Onus of proof—Presumption—Permanency of holding—Confirmatory potta.

Where the plaintiff claims to eject the defendants from the land on the ground that they are merely tenants-at-will, the onus lies on the defendants to substantiate that they have a permanent interest in the land.

The absence of words importing the hereditary character of the tenure may be supplied by the evidence of long and uninterrupted enjoyment, and of the descent of the tenure from father to son, where that hereditary character may be legally presumed (a).

In a case where the following facts were found, viz., the possession at a uniform rent for some hundred years, the property descending from father to son, various transfers, many of them recognised by the landlord, the erection of pucca buildings, the improvements at much cost, and all this with the knowledge of the landlord's agents, and no attempt to eject or to enhance the rent for all those years, the presumption of the permanency of the holding may legally be made.

A permanent tenancy is not destroyed by the acceptance by a purchaser of the holding of a mutation potta containing no express words importing the permanency of the holding.

The words "mutation is being made in substitution of the heirs of Bhagwan" in the mutation potta mean that the potta was executed not for the purpose of destroying the old permanent tenure and creating a tenancy-at-will, but simply with the object of effecting a mutation of names in the proprietor's sherista.

Where a mutation potta refers to an old potta creating a permanent holding, for the purpose of showing a proportionate rent and treats the taker as the then existing tenant and not as a new tenant by virtue of that potta, that potta is a confirmatory one. Ismail Khan Mahomed v. (6) Plaintiff alleging defendants to be in permissive occupation of his land—Defendants denying it and asserting adverse possession—Permissive occupation important question—No finding by appellate Court on it—Remand of appeal—Civ. Pro. Code, S. 574—Improper judgment.

The plaintiff sued for the ejectment of the defendants from a piece of land, on the ground that the defendants were in permissive occupation of it, having been permitted by his father to live on it. The defendants denied that the land ever belonged to the plaintiff's father and pleaded that the land was abandoned village land, which they occupied some 20 years before the suit was brought. The plaintiff got the decree he prayed for in the Township Court.

The important question to be decided in this case was, whether the defendants' possession was permissive or not. If the plaintiff has proved that it was, the burden of proof lies on defendants to prove that they have had 12 years' adverse possession; if, on the other hand, the plaintiff has not done so, the burden of proof lies on him to prove possession within the 12 years preceding the suit. The District Judge had come to no finding on the point. He did not state that the Township Judge's decision was wrong, but merely that it was questionable. The Chief Court reversed the decree of the lower appellate Court and remanded the appeal for rehearing and a fresh decision on the grounds of appeal and points at issue and for a judgment in accordance with law (a) observing that, where the District Judge had not definitely found adversely to the Township Judge on a question of fact and had given no reason for his decision on the point at issue, it was not within the province of that Court to come to a finding on the question.

The general rule of law seems to be that, where the suit is for possession and the cause of action is dispossession, the plaintiff is bound to prove possession and dispossession within 12 years, or, in other words, the plaintiff must show, not only that he has a title, but that he has a subsisting title, which he has not lost by the prescriptive section of the Limitation Act.

Held, that, in the present case, therefore, it was for the plaintiff to show that the land in dispute belonged to his father, and the defendants were permitted by his father to live on it. In such a case, the defendants would not be in adverse possession, until they refused to quit, when asked to do so, and the burden of proof would lie on the defendants to show that they have had 12 years' adverse possession. If, on the other hand, the plaintiff has not proved that the land was his father's and that the defendants were allowed by his father to live on it, he must lose his case.

There is the third contingency, and, that is, if the plaintiff has proved that the land belonged to his father, but has not proved, that the defendants were permitted by his father, to live on the land. In this case, circumstances remained unexplained as to how the defendant came into possession, and if the possession of defendants under such unexplained circumstances exceeds 12 years, the plaintiff must lose. In this third contingency, the burden of proof lies on the plaintiff to show that the defendants have not been in possession for 12 years, but on the other hand, that he or his predecessor, has been in possession within the 12 years next preceding the suit (b).

Ejectment—(Concluded).

The District Judge on appeal wrote.—Defendants " appeal against this decree on many grounds, including a plea that, if they are turned out from here, they will have nowhere to go and live. The only questionable part of the Township Judge's decision seems to me to be the finding that appellants' possession was adverse. With the rest, I am in complete agreement and I dismiss this appeal with costs "

Held, that this judgment was not a sufficient compliance with the express provisions of S 574 of the C.P.C. Maung Kyaw Zan Hla v. Maung San Nyun. 14 Bur L R 156

Suit for possession by partition of a third share of the property left by B, who died on 20th October, 1900, leaving him surviving, an uncle, two cousins, and three sisters. The uncle, the plaintiff in the suit, took possession of the deceased's estate and managed it. On the 25th July, 1901, an agreement was executed by the plaintiff and by the mothers of the two minor defendants, who were defendants 1 and 2 in the suit, appointing D, third defendant, an arbitrator for adopting Bhagat Ram, whom, according to the agreement, B had, during his lifetime, nominated to be appointed as his adopted son. This nomination clause was subsequently added at the plaintiff's request and was attested by him. On the 27th July, 1901, D, arbitrator, gave his award in pursuance of the agreement of reference, dated 25th July. It was stated in the award that, according to the desire expressed by B, deceased, during his lifetime, his cousin, Bhagat Ram, was made his adopted son, and further provisions were made, setting apart funds for charitable purposes, for marriages of minor sisters of B and fixing maintenance for the plaintiff and others as required by the reference. A deed of release was executed on the same date and registered along with the award on 30th July, 1901, whereby the plaintiff and the other reversionary heirs of B acknowledged Bhagat Ram as his adopted son, and agreed to abide by the settlement made by the arbitrator, relinquishing all claim to the estate of B in favour of Bhagat Ram, his adopted son. There was at the same time executed and registered an agreement by the mother of Bhagat Ram, (his father being then admittedly a lunatic), giving Bhagat Ram in adoption as desired by B, when alive, and a power of attorney, appointing D as a general agent for managing business. The next day, i.e., on 31st July, the plaintiff wrote a letter handing over possession, to D, of the estate as detailed therein and of which the plaintiff had hitherto held possession as a manager and heir. On 26th July, 1904, the plaintiff sued alleging that D, third defendant, having represented that he would partition the estate of D among his heirs, including the plaintiff, got an agreement of reference for that purpose executed in his own favour but taking advantage of the confidence reposed in him as a relative and of the youth and ignorance of the plaintiff, he executed and registered an award contrary to the purport of the agreement, and further fraudulently caused the plaintiff to execute a deed of acquittance in favour of the first defendant without any consideration. There was no direct proof to support the allegation of misrepresentation and fraud made in the plaint, nor that the plaintiff was induced to execute the document in question by any undue influence exercised over him by D.

Held, that there was absolutely nothing in the relative circumstances of the parties to induce a belief that the plaintiff was duped by a false representation, or that an unfair advantage was taken of his youth and ignorance as alleged in the plaint, that plaintiff could not resile from the position deliberately adopted by him in 1901 as he was met, not only by the adoption he acknowledged, but by his own release, and he could not get over these obstacles without proving misrepresentation, fraud and undue influence as alleged (a), and that the plaintiff, therefore, was clearly estopped (b) from disputing the adoption, since he had himself encouraged and concurred in it.

When a plaintiff attempts to set aside certain deeds executed and registered by him on the ground of fraud, undue influence or misrepresentation, he ought to make a specific allegation on which he relies. The defendant is called upon to meet only the case as alleged, and if the plaintiff fails to substantiate his allegation or to make some specific charge, his case is bound Evidence.

(1) Court-copy of title-deed—Secondary evidence—Objection not raised at the time of filing—Estoppel.

A Court-copy of a title-deed was filed without objection on behalf of the plaintiff but objection was taken during the argument that the plaintiff had not shown any of the statutory grounds for the admission of such secondary evidence.

It was held that the defendant's allowing the copy to be marked without objection would not estop him from afterwards objecting to it.

The copy should not have been marked until evidence had been given which made it receivable. Kistna Doss v. Muktamala Santani, 3 M.L.T. 297.

In a suit for has possession on the ground that the defendants were trespassers on the death of their ancestor, the grantee, the plaintiff, relied on office copies of grants kept in the course of business of the grantor's sherista, held, that no notice to the defendants to produce the original was necessary to render secondary evidence admissible, as the defendants, from the nature of the case, must have known, that they would be required to produce the originals.

(8) S. 32—Partnership—Account books of the partnership—Entries in them binding on partners inter se—A partner can surcharge and falsify the accounts—Sleeping or dormant partner—Relation between him and the managing partner—Accounts—Directions to Commissioner.

Where account books are admitted in evidence before the Commissioner under S. 32 of the Evidence Act, as having been kept in the ordinary course of business by persons deceased, it is in the discretion of the Court to hold that they are sufficient evidence of the transaction to which the entries of the book relate without further proof (a).

The partnership books being accessible to all the partners and being kept more or less under the surveillance of them are prima facie evidence against each of them, and also for any of them against the others. But they are not conclusive evidence if the person complaining of them can by clear evidence show that there is an error in the books. When there is a question of surcharging and falsifying accounts, the case alleged must be clearly proved by the person impeaching them, and if there is any doubt it will be determined against him.

The law of partnership is, no doubt, a branch of the law of agency, but the position of the partners inter se cannot be altered because one partner chooses to take no part in the business, nor can he acquire greater rights on that account against his partners. Managing partners are principals as well as agents and cannot be compelled to prove payments made by them in the same way as an agent.

In law, a sleeping or dormant partner is a partner who is not known as such to third parties dealing with the firm. A partner who takes no part in the business may be called in popular phraseology a sleeping partner, but this term should never be used in defining the relationship of partners inter se. It has nothing to do with the amount of work done by an individual, as a managing partner may conduct the whole business of a firm and will yet be a sleeping partner, if he is known only as a manager to persons dealing with the firm. The partner who takes no active part in the business of the firm does not occupy a more favourable position as regards his partners on that account, nor is he entitled to any protection as against them. Daji Abaji Khare v. Govind Narayan Bapat, 10 Bom. L.R. 811.

(9) Ss. 32 (2), 35—Admissibility in evidence — Choukidari register, entry of chakran land in, if made in discharge of official duty—Made "in the ordinary course of business"

Reg. XX of 1817 does not impose on the Daroga any duty of keeping a register of choukidari chakran lands.

From the precise and uniform character of the entries as to such lands appearing in a register kept under the Regulations, held, that there could be no doubt that they were made under proper direction in the ordinary course of business though outside the statutory duty of the person who made them.

That S. 35 of the Evidence Act did not cover such entries, but S. 32 (2) of the Act applied, and they are admissible in evidence (a).

The phrase "in the course of business" does not apply to any particular transaction of an exceptional kind, such as the execution of a deed of mortgage, but to business or professional employment in which the declarant was ordinarily or habitually engaged.

The "business" referred to may be of a temporary character (b) Sheonandan Singh v. Jeonandan Dusadh, 13 C.W.N. 71

The Court may presume the genuineness of a document more than 30 years old, if it be produced from proper custody, but the effect of the presumption may be weakened by circumstances which tend to raise doubts as to its authenticity.

Where a lessee enters into possession under a lease, he cannot acquire any title by adverse possession against his lessor pending the term of the lease unless he distinctly asserts such a title to his knowledge and gives him notice that he asserted such a title. A failure to pay rent to the lessor during the period of the lease does not alone operate to create in favour of the lessee a title by adverse possession (a).

If a lessee holds over after the expiry of the lease and if no subsequent arrangement is arrived at between him and his lessor by which a new tenancy is created, time begins to run under Art. 139, Sch. In this document, the latter part was ineffective for want of registration, and the former part which contained a distinct promise to pay came within the definition of a promissory note given in S. 4 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (1881).

(24) S. 92, Proviso (4)—Registered partition deed—Subsequent disposal of property mentioned therein—Oral evidence to prove it admissible—Land suit—Long delay in suing no abandonment in law—The Punjab Courts Act XVIII of 1884, Ss. 3 and 70—The Punjab Tenancy Act XVI of 1887, S. 4—Indian Contract Act, IX of 1872, Ss. 44, 62 and 63—Admissibility of evidence in question of law within S. 70 (b).

K had three sons B, L, and N. On the 16th December, 1892, K. executed a registered partition deed allotting certain lands in G. to B and keeping the rest with him for L. and N. This deed was also signed by B. It further provided that this remaining property will remain in K's possession with full power of disposal until his death.

Among the lands reserved by K. were a well called Sitalwala and a piece of land on Saidullahwala well at T. On the 24th March, 1893, K. applied to the Revenue authorities for mutation of these lands in the name of B. and on 3rd April, 1893, the Tahsildar ordered, and on 2nd May, 1893, mutation was accordingly effected. On the same 3rd April, the Tahsildar acting on another undated application of K. directed mutation in B's favour of the lands at G mentioned in the said deed as given to him and was finally effected on 20th May, 1893. But no change was made in the Revenue records as to the other land which remained recorded as the property of K.

Things remained in this state until 1900, when both K. and B. died. The latter left, C. B. a boy of 15 or so, who in May 1904, sued L. and N. for recovering possession of 10 Bighas of land at G. on the allegation that during his minority they wrongfully seized the land and incorporated it with their garden.

L. N. pleaded that Sitalwala and Saidullahwala wells were given to B. in exchange for 10 Bighas. To this C.B. replied that it was an additional gift to his father B. by K.

Neither the application of 24th March, 1893, was forthcoming, nor was there any mention in the mutation proceedings based thereon that the said two wells were given in exchange.

L. and N. wished to prove this point by oral evidence while C. B. contended that S. 92, Proviso (4), barred them from doing so.

Held, by majority (Chatterji and Rattigan, JJ.) that the agreement or grant by way of exchange in respect of the land in suit was, in point of fact, a subsequent isolated fresh transaction relating to that property alone, after the title to it and to the rest of the land granted by the deed of 1892 had completely vested in B, and therefore amounted to a re-grant of it by B to L and N and their father K, and could be proved by oral evidence.

Per Johnstone, J.—The evidence of the alleged exchange involves rescission or modification of the terms of the registered deed of 1892 and is therefore inadmissible (a).

Held, also, that, a suit for land falling within the definition of land given in S. 4 of the Punjab Tenancy Act XVI of 1887 is a 'land suit' within S. 3 of the Punjab Courts Act XVIII of 1884. The fact that the land did not fall within this definition when the cause of action arose or some change occurred therein after institution does not make the slightest difference in the nature of the suit (b).

Held, further, that in the absence of express abandonment there is no abandonment in Law within the period of Limitation. Of course long unexplained delay in suing is relevant in certain cases (c).

Per Johnstone, J.:—Question of admissibility of evidence is a point of law within S. 70 (b) of the Punjab Courts Act, 1884. Choudhri Bhagwan Singh v. Choudhri Narain Singh, 129 P.W.R. 1903.

(25) Ss. 92, 99—S. 92, nature of barrier against extrinsic evidence provided by—When extrinsic evidence may be given—Effect of fraud and collusion—Suit for pre-emption—Transaction, whether sale or mortgage.

The barrier against extrinsic evidence provided by S. 92 of the Act is, by the express terms of the section itself, one to be used only as between the parties to the instrument, or by their representatives in interest. S. 99 expressly gives a free hand to persons who are not in the above category, and, by necessary implication when read with S. 92, gives similar freedom to the executors of documents against such strangers. The object of S. 92 is to bind an executant by his writing for the benefit of other party to the contract. Once the parties agree as to the nature and extent of their contract, S. 92 immediately goes out of the case. It exists only to control dispute between such parties or their representatives in interest. Either side may give extrinsic evidence to vary the terms of the document, if the issue regarding the real nature of the written transaction is one between the parties thereto and a third person not bound by the writing.

The moment an issue can be raised as to whether or not an apparent sale is a mortgage, or the like, it necessarily opens the field of extrinsic evidence to both parties. It is always open in a pre-emption suit for an apparent vendor and vendee, if they are agreed that there has been no real sale, to prove as against the pre-emptor, that, what seems on the face of the writing to be a sale, was controlled by some agreement which bars, or places limitations on, the right of pre-emption. Such agreement may be fraudulent and collusive, but does not prevent its being put forward as a plea, and evidence being given to prove it. If the Court finds fraud and collusion, it will of course relieve the pre-emptor against it. That is a matter for adjudication in each particular case. The fact that a plea may be made fraudulently or collusively is not itself any reason for refusing to admit it, or evidence in support of it. Gangabai v. Pandoo, 4 N.L.R. 115.

Where a suit was brought by the legal representative of a deceased person, who was killed at an accident, while travelling in the train of the defendant Company, the onus of proving that there was no negligence on the part of the Railway Company, lies on such Company.

This decision is supported not only by the ruling in the case of the Great Western Railway Company of Canada v. Braid (1 Moore's Privy Council Cases, New Series, p 101), namely, that the fact of a breach on a line of Railway is prima facie evidence of improper construction or maintenance which it is for the Railway Company to rebut, but also by the general rule of the law of evidence that when any fact is especially within the knowledge of any person, the burden of proving that fact is upon him (S. 106 of the Indian Evidence Act). The Madras Railway Company v. S. 108 of the Evidence Act makes provision for the question whether a man is alive or dead, that is, whether he is alive or dead when the question is raised, and not whether he was alive or dead at some antecedent date; the law raises no presumption as to the time of his death, and the presumption that may, in certain circumstances, be raised, is a presumption that the man is dead when the question is raised, and not a presumption that he was dead at some antecedent date.

Evidence Act (I of 1872)—(Concluded).

Statements made before the Income Tax Collector do not relate to affairs of State and so are not governed by S. 123 of the Evidence Act.

The Income Tax Collector, summoned to produce, is bound to produce the books in his possession, in spite of the Rules made under S. 38 of the Income Tax Act, forbidding disclosure (a)

Under S. 162 of the Evidence Act, a witness should not decline to bring documents to Court on the ground of privilege. Under the same section, the Court has power to inspect the documents for the purposes of deciding objections regarding production or admissibility.

The provision relating to the non-disclosure of information, given or obtained "in official confidence," does not apply to the production of documents in a Court of Justice.

Rule 15, framed under S. 38 of the Income Tax Act, is meant only for the guidance of the Income Tax Officers, and not for the preclusion of any evidence being given in a Court of Justice.

Orders under S. 14 or S. 26 of the Income Tax Act, determining the amount of income tax, are not privileged documents.

Documents produced on statements made under process of law cannot be said to be made or given "in official confidence." Yenkatesh Chettiar v. Sampathu Chettiar, 4 M. L.T. 317.

The onus is not on the decree-holder, in such a case, even if it were open to the judgment-debtor to raise the question of the saleability of the jotes to show that the jotes are saleable, but on the judgment-debtor to prove that the jotes are not saleable.

- (21) Application by decree-holder for payment of money deposited in Court—Step in aid of—

An application by a decree-holder to the executing Court for payment to him of a certain sum of money deposited in Court in partial satisfaction of the decree is not ordinarily an application to take some step in aid of execution within the meaning of Art 179 (4), Limitation Act, 1877.

The "fruits of the execution of decree" postulate surely that the decree has been executed, and the partial fruits of the execution of the decree equally postulate that pro tanto the decree has been executed. To take steps, therefore, to acquire those fruits cannot logically be regarded as a step towards executing the decree; for ex hypothesi the decree must have been executed (in whole or in part as the case may be) before those fruits, whether in whole or in part, can be acquired, whereas the expression "step in aid of execution" must clearly mean that the decree has not been executed when that step is taken. Kasu v. In an investigation under S. 278 as to moveable property, what the Court has to determine is merely the question of possession, and the Court cannot go into the question of title.

If the Court finds the claimant to be in possession, the only other question that can be considered is whether that possession is really on account of or in trust for the judgment-debtor (a).

In law a very small interference or intermeddling with the estate of his testator, on the part of a party appointed executor under a will, is sufficient to charge him with liability as executor.

ation is void, and he continues liable to be sued in the character of an executor (a).

In an action against an executor for accounts, it is not necessary, when making a reference to the Commissioner to take accounts to, give leave to the plaintiff to make an application to have accounts taken on the footing of wilful default pending the reference. Modern practice allows of an order charging wilful default being made at any time during the continuance of the action on a proper case being shown.

In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the executors of the will of her grandfather, praying for a declaration that in the events that had happened, she was entitled absolutely and solely to the property left by her grandfather, and for account of the property in the hands of the executors, the plaintiff is only entitled to accounts from the defendants for six years preceding the suit, as she took no interest under the will and the executors were not trustees for her and the property did not vest in them for any specified purpose in her favour. Such a suit is not a suit for the purpose of following trust property in the hands of the Executors and Trustees. Ayshabai v. Ebrahim Haji Jacob, 10 Bom. L.R. 117—32 B. 364 = 3 M.L.T. 379.

A mortgage by an executor, who is also residuary legatee, to secure his private debt, though valid as against creditors, may be set aside, even at the suit of a pecuniary legatee, for, the nature of the claim of a legatee may be ascertained from the will, whereas, if a reasonable time has elapsed since the death of the testator and then the executor deals with the residue as his own, the purchaser may, in the absence of notice to the contrary, assume that the debts have been paid or that there are other assets for payment of the debts, if any (a).

When the mortgage was executed years after the time fixed in the will for payment of the legacy and the legacy had remained unpaid, the lapse of time was a circumstance that might be taken into consideration in determining whether the executor was acting with the consent of the legatee.

Where fraud is set up, the particulars of it must be given and it must be based upon a specification of the acts relied upon as constituting fraud. Where no such particulars are given in the plaint, the Court must require the plaintiff to amend his plaint by specifying the fraud alleged, and in case of failure by him to amend, the Court should refuse to enter into the question.

It is desirable to impress upon Subordinate Judges the supreme importance and necessity of insisting that a case of fraud shall not be the subject of a mere vague allegation in the plaint or written statement; but that it shall be supported by particulars: and that, if that condition is not complied with, the party relying on a case of fraud, shall not be allowed to raise that case in the form of an issue. It is generally advisable, indeed, when framing an issue on the point of fraud, to set forth in the issue itself a brief statement of the fraud alleged, or at least to refer to the passage in the pleadings where it is specified. Balaji Raoji Kolhe v. Gangadhar Ramkrishna, 10 Bom. L.R. 276=32 B. 255.

Where two parties enter into a sham transaction with a fraudulent intention, and such sham is kept up by one of the parties in a suit between them and a third party, the action of such party is none the less fraudulent and collusive, even though, as the result of that suit, the fraudulent transaction has not benefited the other party. And where a decree is passed in such suit, upholding the transaction as valid and binding, the party cannot subsequently be allowed to allege his own fraud for the purpose of escaping from the consequence of the decree thus fraudulently and collusively obtained (a) —Per Miller, J.

Where the decree of a Court has been passed, upholding a certain transaction between the parties to a suit, neither party will be afterwards allowed to say that the decree was the result of a collusive arrangement arrived at by them in order to carry out a scheme of fraud, and that it should therefore be treated as a nullity, and the state of things which existed previously to the passing of such decree be restored. —Per Abdur Rahim, J.

Fraud—(Continued).

The decree in the last case is regarded as a subsisting and effectual decree, so that the question covered by it is treated as res judicata; —Per Abdur Rahim, J.

Also, where two persons have combined to defraud a third person and succeeded in their effort, without obtaining a decree of the Court, the Court will not permit one of the parties to show that the transaction between him and the other party to the fraud was not really what it purported to be, and that it does not therefore bind him. In this case the Court refuses on grounds of public policy to help a man who by his act has imposed upon another, to get rid of the consequences of that act against himself (b). —Per Abdur Rahim, J.

Even where there was no actual necessity in the suit for propounding the nominal and colorable nature of the transaction, still the putting the contrivance into use, with a view to effectuate the fraud, is sufficient to estop the party from setting up the shamness of the transaction. —Per Abdur Rahim, J.

The effect of an apparent transaction, generally, —and especially when such transaction has been confirmed by the decree of a Court, —cannot be got over by showing that the real transaction was something different (c). —Per Abdur Rahim, J. Kondeti Kanna Rao v. Lolla Nukamma, 4 M.L.T. 331.

The plaintiffs alleged that P.G., their husbands' father, gave his paddy land to his sons and transferred it to their names in the revenue register. On the death of their husbands they and their children brought a declaratory suit against P.G. and prayed for possession of the land. The evidence in the case consisted of an entry made by a thugyi or revenue surveyor in the revenue register, the entry being that P.G. sent his sons with a letter declaring his wishes. The plaintiffs did not allege that the gift in question was effected by the report to the thugyi;

Held that what the plaintiffs had to prove was gift made, and that the report to the thugyi could not effect the gift;

Held, also, that the entry could only be proved with the letter that accompanied it, but not otherwise;

Held, further, that their children were wrongly joined as plaintiffs, as they had no rights to possession of inherited property during the lifetime of their mothers.

The duty of a Divisional Judge is to follow, not criticise, the rulings of the Chief Court, to which he is subordinate.

(1-a) Imperfect gift—Court's power to construe it as trust—Trust—Creation of trust—Donor's intention and acts—Indian Trusts Act (II of 1882), Ss. 5, 6.

Where there has been a clear intention to make a gift, but on account of some omission on the donor's part, that intention has failed, the Courts will not erect a trust on the imperfect gift (a).

Where the intention is to make a gift, and the intention has failed for want of transfer, or any other cause, the Courts will not convert what was meant to be an out and out gift into a trust. The intention in doubtful cases, may be shown in favour of the contention that, although words of present gift were used, a trust as meant by the donor or settlor having done everything in his power to divest himself of the beneficial ownership, more especially in the way of interest. Where, however, the Courts can find from the facts of any individual case, that although the words used are words of present gift, there was an unmistakable intention of the donor to constitute himself a trustee and to create a trust, effect may be given to the true intention. The question whether the donor intended to make an out and out gift or only to create a trust, is one of fact in each case (b).

In the case of a gift the donor must intend to part entirely with the property at the moment of completing the gift. If he expresses that intention, but fails to carry it out, there will be an imperfect gift which the Courts will not convert into a trust. But where the donor or the grantor uses words of present gift, but has no intention of parting with the property, but only with the beneficial interest, it might be right to look to the real meaning rather than to the verbal form, and, if that real meaning can be positively ascertained, give effect to it.

It is clearly necessary to the creation of a trust that the author of the trust should express that intention in some words which can leave no doubt that he did mean to accept the position of a trustee. Conduct which might be deemed conclusive in England is very likely to be a treacherous and misleading guide in India where the conditions of life are often widely different from those which prevail in the west.

Gift—(Concluded).

Reading Ss. 5 and 6 of the Indian Trust Act, 1882, together, the legislature seems to have meant that a specific oral declaration of trust on points (a) to (d) would be enough to create a trust without transfer where the author was himself the trustee. Manchershaw S. Right of Revenue authorities to grant portions of grama natham—Common Law of the country—User of the site by villagers.

According to the Common Law of the country, the control of "Grama Natham" vests in the Revenue authorities, and they are at liberty to grant portions of it at their discretion to persons who apply for it for building purposes. Until it is appropriated in this way to the use of some definite person, it is usual for the villagers to make use of it in any way that suits them best. They throw rubbish on it, graze their cattle on it, use it as a latrine and the like, and they are rarely interfered with. But it is always understood, that this use is permissive on the part of the Government, and that the Government has the right at any time to appropriate it for any special public purpose, or grant it to an individual for building purposes. The Collector of the Godaveri District v. Some years before the grant of the Dewani to the East India Company, a Zemindar, who held certain villages under the Mahomedan Government, made a rent-free grant of a certain village, the subject-matter of the dispute in the present case, to one D. The grant being rent-free, D and his heirs continued to be in possession of the village as rent-free from the time of the grant to the date of the Dewani and thereafter until the present day. After the acquisition of the Dewani by the East India Company, attempts were made to re-assess all the lands in the Bengal Province, and in 1773, a settlement of the villages including the village in question was made and the said village was assessed at a certain amount, the assessment being accepted by the Zemindar. The Zemindar took upon himself the liability to pay the revenue assessed on the village in dispute and continued to pay the same. The proprietors of the estate fell into arrears of the September kist of 1900, and the village was sold under Act XI of 1859. Whereupon the purchaser instituted a suit for recovery of possession or for assessment of rent of the said village and for mesne profits. Held, that the right created under the grant was an encumbrance, and that the encumbrance was created before the Permanent Settlement. The purchaser (the plaintiff) could not be affected by the laches of the defaulter or his predecessors. He was entitled to hold all the lands of the estate in the same condition as they were at the time of the Permanent Settlement. He was entitled to recover the amount assessed at the time of the Permanent Settlement, with cesses according to the Cess Act.

Held also, that S. 37 of Act XI of 1859 does not avoid encumbrances of every kind nor does it allow the purchaser to assess rent higher than that paid from before the Permanent Settlement, notwithstanding that no rent was levied from a long series of years; the rent is not enhanceable according to the law now in force, as the lands must be considered to be comprised in a tenure existing from before the Permanent Settlement. Brindaban Behari Lal v. Guardian and Minor.

- (1) Suit for account by minor against his agent—Advances made for minor's benefit—Guardian's power to bind minor—Principal and agent.

Where a minor comes to Court to have an account taken as between himself and his agent, and it is found on taking that account that the agent has made certain advances to the guardian of the minor and that those advances had been applied for the benefit of the minor, it was held that the agent ought to be allowed those advances in taking the accounts.

Where the plaintiff seeks relief from a Court administering equity, he must do equity himself.

A guardian cannot bind his minor ward by a personal covenant (a). Surendra Nath Sarkar v. Atul Chandra Roy, 34 C. 892 = 7 C.L.J. 87.

- (2) Bond by guardian—Liability of minor—Necessaries—Bond to keep alive debt due for necessities, when binds minor's estate—Limitation—Personal liability.

The proposition that a guardian of a minor cannot bind his ward personally by a simple contract debt, by a covenant or by any promise to pay money or damages, is subject to the modification that the promise will not bind the minor, unless it has been made merely to keep alive a debt, for which the ward's property was liable (a).

Where the promise is to pay money, which has been expended for necessities, the estate of the minor may be liable, not on the promise, but because the money has been supplied (b).

It is established law that a guardian cannot bind his ward's estate, except by a document purporting to bind it.

When a third person enters into dealings with the guardian of a minor, and advances money for necessities for the minor or for the benefit of his estate, and takes a bond for the debt from the guardian, the responsibility rests on him to take care that the bond is so drawn as to render the estate of the minor in law liable for the debt. Bhawal Sahu v. On 9th June, 1905, E (District Judge) appointed D to be guardian of both persons and property of three minor daughters of G, nephew of D, and rejected the claim of Z and another

On 11th October, 1907, E's successor A granted D's application to arrange for the marriage of the eldest girl R.

On 18th December, 1907, A superseded the arrangement.

On 23rd December, 1907, D again applied for assistance of the Court to enable him to regain control of R.

On 24th January, 1908, A, without assigning any good reason, passed an order to the effect that D's guardianship of R should be superseded in favour of Z, and D should pay $\frac{1}{4}$ share of profits of Gulam Qadir's land to N, son of Z, for maintenance of R.

Held, that the order of 18th December, 1907, is an arbitrary one and that of 24th January, 1908, is extraordinary and undefensible.

A District Judge suo moto has neither power to remove a guardian nor to appoint a person whose claim has already been rejected by his predecessor.

Held, also, that, where a duly constituted guardian is willing to maintain, the Court has no power to pay out of the Ward's property maintenance charges to a person who on his own account chooses to support the minor.

Held, further, that, without assigning very good reasons, the District Judge is not justified in refusing help for restoring the minor to the control of the guardian. Dulla v. Alahdi, 150 P.W.R. 1908.

(1) Criminal proceedings ordered by civil Court, power of High Court to stay—S. 15, Charter Act, scope of—Ss 28 29, Letters Patent—S. 476, Cr. P.C.

The power of general superintendence given by S. 15 is not limited by any other provisions of law, and it includes the power to point out to the subordinate Courts, the inexpediency of trying a case when it is likely to interfere with the due course of justice. The power of superintendence (S. 15) and transfer (S. 29), implies the power to send for the records in any case in the lower Courts, which must necessarily stay further proceedings in that case. Therefore, the High Court has the power to stay proceedings

An appeal, &c., if presented in time is validly presented for the purpose of the Limitation Act if it is accompanied by copies required by the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.

The accompaniments directed under rule 25 of the High Court Rules are extraneous to the memoranda of appeals, applications or appeals in execution, and the rule does not fix any time within which they are to accompany the memoranda, &c.

Per Chandavarkar, J.—No. rule of High Court can add to or modify the conditions and limitations of the law laid down in the Limitation Act. It is true that the Court has the power of making certain rules given it by S. 652 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and those rules must be "consistent with" the Code. But there is no power given to frame a rule modifying any rule or mode as to computation of limitation prescribed, expressly or by necessary implication, in the Limitation Act. *Shunilal Jethabai v. (1) Will—Adopted son to take after widow, if of good character—Contingent interest—Uncertainty—Implied contract on adoption not to make will.

A Hindu, by his will gave his widow a life-interest in a house and provided that, on her death, their adopted son should have the house provided he was of good character and obedient to the widow.

Held that the condition, vis., that the adopted son should be of good character and be obedient to the adoptive mother and should survive her, was a condition precedent to the adopted son taking under the will and was not void for vagueness.

The adopted son had a contingent reversionary interest in the house during the widow's life-time and this was inalienable (a).

In Hindu adoption, there is no implied contract with the natural father that, in consideration of the gift of his son, the adopter will not make a will (b). Surendra Nath Ghose v. Kala Chand Banerjee, 12 C.W.N. 668.

(2) Adoption of daughter's son—Dattaka and Kritrima forms of adoption—Pleading set up in the Chief Court but not set up in either of the Courts below—Succession to the estate left by an adopted son.

Held, that the adoption of a daughter's son in the Dattaka form is invalid and impossible under Hindu Law among the twice born classes.

Held, also, that in Hindu Law under the Kritrima form of adoption, as also in adoptions under the Punjab Customary Law, there is no change in the adopted son's family and no relationship with the adoptive father's collateral relations, who, therefore, cannot succeed to the property left, by such an adopted son.

Held, further, that a party having, without objection, allowed issues to be struck and the case gone into by both the lower Courts on the understanding that the parties are governed by Hindu Law cannot set up the plea in the Chief Court that they are governed by custom (a). Baij Nath v. (3) Jains—Custom—Adoption of married man—Suit for declaration of invalidity of adoption—Burden of proof.

Held that, according to the law and custom prevailing amongst the Jain community, a widow has power to adopt a son to her deceased husband without any special authority to that effect, and, if there are two widows, the senior widow may adopt without the concurrence of the junior widow. A widow is also competent, with the consent of sapindas, to give a son in adoption after the death of her husband.

Held, also, that, adoption being amongst the Jains a purely secular institution, there is no legal objection to the adoption of a married man (a).

Held also that, where the plaintiff asks for a declaration that an alleged adoption is invalid, but cannot claim immediate possession by reason of the intervention of a widow's estate, the burden is still on him to make out a prima facie case that the adoption challenged by him is invalid in law or never took place in fact (b). Asharfi Kunwar v. (5) Remarried mother—Power to give in adoption son by first husband—Hindu Widows Remarriage Act (XV of 1856).

S had a daughter B, who with her husband A and son M (plaintiff) lived with him. S had a wife P, the step-mother of B. S intended from the first to adopt the plaintiff; and for three years after his death, B, P and A used to live in the family house as before; and P continued to treat the plaintiff as before as the son of S. P then went through a formal adoption ceremony in which plaintiff was given by his mother B, who had at this date contracted a remarriage, A having died some years back. The adoption was challenged on the ground that B, owing to her remarriage, had lost the right of giving her son (plaintiff) in adoption:—

Held, that the adoption was good, as there was evidence of an express authority from A to B to give the plaintiff in adoption to S.

According to Hindu Law, a mother who has contracted a remarriage does not forfeit her right to give in adoption her son by her first husband. And the Hindu Widow Remarriage Act, 1856, does not afford any indication that the Legislature intended to deprive her of the right. Putlabai Sadaashiv v. Mahadu Sadaashiv, 10 Bom. L.R. 1134.

(6) Rule that no adoption allowed where no marriage possible between the natural mother in her maiden state and adopting father—Limitations of the rule—Gotras—Pravars—Viruddha Sambandha.

Under Hindu Law, the rule that there can be no adoption where there can be no legal marriage between the adopted boy's mother in her maiden state and the adoptive father is strictly confined to the specified cases of a daughter's son and the mother's sister's son.

Hence, where the natural mother of the adopted boy and the adoptive father though belonging to different gotras have two out of three pravars in common, the adoption can be validly made.

Per Batchelor, J.—The authority of Nanda Pandita must be accepted except where it can be shown that he deviates from, or adds to, the Smritis, or where his version of the law is opposed to such established custom as the Courts recognise. Ramachandra Krishna Joshi v. (3) Widow—Adoption—Alienation by the widow before adoption—Right of the adopted son to dispute the alienation.

Where a Hindu widow, who has inherited her husband's property, adopts a son, the adoption has the effect of divesting her of the property and putting an end to her estate as heir of her husband. The adoption has the same effect as her death, with this difference, that, after the adoption, she has a right of maintenance against the adopted son during the rest of her life, whereas such right ceases on her death. But the right of maintenance, so long as it is not a charge on the estate or any portion of it, does not confer on her any right to the estate, or entitle her to transfer it by way of sale or mortgage.

If the widow, before the adoption, severs a portion of the inheritance therefrom and transfers it to a stranger, without any proper or necessary purpose binding the estate absolutely according to Hindu Law, the transfer, logically speaking, must cease to have any effect after the adoption, since it could only operate during the time that the estate was represented by her as heir; and the result of the adoption is to terminate that estate (a). Ramkrishna Kuppasawmi v. Where a grandfather merely credited to his daughter in his accounts some of the joint family property, and paid to her the income derivable from it, but the property itself was not severed from the joint estate, the fact that his minor grandson did not make a public protest against his grandfather's payment during his grandfather's lifetime, would not estop him from contesting the validity of an alienation made of the corpus of such property subsequently.

(2) Will—Karar—Construction—Life estate and widow's estate—Alienation by owner of life estate, effect of—S. 51, Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882).

A transfer, in pursuance of the will of a testator, to his mother, stating that "the aforesaid properties should go to you for your maintenance and you shall accordingly enjoy the same all your life with right to sell or gift away" was held to confer an ordinary life estate, (a) as there were no circumstances indicating a larger grant. The expression 'with power to give and sell away' did not indicate a grant of the limited estate commonly known as a widow's estate, as the words were not apt for the purpose of conveying the right to alienate in case of necessity, or to meet expenditure which may be considered to confer spiritual benefit on the deceased testator. The words must be read along with the other words 'for maintenance' and 'for your life.'

Under the will of a Hindu testator, his wife gave certain properties, burdened with a simple mortgage created by the testator, to his mother, who, in consideration of her nephew undertaking to maintain her for the remainder of her life, gave them away to him. Upon this mortgage, a decree was obtained against the testator's wife, mother and the mother's nephew. The nephew, by private sale sold the properties to a third person, and out of the sale proceeds satisfied the mortgage debt. The testator's widow was not shown to have consented to the sale.

Held, that neither the mother (b) nor her donee, the nephew, had any power to give anything more than an estate for the life of the testator's mother, that the plaintiff, his widow, was entitled to recover the land on the mother's death, notwithstanding the existence of the mortgage decree, on payment of the decree-debt and the value of the improvements of the land, under S. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act, effected by the vendees. Nanjamma v. In India an agreement cannot be avoided on the ground of champerty (a).

The agreement in this case provided that out of the purchase money which was fixed at Rs. 52,600, Rs. 600 only was to be paid down, and the balance when the property should be recovered.

Held, that the agreement was generally of a champertous character but was not void on that account, nor was it opposed to public policy and void as such by reason of the stipulation relating to the payment of consideration.

An assignment cannot be questioned as unfair and unconscionable by a person who was not a party to the assignment.

One who claims title under a conveyance from a Hindu woman with the usual limited interest which a Hindu woman takes, and who seeks to enforce that title against reversioners, is always subject to the burden of proving, not only the genuineness of his conveyance, but the full comprehension by the limited owner of the nature of the alienation she was making and also that alienation was justified by necessity, or at least that the alienor did all that was reasonable to satisfy himself of the existence of such necessity. And this burden lies the more heavily on one who comes into Court with the case that he did not take from a limited owner, but from one whose title he alleges to have been adverse to that owner.

Ratification in the proper sense of the term, as used with reference to the Law of Agency, is applicable only to acts done on behalf of the ratifier; and this rule is recognised in S. 196 of the Indian Contract Act.

Where the defendant held possession of properties under deeds of sale from a limited owner, which were found to have been executed without legal necessity, the plaintiff's claim for mesne profits was allowed. Raja Rai Bhagwan

According to the Hindu Law of the Mitakshara school, it is not necessary, in order to establish a son's liability for his father's debt, that it should be shown that the debt was contracted for the benefit of the family. It is sufficient in order to establish the liability of sons to pay a personal debt of their father, if the debt be proved, and the sons cannot show that it was contracted for immoral purposes or was such a debt as does not fall within the pious duty of the sons to discharge (a).

Where in such a case as the above, the sons set up the defence that the debt was incurred for immoral purposes, the burden of proof is on them and not on the creditor (b).

(4) Father, as manager of family, entering into contract, for its benefit—Failure to fulfil obligation—Breach of civil duty—Criminal misappropriation—Liability of family property.

A Hindu father, as manager of the undivided Hindu family consisting of himself and the second defendant, entered into a Kuri transaction, and received a certain sum of money in consideration of his undertaking to manage the fund, to make collections from the other members, and to dispose of the collections in accordance with the contract entered into by him with the other members. The Kuri transaction was entered into for the benefit of the family, and the sum received for the family benefit.

The father made the collections, but failed to make the payments he was bound to do.

Held, that the failure to make the payments did not amount to misappropriation (a) but only to a breach of a civil duty that, the obligation of the father and the liability of the family property to pay the plaintiff having arisen by virtue of the contract entered into by him as manager of the family and for its benefit coupled with the subsequent receipt of the collections, his failure to fulfil it could not free the family property from its liability for the debt. Kanemar Yenkgppayya v. (5) Liability of sons to pay father's debts—Tort committed by father—Decree for damages against the father—Son cannot be held liable under the decree, when the estate he inherited from his father has derived no benefit by the act.

Under Hindu Law, the son is not to be held liable for debts which the father ought not, as a decent and respectable man, to have incurred. He is answerable for the debts legitimately incurred by his father, not for those attributable to his failings, follies or caprices.

Hence, where the father's act in obstructing the passage of water to another's lands, though not illegal in the usual sense of the term, but, is wrongful, and that other obtains a decree against the father for the damage done, the son cannot be held answerable for the liability so incurred, when the estate that has come to his hands has derived no benefit from the act. Durbar Khachar Odha Ala v. Hindu Law—(Continued).—5—(Debts)—(Continued).

could not be made liable for those debts after his death. A transfer of property for payment of those debts could not be deemed to be a transfer made for payment of his debts.

During the life-time of N, his wife M, paid his debts. After his death, when she inherited his property, she transferred certain property to satisfy those debts. Plaintiffs, the daughter's sons of N sued to set aside that sale. Held, that the plaintiffs were not bound by the sale as the payments by M were only voluntary, and the property could not be made liable for the debts but the plaintiffs were in equity liable to pay the whole consideration money which the transferee had paid.

Held that there was no "antecedent" or actual debt for which the surety was liable on the date of the bond, and the liability which subsequently arose cannot be regarded as a debt which, apart from any question of legal necessity or benefit of the family, was binding on the family property in the hands of his son.

The son was, if at all, personally liable to discharge the debt, and the personal remedy against the son being time-barred, there was no means of following ancestral property in his hands.

(9) Hindu Law—Father's debts—Inability of sons to pay—Father's power to alienate ancestral property—Attachment of son's share in the property—Prohibition of alienation under S. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code—Father's right to deal with the share.

Under Hindu Law a father has the right to sell or mortgage ancestral property, including the interests therein of his sons, in satisfaction of his antecedent debts, provided those debts were not contracted for immoral or illegal purposes. This right to dispose of the ancestral property so as to include and affect the shares of the sons arises according to Hindu Law in virtue of the pious obligation of the sons to pay the debts of the father, which were not illegal or immoral. In other words, where the father alienates the property, he exercises the power of alienation which the sons would have exercised in discharge of their pious duty which they owed to him; he is virtually alienating the property for them and on their behalf in discharge of their duty in accordance with the power given to him by Hindu Law

Hence, where the right, title and interest of a Hindu son in joint ancestral property has been attached in execution of a decree against him, and its private alienation by him prohibited by an order of the Court under S. 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, his father is deprived of the power of alienation of that interest in

(1) Previous suit compromised—Effect of compromise—Interpretation.

The widow of the last holder of an impartible estate was in possession of that estate under a will. Her husband's nephew brought a suit to contest the will and to recover possession of the impartible estate. The suit was compromised the widow being left in possession during her life-time of the estate as gaddinashin, but without the power to transfer or charge the estate in any way, an annuity of Rs. 12,000 per annum being settled upon the nephew, and it being declared that after the death of the widow, the nephew, or any representative (harm moham) of his, who may be alive at the time, shall be the absolute owner (malik mustaqil) of the estate and shall occupy the gaddi.

Held, upon the construction of the compromise, that the character of the estate as it had been handed down from father to son for generations was not changed, that the nephew took an absolute vested interest in the property the enjoyment of it being postponed during the life of the widow and that upon the death of the nephew, the estate devolved according to the rules of primogeniture governing impartible estates and did not pass to the widow of the nephew as an estate governed by the ordinary rules of Hindu Law. Harpal Singh v. nal Court, whether conclusive in Civil Suit—Unchastity in mother, whether disqualifies her from inheriting—Ragunanthana, whether authority in Southern India.

If a person is a party to the murder of a certain person, he cannot succeed to the estate of the murdered person.

Thus, a mother, if she be a party to the murder of her son, will be excluded from the inheritance, which will pass to the next reversioner.

The fact that such a mother was acquitted by a Criminal Court of the charge of murder is no answer to a civil suit by the next reversioner claiming to succeed in preference to the mother. But, in order to entitle the reversioner to succeed, it is necessary that he should establish the mother's complicity in the fatal act by clear and satisfactory evidence, and it is not enough to raise a case of suspicion against her.

A mother is not debarred from succeeding to her son on the ground of unchastity.

Unchastity is no ground of exclusion in any female heir except a widow.

Illicit intercourse with a person not belonging to an equal or superior caste, though it may produce degradation of the woman, does not affect the proprietary rights of the degraded person since the passing of Act XXI of 1850; nor can it be contended that aggravated unchastity has that effect.

(3) Mitakshara as interpreted in Bombay lex loci of Berar—Brahmins—Inexpiable or unexpiated unchastity by wife—Husband abandoning her—Effect on marriage relationship between such husband and wife and on their reciprocal rights of inheritance—Whether husband can inherit property acquired by such abandoned wife by unchastity—Whether such woman's sister's daughter or her husband's brother's son entitled to inherit property thus acquired by her.

The Mitakshara as interpreted in the Bombay Presidency is the lex loci in Berar (a)

Where a Brahmin husband, in obedience to Hindu Law, totally and finally abandons his wife on the ground of unchastity—unexpiable or unexpiated, so as to destroy all her present and future claims on him and his inheritance the relationship of marriage is dissolved (b), so far as it sustains the civil rights and obligations of husband and wife inter se. The husband's right to inherit the property of the wife ceases simultaneously with the destruction of the wife's right to inherit the property of her husband (c).

Supposing that, notwithstanding the woman's unchastity and abandonment by her husband, her civil contract of marriage with that husband remained as undissolved as the sacramental and moral bond between them the husband, and a fortiori his sapinaas, cannot come in the list of heirs to the acquisitions of a fallen wife by and during her degradation, and after her excommunication.

Lastly, even if the husband and his sapindas could be supposed to be heirs to such an estate, then, having regard to the principle of consanguinity (d), as the predominant essential of heirship under the Mitakshara, to the position given to female heirs by the school of law which prevails in Berar, to the systematic preference

(4) Dayabhaga school—Succession—Uncle's estate—Joint nephew preferential heir to nephew separated by exclusion—Spiritual benefit, doctrine of, not the only principle of succession Mitakshara, application of, in absence of texts of Dayabhaga—Quasi contract and affection, principle of.

Spiritual benefit is not always the guiding principle of inheritance under the Bengal School of Hindu Law.

In cases not contemplated by Junitvahana or his followers, the law should be developed on rational lines consistently with principles followed in similar cases, and the decisions of the Courts should not be based on a blind adherence to the principle of spiritual benefit, when such adherence would lead to a violation of other recognised principles consistent with natural justice.

In all cases of absence of texts or precedents under the Dayabhaga Law, recourse should be had to the theory of propinquity and natural love and affection as adopted by Vignaneswara and the commentators of the more ancient and orthodox schools of Hindu Law (a).

On the death of a Dayabhaga Hindu, a nephew who was living in joint estate and mess with him excludes another nephew who was separate, when the separation was due to his father having been excluded from inheritance for cause not expressly mentioned in the text books. The position of the latter is similar to that of the separated co-parcener who had not re-united (b).

Where the term 'Matah' is used in a will, its precise meaning is to be determined by the context and with reference to the other clauses of the document.

In the absence of any directions to the contrary in the will, the right of inheritance to the shebaitship follows the same line as the right of inheritance to immoveable property.

In Bengal, insanity at the time when the inheritance falls in is sufficient for exclusion from the succession, even though the lunacy may not have been congenital, and where the succession to an office is in question, the duties attached to which require that the holder shall be in full possession of his senses, lunacy is undoubtedly sufficient to disqualify a person from succeeding.

The text of the Dayabhaga by Jmūt Vahana cannot be regarded as in itself an authority absolutely binding, without any regard to the fact whether the doctrine propounded in the text has been accepted as a true exposition of the law and has been sanctioned by usage, and without any consideration of the question whether a verse relied upon bears on its face the evidence of being spurious and an interpolation (a)

Verses 32 and 33 and the words "of the rival wife" in verse 31 in sec. III of Chap IV of the Dayabhaga are interpolations and are spurious.

The son of a rival wife is not a preferential heir to the daughter's son in the line of succession of the aynutuk stridhan property of a Hindu female.

One S, shortly before his death, executed, on behalf of himself and his minor daughter P, a registered document, whereby he treated his self-acquired property, as if it was ancestral property belonging to the joint Mitakshara family consisting of himself, his seven illegitimate sons and his daughter P, and partitioned the property, retaining for himself and his daughter, as their share in severalty, the sum of Rs. 29,000 : and the seven sons, who took the rest of the property, agreed that he might draw and receive and dispose of the Rs. 29,000 as he thought fit.

The daughter died childless after her father's death, leaving the plaintiff-appellant, her husband, who brought this suit, claiming the Rs. 29,000 as her heir.

Held that there was nothing in the document to show that her father purported to make any gift to her, that he purported to partition the property, as if it was joint family property, between his seven sons on the one hand and himself and daughter on the other hand, and that he did not purport to give to his daughter in such partition any absolute estate in the property in question, either as to an undivided half share with himself or by way of a joint tenancy, with the right to take the whole absolutely upon survivorship.

Held, therefore, that she took by inheritance from her father, that, for the purposes of this suit, it mattered not whether the property inherited by her was her father's self-acquired property, or whether it was joint family property ; and that, in either case, she merely took a daughter's estate and that her father's heirs,

(2/3) Property acquired by joint exertions of father and sons living jointly—Character of the property—Nucleus of property—Joint property—Self-acquired property.

Where a father and his sons acquire their property by their joint labour, and are, besides, joint in food and worship they must be regarded as having constituted a joint Hindu family (a), even though there may have been no nucleus of property which has come down to the father from his father or grandfather or great grandfather. For the formation of a co-parcenary in Hindu Law, such a nucleus is not absolutely necessary, provided the persons constituting it stand in the relation of father and son or other relation requisite for a co-parcenary system and those persons, by living, messing and worshipping together, and throwing all the property acquired jointly into one common stock, manifest their intention to deal with one another and with outsiders as members of a co-parcenary system under the Hindu Law.

It is open to a co-parcener to alienate the whole property with the consent of other co-parceners, but he cannot alienate it so as to prejudice the rights of other members of the family.

Where certain property has acquired the character of joint property under Hindu Law, it has imposed on it by that law, as a consequence of that character, certain obligations which cannot be got rid of, by the co-parceners to the prejudice of the parties in whose favour those obligations are created by the law, by a mere agreement to treat it as the self-acquired property of one of those co-parceners. Laldas Narandas v. (4) Joint property—Joint family property—Joint ancestral family property—Distinctions between—Nucleus, how far a necessary ingredient.

The three notions, (1) joint property, (2) joint family property and (3) joint ancestral family property are distinguishable. In all three things there is a common subject, property, but it is qualified in three different ways. The joint property, of the English Law, is property held by any two or more persons jointly, and its characteristic is survivorship. Analogies drawn from it to joint family property are false or likely to be false, for several reasons. The essential qualification of the second class, is not jointness only but a good deal more. Two complete strangers may be joint tenants, according to English Law; but, in no conceivable circumstances, could they constitute a joint Hindu family, or, in that capacity, hold property,

In the third case, property is qualified in a two-fold manner; it must have been joint family property and it must be ancestral.

It is obvious that there must have been a nucleus of joint family property before ancestral joint family property can come into existence, because, the word ancestral connotes descent, and therefore, of course, pre-existence. But, because it is true that there can be no joint ancestral family property without a previous nucleus of joint family property, it is not true that there cannot be joint family property without a pre-existing nucleus, for that would be identifying joint family, with ancestral joint family, property.

Where there is ancestral joint family property, every member of the family acquires by birth an interest in it, which cannot be defeated by individual alienation or disposition of any kind. This is equally true of joint family property.

Where it is known or admitted that some, at least, of the property of a joint family has come down to them, the presumption is that the whole property is ancestral, and any member alleging that it is not will have to prove his self-acquisition.

Where property is admitted or proved to have been joint family property it is subject to exactly the same legal incidents in every respect as property which is admitted or proved to be ancestral joint family property. Further, this class of property, in India, differs radically, in origin and essential characteristics, from the joint family property of the English Law. The fundamental principle of the Hindu joint family is the tie of Sapindaship. Without it, it is impossible to form a joint Hindu family. With it, as long as a family is living together, it is almost impossible not to form a joint Hindu family, and it is of its very essence.

There is nothing, either in practice or theory, which excludes the possibility of members of the same family, starting a family fortune, holding it as members of a joint family, and, thereby, clothing it with all the legal qualities, and incidents of joint family property, chief among which is that every member born into the family, after the property has acquired that character, and before it has been divested of it by partition, obtains by birth an interest in it.

The rule of Hindu Law is that a joint family is represented in all transactions or concerns with the outside world by its Karta (manager) provided they are for the benefit or necessity of the family, and that any co-parcener, who does not occupy that position of manager, can represent and bind the family in such transaction or concerns, provided he was either previously authorised to represent it, or, in the absence of such authority, the other co-parceners subsequently by words or conduct ratified his acts.

Accordingly, the co-parceners of a joint Hindu family are entitled to maintain a suit to which the provisions of S. 47 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act apply, on the strength of a Conciliator's certificate obtained under S. 46 of the Act, by only one of those co-parceners, who was either the managing member of the family at the time the certificate was obtained or, who, though not manager, obtained it with the consent and on behalf of the joint family acting as its agent. Yishnu Dhondi v. Held, that under the Hindu Law, the marriage of a Rajaput with a Khatrami woman is not invalid (a) and that the defendants on whom the onus lay (b) had failed to establish any custom to the contrary among the Bhadiar Rajaputs of the Kangara district

Where it was alleged that the marriage in dispute took place more than fifty years ago and it was shown that the woman was recognised as a married wife and her son as a legitimate issue by the alleged husband—

Held, that under the circumstances of the case the marriage must be held as proved Haria v. Kanhayn, 64 P.L.R. 1908 = 72 P.R. 1908 = 47 P.W.R. 1908.

(2) Rights of Hindu husband—Apostacy of the wife—Decree for custody of wife or restitution of conjugal rights—Law of the defendant not applicable

The apostacy of one of the parties does not in the case of Hindus per se, annul the marriage, and a Hindu husband is entitled to demand the custody of his wife and does not lose his rights over her, by the fact that she has renounced Hinduism and adopted Islam (a)

By Hindu Law, a marriage is indissoluble (b).

In Hindu Law, as in all laws, the right of the husband is that his wife must live with him as wife, if he so wishes and if he has not lost this right, through some causes imminent in him or proceeding from him, calculated to render the enforcement of the right opposed to the principle of justice, equity and good conscience.

Such cases, where the plaintiff is a Hindu husband and the defendant is a Mahomedan convert and wife of the plaintiff, are not, properly speaking, cases of conflict of laws, so as to be governed by the law of the defendant. They must be governed by Hindu Law (c).

(3) Alienation by widow—Suit by reversioners for a declaration of the invalidity of an alienation by widow during lifetime of daughter—Starting point of limitation—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Art 120.

Five sons of the daughter of a last male owner sued in 1902, during the lifetime of the daughter, for a declaration of the invalidity of an alienation made by the widow of such last male owner in 1867. Plaintiffs were undivided brothers, the last of whom was born many years after alienation. The suit, however, was brought within three years of his attaining majority. Held, that the suit was barred under Art. 120 of Limitation Act, 1877, the cause of action having arisen in 1867, and the plaintiffs other than the fifth plaintiff having attained their majority more than six years before suit. As to the contention that the 5th plaintiff's right as reversioner was derived direct from the last full owner his right to sue, would not have arisen until after his birth and that, therefore, he might sue within three years of his attaining majority, it was held that as he was admittedly a member of a joint Hindu family entitled to succeed jointly with the other plaintiffs and that, as the first plaintiff could have brought the suit within six years of the accrual of cause of action, but allowed the suit to be barred, the whole suit was barred (a) The interest of the fifth plaintiff had been represented by the other plaintiffs who had allowed the suit to be barred. Krishna

(4) Release by next reversioners in favour of widow—Suit by actual reversioners at death of widow—Estoppel.

A whole body of next reversioners executed a release in favour of a Hindu widow releasing their rights to the estate of her deceased husband in consideration of her conveying to them immediately her interest in a portion of the property. The deed stated, that the widow might leave the estate released in her favour to anybody she liked. The widow subsequently alienated portions of the estate released in her favour and died. The next reversioners claiming through the reversioners who executed the release, then brought a suit for recovery of the portions of the estate alienated by the widow.

Held, per WHITE, C.J. —(1) the release could not be construed as extinguishing the whole of the widow's estate, and as the whole of the widow's estate was not extinguished, the surrender by the reversioners was not effective so as to validate the alienations made by the widow of her limited estate.

(2) The plaintiffs, however, having claimed through the reversioners, who had executed the release and thereby consented, bona fide and for good consideration, to the future alienations of the widow, were estopped from maintaining the present suit.

Per WALLIS, J. —(1) The renunciation evidenced by the deed in question having been a contrivance by the widow and the next reversioners to defeat remote reversioners, it had not the effect of validating alienations of the estate, subsequently made by the widow to third parties, without the express consent and even apparently, without the knowledge of the plaintiffs, on the second point, the plaintiffs were estopped from maintaining the suit by reason of the consent of their fathers for consideration to future alienations by the widow.

Per SANKARAN NAIR, J. —(1) The next reversioners having, for consideration, surrendered their interest in the reversion to the widow, what had passed thereunder to the widow was enjoyed by her not as a widow's estate but as absolute property which she had the power to dispose of at her pleasure.

On the second point:—The immediate reversioners having, for consideration, executed the deed in favour of the widow and the plaintiffs, the actual claimants having participated in that benefit, it did not lie in their mouths to impeach the subsequent alienations by the widow. They were consequently estopped from maintaining the suit. Rangappa Naik v. Kamli Naik, 3 M.L.T. 355 (F.B.)=81 M. 366=18 M.L.J. 309.

A suit by some of the reversioners to recover possession of their shares from the lessee of a Hindu widow after her death is maintainable.

Each case of legal necessity must be judged upon its own facts.

The reversioners must establish a very strong case to induce a Court of justice, equity and good conscience to set aside a beneficial arrangement by a Hindu widow which induced a sense of peace and security and one that has had a far-reaching consequence.

If a Hindu widow made a good bargain for herself, and if that bargain did not prejudice the position of the then reversioners, it should be given effect to (a).

If parties arrange to avoid the necessity for legal proceedings, their arrangement is supported by sufficient consideration.

Apart from legal necessity, a widow can validly alienate property that has devolved on her from her husband with the consent of the reversioners. The widow can make such an alienation by the entire surrender of her own interest and thereby accelerate the interest of the reversioners, or she can part with her direct interest in the estate and convert it into an annuity. Subject to the payment of the annuity, the transferee will acquire an absolute interest (b).

The principle of family settlements is applicable to an arrangement by which the persons interested in the property mutually consent that the property shall be managed in a particular and a convenient manner and if the arrangement does not seriously prejudice the parties to it or those who come after them, a Court of Equity will be slow to set it aside.

Ratification in the proper sense of the term, as used with reference to the law of agency, is applicable only to acts done on behalf of the ratifier. A woman with a limited interest could not by acts ex post facto charge upon the estate, which she represents, obligations not originally binding upon it. A Hindu widow cannot be said to give a lease on behalf of the reversioners. The acts performed by the reversioners after the death of the widow cannot amount to a ratification of the lease, as the widow is not the agent of the reversioners (c).

In cases governed by the Mitakshara, a sister comes in as heir to a deceased Hindu immediately after the grandmother, hence, where the competition is between her and a half-brother's son, the latter, being higher in the line among heirs specifically mentioned in the Mitakshara, is entitled to preference over her as heir; though it would be otherwise in cases governed purely by the law of the Vyavahara Mayukha.

The decision of WESTROPP, C.J., (a) so far as it proceeds upon Balambhatta's doctrine, is unsound, and its authority as a binding decision, where the question is between a sister and a half-brother, must be confined to cases to which the law of the Vyavahara Mayukha alone is applicable (b).

The commentary of Balambhatta on the Mitakshara is not regarded by Hindus in the Bombay Presidency as an authority to be accepted in the interpretation of the former work without question. These observations apply more or less to Nanda Pandita also.

It is a well-established rule of the Bombay High Court that where the Mitakshara is silent or obscure, it must, generally speaking, invoke the aid of the Vyavahara Mayukha to interpret it, and harmonise both the works, so far as that is reasonably possible. Bhagwan Vithoba v Warubai Baborao Mudke, 10 Bom. M., a Hindu, died leaving him surviving a widow, and three sons who were deaf and dumb and who were disqualified from inheriting under Hindu Law. M.'s widow accordingly succeeded to the estate of her husband. After M.'s death, one of the disqualified sons married, and a son was born to him. The widow then sold her property to plaintiffs, who sued to recover possession thereof from the defendants (the wife and son of the disqualified son). The defendants contended that the sale was made without necessity and was, therefore, not binding on the defendants —

Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed; since both in fact and in contemplation of law the son of the disqualified son had no existence when the estate vested in the widow; and his subsequent birth could not divest the estate.

Held, further, that the son stood in no better position than would have been occupied by his father, if the latter's disqualification had been removed after the widow had succeeded to the inheritance, and in that case, the widow's title would prevail, inasmuch as it was superior to his while his disqualification lasted (a). Pawadewa v. Where the daughter of a zemindar inherited his estate and built a palace worth Rs 40,000 out of the income of the estate, held, that, though the funds for building were her absolute property, yet the character of the building showed that her intention was to make it a part of the estate, and that, therefore, the building must devolve as part of the estate (a).

In the absence of legal necessity, a Hindu widow can alienate property, to which she has succeeded on the death of her husband, with the consent of the nearest reversioners for the time being. (3) Wife's right to reside in family house—Sale of house for family debt.

A Hindu widow may be turned out of the family house, if the debts, on account of which alienation is being made, are bona fide family debts. The Mahomedan wife or widow is a creditor of her husband on account of her dower, which is a debt; and she is, perhaps, as regards his estate, a creditor preferred to all other creditors. But a Hindu wife or widow is no creditor on account of her maintenance or right of residence. If the estate had dwindled to nothing, as a consequence of family expenditure and family debts incurred by her husband in the ordinary way of business and living, there remains nothing for her, any more than for her husband or his heirs. Nihal Devi v. When the question was whether a Hindu widow acquired a right to alienate the property (immovable) in suit, under a deed of gift or testamentary disposition of her late husband, wherein the word used was malik wa khud akhthar, their Lordships held that, in order to cut down the full proprietary rights that the word malik imports, something must be found in the context to qualify it, and that the fact that the donee was a woman and a widow did not suffice to displace the presumption of absolute ownership implied in the word malik.

(5) Reversioners—Compromise by a widow in suit followed by decree—effect of.

Held, that a compromise made by a person holding a Hindu widow's or Hindu daughter's estate in the property of a deceased husband or father is not binding on the reversioners, even though it has been followed by a decree of Court, and that the reversioners can only be bound by a decree made after a full contest. Mahadei v. (6) Alienation—Consideration binding on reversion—Suit by reversioners to set aside sale deed—Offer to recompense alienees—What Court could not decree.

A Hindu widow is not bound to mortgage any portion of her husband's estate, if that be more prejudicial to her than a sale by reducing her income to a greater extent, as she does not hold the property for the benefit of the reversioner, nor is she bound to raise money on her personal security.

Where a sale deed executed by a Hindu widow was proved to have been effected for the purpose of discharging debts binding on the reversion, the purchase money being found to have been applied in payment of those debts, and where it was not shown that the widow could have paid off these debts otherwise than by a sale of the property, held, that the right of the heir to set aside the sale deed and recover possession of the property from the widow's purchasers, depended upon his refund of, at least, the purchase money binding on the reversion, and that the reversioner, suing to set aside a widow's sale, should offer to reimburse the bona fide purchaser so much of the money as had been legitimately advanced (a).

Courts could not properly decree in the lifetime of the widow that, upon her death, the deeds should be set aside upon payment, by the persons who should succeed to the estate, of the amount which the widow was entitled to raise, inasmuch as it would be contingent upon the will of the persons who might succeed to the inheritance whether they would pay the amount or not, and the purchaser could not properly have been placed by a decree of the Court in a position in which, for many years, he might remain in a state of uncertainty as to whether or not he could safely expend capital in the improvements of the estate. Such a decree would have been unjust to the purchaser and it would be contrary to public policy to place an estate in that position in which it could not be known whether the estate could be safely improved or not. Singan Setti Sanjivi Kondayya v. (9) Alienation by—Alienee having knowledge of the existence of funds to discharge husband's debts—Effect of such knowledge.

A Hindu widow alienated a portion of her deceased husband's estate. The question was whether it was binding upon the estate. It was found that a large portion of the consideration was required to meet a decree-debt of the widow's husband binding upon the property. It was found at the same time that, at the date of alienation, the widow had sufficient funds of her husband to pay off the said decree-debt, and that the alienee was aware of the existence of such funds which the widow might have applied in discharge of the decree-debt. Held, that, in the case of a person with the knowledge of the alienee, no equities arose because he practically assisted the widow to dissipate the estate (a). Srinivasa Sastrigal v. Held further, that in the absence of evidence as to the intention of the widow, it is not equitable to throw the burden of proof on a bona fide purchaser for value.

Held also, that no presumption can be drawn from the mere fact that the property acquired

(17) Right of residence in family-house—Not alienable—Not attachable in execution.

The right of a Hindu widow is to live in the husband's family-house (a).

She has no right to insist on residing in any particular house; and ordinarily when living with the members of her husband's family, she must accept such reasonable arrangement for her residence therein as they may make for her. The interest is, therefore, restricted in its enjoyment to her.

It could not have been contemplated by the Hindu law-givers to allow the transfer of such interest. The case may be different where lands or other property may have been allotted to a widow in lieu of her claim for maintenance. But with respect to the portion of the house granted only for her personal use, her rights of enjoyment cannot be transferred. Recognition of the right of sale might be oppressive to the family and would result in allowing the widow a right to choose a separate residence, even where she is not entitled to do so under the Hindu Law. Salakshi v. (19) Conveyance by a widow of her life estate to reversioner—not invalid by reason of contemporaneous agreement between the widow and the reversioner

Where a Hindu widow conveyed the whole of her limited estate to the next reversioner (her husband's brother) in consideration of an undertaking by the reversioner that he would re-convey the greater portion of the property to a person named by her (namely, her brother), the validity of the transaction is not affected by the fact that it was carried out in pursuance of an undertaking that the reversioner should retain a portion of the property for himself and convey a portion to a third party. The title of a third party who derived interest from the reversioner and the reversioner's title cannot be impeached by the other reversioners.

Per Sankaran Nair, J.—The validity of the renunciation is quite independent of the validity of any agreement as to the disposal or enjoyment of the property by the alienee.

The surrender of her estate by the widow and the consequent vesting of the estate in the presumptive reversioner may be compared with the case of an adoption by the widow which has the effect of divesting her of her estate and vesting it in the adopted son, her husband's heir, the effect of both the transactions being the same so far as the widow and the actual reversioner at the time of her death are concerned.

And as an adoption cannot be set aside on the ground of improper motives, so the validity of a surrender by a widow which stands on a higher footing cannot be affected by her motive or by any such conditions as may be imposed by her. Challa Subbiah Sastri v. Palury Pattabhiramayya, 31 M. 446.

(20) Hindu Law—Simple debt due by a widow—Legal necessity—Only life estate saleable in execution—Res judicata between co-defendants.

When a creditor lends money to a Hindu widow on her personal security and not upon any mortgage of her husband's property, any decree which he obtains on his simple money bond can only bind the rights and interests of the widow, even though the loan was incurred by her for legal necessity (a).

The plaintiffs brought the suit for possession against the defendant, alleging that the mortgage which he held had been satisfied by the usufruct. The plaintiffs and the defendant were co-defendants to a suit for redemption which had been brought by a third party who represented only a portion of the equity of redemption. The plaintiffs who were defendants to that suit did not defend it, although they might have then pleaded that the plaintiff to that suit was not entitled to the whole of the equity of redemption, and that they had also an interest in it as reversioners. In their present suit the plaintiffs claimed possession of a portion of the property setting up their right to it as reversioners. Held, that their present suit was not barred by res judicata, although they might have pleaded their title as owner of a portion of the equity of redemption in the former suit, as it was not incumbent on them to do so, and as the former suit was brought by a person representing a

(2) Hindu Law — Will — Construction—Bequest to "daughters and their respective sons"—Restriction of descent to male issues—Absolute or life-estate—Woman's estate—Survivorship between daughters—Spiritual benefit—Remainder over to sons—Gift over to daughters on failure of adoption—Succession Act (X of 1865), Ss. 82, 116 and 117.

In construing the will of a Hindu it is not improper to take into consideration what are known to be the ordinary notions and wishes of Hindus with respect to the devolution of property. It may be assumed that a Hindu generally desires that an estate, specially an ancestral estate, shall be retained in his family, and it may be assumed that a Hindu knows that, as a general rule, at all events, women do not take absolute estates of inheritance which they are enabled to alienate (a).

In the will of a Hindu drawn up in the English language and probably by an English Solicitor who was one of the attesting witnesses, it was provided, in case of the failure of a prior bequest in favour of a son to be adopted to the testator, (which bequest in fact failed) that the estate was to be made over to and divided between his two daughters in equal shares, "to whom and their respective sons he gave, devised and bequeathed the same" There was a proviso that in the event of one of the daughters dying without leaving any male issue surviving, the share of the deceased daughter was to go to the surviving daughter and her sons—to the exclusion in both cases of female issue. Further, that "in the case of the death of either daughter leaving sons, the share of such daughter was to be paid to such her son or sons' share and share alike."

Held, that under the will the testator's daughters whom he incontestably intended to benefit were to have no more than what is generally known to be a woman's estate in his property ;

That the testator intended to create in their favour an estate for life with a remainder over to their sons ;

That in the events that happened the daughters were entitled to the testator's estate in equal shares for life and with the benefit of survivorship between themselves. Radha Prosad Mullick v. Ranimoni Dassi, 12 C.W.N. 729 (P.C.).

(3) Rules as to construction of—Intention of, testator—Absolute estate.

A Hindu, owning absolute moveable and immoveable property, being without issue, made a will wherein it was stated that he was to continue to be the Malik of all his property as long as he lived, that after his death, his wife and his sister-in-law, who was joint with him, were to be the Malik, and that his wife so long as she remained chaste, and his sister-in-law during her life were to maintain themselves from the rents of the property, without alienating the property unless for some urgent necessity ; and at the end of the will a postscript was added to the effect that his wife and sister-in-law were empowered to alienate the immoveable property in which none else had any interest or claim.

Held, that on the proper construction of the will, the widow and the sister-in-law took absolute estates in the property.

Held also, that in construing a will of this sort the Court will have regard to the following rules collected from the various decisions in previous cases on the subject.

(1) The actual intention of the testator must, as far as possible, be ascertained from the contents of the will itself, considered as a whole, and every clause in it being given effect to (a).

(2) When the will contains a clear expression of intention, effect must be given to it, unambiguous dispositive words not being taken as controlled or qualified by any general expression of intention (b).

• (3) Where some of the provisions of the will could not be reconciled with one another, and the actual intention of the testator could not be ascertained by any means, effect should be given to the last words.

(4) The Court should consider in construing a will such "surrounding circumstances" as may affect the meaning to be attached to the words used in it, e.g., the state of the testator's family; what issue, if any, he left; what near kindred he had; the usual customs, practices, notions, and wishes of his race or caste (d).

(5) Clear words of inheritance, as also words which clearly give a power of disposition, e.g., "to my wife, her children and grand-children," "to my wife, her heirs and assignees" show an intention to confer a heritable and alienable estate (e).

(6) Also words such as "shall become Malik of my property" or "I appoint my wife to the Malikatwa as exercised by myself" confer a heritable and alienable estate, in the absence of indication of different intention (f). But "surrounding circumstances" may suggest a different intention, and it is possible that words such as "my wife is the owner after me," "my wife is the heir," or "shall be my heir and Malik" intend merely emphatically to protect her peaceable possession and management during her life-time (g).

If an absolute estate be clearly given and words are superadded restricting the power of alienation, or imposing any other restriction which is repugnant to the estate given, the restriction should be rejected (h). Goverdhandas v. Yantbai, 1 S.L.R. 211.

—Suit for declaration of property to be debutter—Civ. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882), Ss. 244 and 280—Mortgage decrees—S. 244, applicability of.

The effect of the word "Malik" is to confer on the donee a heritable and alienable estate (a).

But the effect of the word "Malik," may be modified by the context, or, in other words, in order to cut down the full proprietary rights that the word imports, something must be found in the context to qualify it (b).

The Court must, in construing a will, look to all the clauses of the will, and give effect to all the clauses, ignoring none as redundant or contradictory.

Held,—on a construction of the will in the present case, that there is ample indication in the context, to displace the presumption of absolute ownership implied in the word "malik" and to justify the conclusion that the gift in favour of the widow must be cut down to something less than a full proprietary right with power of alienation; that it is impossible to maintain that any absolute devise was made to her, that she took a limited estate under the will, that so far as the will is concerned her powers of alienation were confined to the dedication of property for the benefit of ancestral idol, and the alienation of the property in case of necessity, and that the dedication to a new idol she has established or installed is invalid and the dedicated property is not debutter

Per Mookerjee, J.:—S. 244 of the Civ. Pro. Code has no application to the case where the judgment-debtor tries to set aside the effect of the decree itself. In the case of a mortgage decree, the decree itself directs the sale of the property, and, if objection is taken that the property cannot be sold, because it belonged, not to the judgment-debtor, but to a party who is a stranger to the suit, the propriety of the decree is called in question. A question of this description must be tried in a regular suit and not in the execution proceedings which are based on the assumption that the decree is a good and valid decree (c). Shib Lakshan Bhakat v. Where a testator died leaving a widow and an adopted son.

Held, that the widow could ask for a construction of the will only in so far as it affected her claim to maintenance and not of the whole will (a).

That she had no locus standi to question the validity of certain provisions in the will relating to the establishment and maintenance of certain Thakurs.

A widow cannot be deprived of her right to maintenance by any provision in a Dayabhaga will.

Per Caspersz, J.—The amount of maintenance fixed by the testator, when it is not a nominal amount and not contrary to any provision of Hindu Law, cannot be varied by the Court.

Per Cox, J.—The husband has no right to reduce the amount of a chaste widow's maintenance below the proper provision, which has to be calculated on (1) the value of the estate, (2) the position and status of the deceased husband and the widow. Great weight should, however, be attached to a statement in the husband's will as to the amount, not as a legal limitation to the widow's right but as evidence of what in the husband's estimate a lady in the position of his widow should need. But a husband may, within limits, lay down that his widow shall forfeit her maintenance if she does not live in the family house.

Per Caspersz, J.—A Hindu widow is not obliged to live a life of asceticism. She is bound to perform various religious, social and domestic ceremonies. She is not entitled to a bare subsistence or a starving allowance.

Where the will provided that the widow was to receive Rs. 125 a month as maintenance, provided she lived either in his house at Madhupur or his house at Benares and it was found that testator's concubines lived in the Benares house and the Madhupur house was uninhabitable, table, and the widow proposed to live with the adopted son in Calcutta.

Held, (per Curiam) that she had just cause for refusing to live in the Madhupur or Benares house, and a sum of Rs. 320 a month was a proper allowance for her maintenance under the circumstances—and the said amount should be made a charge upon the estate.

The decision in a former suit, of questions not absolutely necessary for the determination of that suit, cannot be regarded as res judicata between the same parties in a later suit.

If there be an express gift to the sons by a will of all the testator's properties, his widow's right to a share on partition by the sons is defeated (a).

The direction in a will—"On my youngest son, attaining the age of 21 years the said executrix shall divide my properties among my sons in equal shares" was construed not to operate as an express gift in favour of the sons but only to postpone partition to a particular date (b).

When a Hindu mother is otherwise entitled to a share in lieu of her maintenance on the partition of the father's estate by the sons, her right is not affected by the fact that she has already inherited a share of the same estate from one of her deceased sons (c).

In estimating the share which a mother is entitled to in lieu of her maintenance out of the father's estate, credit must be given for any property which she has received as stridhan from the father's estate (d). Poorendra Nath Sen v. Srimati Hemangini Dassee, 12 C.W.N. 1002

Where a Hindu made a bequest of some of his property to his wife and one of his sons jointly, held that the two together took an absolute estate under the will.

held, that arguments directed against the soundness of the doctrine as to the exclusion of the Nadars and showing inconsistencies in the treatment of the Nadars by the worshippers at the temple in other respects were of no avail and could not be entertained

Where the hereditary trustee of the temple, after a decree had been made in his favour as representing the worshippers at the temple and pending an appeal by the Shanars, sought to enter into a compromise with them by admitting their right to worship in the temple contrary to the decision of the Court, and it was alleged and not disproved that he did so from a corrupt motive; held, that the appellate Court very properly reinforced the cause of the worshippers of the temple by joining certain new plaintiffs.

The principles applicable to the case of a trustee who betrays his trust by surrendering a decree were well stated and applied by the High Court.

In all cases where the Court sees that the trustees are wholly uninterested in the matter and there are parties who are materially interested in the question, it never makes a decree in the absence of those parties who are alone interested in the contest (a).

It is the duty of the trustee to maintain the customary usage of the institution, and if he fails to do so he is guilty of a breach of trust and still more so, if he deliberately attempts to effect a vital change of usage and to make it binding on the worshippers by obtaining a decree of the Court to establish it (b) Sankaralinga Nadan v. A certain land, classed as village service Inam, was sold in 1889 and the Inam was enfranchised or resumed in 1891.

Held that any transfer of Inam forming the emoluments of Village Officers and Servants is, by Reg. VI of 1831, which was in force in 1899, null and void; for the alienation as a whole must be null and void; it is not possible to alienate the land and reserve the benefit of the right to withhold the payment of the assessment payable thereon; but, when the land was enfranchised in 1891, it became alienable and the purchaser became entitled to require that the transfer should operate on the alienable interest acquired by the seller (a). *Angannayya v. (1) Defendants blocking up channel of Government irrigating plaintiff's lands—Plaintiff deprived of use of water of that channel—Suit for injunction—Relations between ryot and Government with reference to supply of water—Express finding as to damage, whether necessary—Burden of proof.

The defendants, by blocking up the entrance of a small Government channel irrigating the lands of the plaintiff, deprived him of the use of the water of that channel, and the plaintiff prayed for an injunction restraining the defendants from repeating the obstruction; the defence was that, the supply of water for irrigation being made by the Government to the ryot on the footing of contract, the defendant obstructing the plaintiff's supply could be made liable, if at all, only on proof of actual damage, of which it was alleged there was no proof.

Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the injunction.

Per White, C.J. —Whether the relations between the plaintiff and Government with reference to the supply of water be regarded as contractual, or whether the plaintiff's right to the water of the channel be regarded as a proprietary right appurtenant (a) to ownership of the land, the plaintiff was entitled to the injunction without any express finding as to damage (b). Even if damage is not to be presumed in such a case, the onus lay on the defendants to show that no damage was sustained by the plaintiff.

Per Miller, J. —In order that an injunction may be issued, it is enough to show that the act complained of was done in such a way as to be likely to damage the plaintiff, though proof of specific damage be not given (c).

Insolvency Act (St. 11 and 12, Yic. C. 40).

- (1) S. 7—Insolvent—Vesting order—Official Assignee—Withdrawal of the petition for insolvency—Right of Official Assignee to maintain a suit.

On the 14th October, 1903, a petition in insolvency was filed and a vesting order was made by the Court. On the 15th June, 1904, the insolvents took out a rule nisi to withdraw their petition; and the rule was made absolute on the 21st September, 1904. But the rules were not drawn up till 27th February, 1906. In the meanwhile, the Official Assignee filed a suit on the 2nd March, 1905, on behalf of the insolvents, to recover a sum of money alleged to be due to the insolvent's firm in respect of certain mercantile transactions. It was objected that the Official Assignee was not entitled to maintain the suit:—

Held that, at the date of the institution of the suit, the insolvency proceedings were still in force; and the assets of the insolvents still remained vested in the Official Assignee. The subsequent coming into force of the order could not vitiate (a) the institution of the suit, and it was clear that the Official Assignee was competent to bring the suit. He was also competent to continue it, for the order of withdrawal, even after it became operative, was not effective to divest the Official Assignee and re-vest the property in the insolvents.

The withdrawal of a petition for insolvency does not operate to discharge the vesting order. A withdrawal for which no provision is made in the Act cannot be regarded as the legal equivalent of a dismissal by consent. Haji Sajan Lalji v. N.C. Macleod, 10 Bom. L.R. 178=32 B. 321.

Instalment decree.(1) Default in payment of instalment—Rights of decree-holder—Waiver—Limitation.

No distinction can be drawn between a case in which it is provided that, on non-payment of an instalment, the whole amount shall become due, and one in which it is provided that, on non-payment of an instalment, the whole amount may be claimed. The provision being for the benefit of the creditor, the presumption is that he does not waive it, and the defendant may well consider the whole amount to be due from the time that the creditor has a right to enforce it (a).

Where it is clear from the terms of the decree that the decree-holder had, on default being made, a right either to enforce payment of the whole amount, or to issue execution for the one instalment only, and he actually applies for executing the decree for the full amount, he thereby does an unequivocal act, to the knowledge of the defendant, showing which of the two inconsistent alternatives open to him he adopts, and his election is final. And the mere fact that he subsequently agreed not to enforce payment of the whole amount would not amount to revocation of his election.

An execution application made after three years from the date of such default or election will be barred. Jethanand Topandas v. Lalamal Sitalmal, 1 S.L.R. 252.

When a mortgage was about to pay off the mortgage-amount to an assignee of the mortgage, the mortgagee disputed the assignment and also claimed to be paid the mortgage-amount. The mortgagor thereupon filed a suit impleading both the mortgagee and the assignee as defendants. The plaint contained, in substance, a claim for redemption, but it also prayed that the defendants should be required to interplead concerning their claims to the mortgage-amount, and that the mortgagor should be indemnified in consequence of the loss of the original mortgage deed. Prior to the hearing the defendants agreed that the assignee was

Defendant, decree-holder, in execution of his decree against the judgment-debtor attached half of a certain house. Plaintiff, not a party to the decree, sued both the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor for a declaration, having first objected unsuccessfully under S. 278, Civ. Pro. Code, that the property belonged to him and not to the judgment-debtor and so was not liable to attachment. The property was worth Rs. 660, but the decree in execution of which it was attached was for Rs. 41-4-0 only. The judgment-debtor sided with the decree-holder and denied the plaintiff's claim to the property, claiming it as his own.

Held, by the Full Bench, that the value of the suit for purposes of jurisdiction and course of appeal is to be taken at Rs. 660, the value of the property attached, and not Rs. 41-4-0, the amount of the decree, and hence an appeal lay to the Divisional Judge and not to the District Judge.

Obiter. Per JOHNSTONE, J.—There are three possible classes of suits under S. 283, Civ. Pro. Code.

(a) When property attached has been released on objection, suit by decree-holder for a declaration that the property is liable to attachment.

(b) When property attached has not been released, the objection being disallowed, suit by the objector against the decree-holder to declare the property not liable, the judgment-debtor siding with the objector, and not claiming the property as his own.

(c) When property attached has not been released, the objection being disallowed, suit by the objector against the decree-holder to declare the property not liable, the judgment-debtor resisting the suit and claiming the pro-

If a Court of appeal decides that the original Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, the right course to adopt is to return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court (a).

Consent of parties cannot confer jurisdiction upon a Court, where it has not inherent jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the litigation, and the judgment of a Court which lacks this essential jurisdiction, is totally void and this would not be cured by waiver or acquiescence (b).

Where, however, the defect is not apparent on the face of the proceedings, where specially the question of jurisdiction depends upon a fact the existence of which is alleged by one of the parties in the Court of first instance and not controverted by the other, it is not obligatory upon a superior Court to enter into the question, specially where, in order to adjudicate upon the question satisfactorily, a further investigation of the facts would be essential (c).

If the want of jurisdiction appeared on the face of the pleadings or the admission of the parties or upon the evidence, the question could not only be raised in appeal for the first time, but it would be the duty of the Court to entertain it (d).

When an objection as to jurisdiction is taken for the first time before the Appellate Court, and it becomes at least one upon which there is reasonable ground for uncertainty, the Court

(3) Determination of jurisdiction by plaintiff and plaintiff's allegations—Defendant's plea immaterial—Punjab Tenancy Act, Ss. 77 (3) and 100.

Ordinarily, the jurisdiction is determined by the plaintiff and the allegations of plaintiff, and, in this connection, the defendant's pleas are immaterial. So, where plaintiff sues for the value of trees cut by defendant, on land alleged to belong to plaintiff and with which the defendant has no concern, but the defendant pleaded that he was an occupancy tenant of the land and so was entitled to the trees cut, held, that the suit was one for a Civil Court. Although the question of occupancy rights cannot properly be determined by a Civil Court, still, the rule above mentioned for determining jurisdiction should not be departed from; and the Civil Court should simply ignore the defendant's plea, which under the law it cannot take cognizance of, leaving the defendant to sue in a Revenue Court separately for establishment of his alleged status. Fakiria v. Dhani Nath, 24 P.R. 1907=26 P.L.R. 1908=131 P.W.R.1907.

Per Curiam—The Courts in British India have no jurisdiction to decide the question as to who is entitled to succeed to the Raja of a foreign sovereign State.

Where a suit was brought ostensibly for a declaration in regard to rights to immoveable property within British territory belonging to a foreign sovereign but with the real object of setting aside the appointment by such sovereign of his son as his immediate successor, Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to go into the question of the validity of such appointment.

A person cannot sue for a declaration of his right unless he has an existing right, and a mere contingent right which may never ripen into an actual existing right is not sufficient to ground an action for such a declaration

A negative declaration that the defendant had no right on the ground amongst others that the defendant was illegitimate was, in the Court's discretion, refused, specially as the Raja who was deeply interested in the question was not made a party, the suit having been instituted against the son (a).

Per Doss, J.—When the question is one of succession to immoveable property on the demise of the owner, the fact that such owner is a foreign sovereign does not deprive the Court of its jurisdiction to decide the question; nor, in deciding such question, is the Court bound merely to register the decree of the foreign sovereign, however opposed it may be to the law of the land.

An act of state of the foreign sovereign has no operation beyond his own territory.

Quære.—Whether the State in the exercise of its executive functions can settle a question of disputed succession to land forming part of its territory and thereby oust Municipal Courts of their jurisdiction to decide it, without encroaching upon its legislative functions or derogating from its legislative powers. Shamarendra Chandra Deb Barman v. If the question of jurisdiction depends for its determination upon facts not found by the lower Courts, an appellant cannot ask the High Court to find them; the appellant must substantiate his contention if he can, on the facts already found. If he is unable to point to any facts in respect of his plea, that plea must fail.

The ordinary Civil Courts cannot be ousted of their jurisdiction in the absence of an express provision of law to that effect (a).

Gochur lands cannot be classed in the same category as common lands.

The Civil Courts must adjudicate on the rights of the parties as they existed when the plaint was filed and not on any title subsequently derived (b).

The entry in the settlement record is not conclusive; it is only a matter of presumption.

The holding of a survey number in section 2 (10), explanation II of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act has reference to the holding when the proceedings in a Civil Court are initiated, and it cannot avail a person that in a subsequent settlement he was recorded as a tenant. Purkhit Panda v. - (5) Contract of sale—Arbitration—Jurisdiction of Court—Consent of parties—Inherent jurisdiction.

In a contract of sale made at Kasur in the Punjab for the purchase of rape-seed consisting of 24 clauses, cls. 20 and 23, provided that, should a dispute arise under the contract, it should be settled by two European arbitrators appointed at Karachi by the buyers and sellers respectively, that, for all purposes, the contract should be deemed to have been made in Karachi and to be performed there and that the Karachi Courts should, except for the purpose of enforcing any award made in pursuance of the arbitration, have exclusive jurisdiction over the parties.

In a suit to file the award under the Act, the defendants contended that the Judicial Commissioner's Court at Sind had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

Held, that the question whether or not the Court had jurisdiction to file the award and enforce it as a decree depended upon, whether or not it had jurisdiction to entertain a suit of which the subject-matters were disputes arising out of contracts entered into outside the jurisdiction of the Court.

Held, also, that as the cause of action arose beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, it could not base its jurisdiction on a fiction invented by a couple of possible litigants (p), and that the application to file the award should be rejected.

"Inherent jurisdiction" of a Court means nothing more than its ordinary, permanent jurisdiction; and, if a Court does not possess inherent jurisdiction over the subject-matter in suit, the agreement of parties cannot confer it (b).

The Judicial Commissioner's Court in Sind has not jurisdiction to try all suits for breach of contract. It has power to try only a certain class of such suits. Louis Dreyfus and Co. v. Miran Bux Kadir Bux, 2 Sind. L.R. 37.

A Munsiff has no jurisdiction to try a suit brought under S. 77 of the Registration Act to direct registration of a will, where the will in question disposes of property more than Rs. 2,500 in value. The suit is one to which Art. 17 (6) of the second Schedule of the Court Fees Act applies and not one to which S. 7, cl. 4 (c), is applicable; that is to say, it is a suit, in which it is not possible to estimate at money value the subject-matter in dispute, and which is not otherwise provided for in the Act (a).

Per WHITE, C.J.—As regards the question of value for the purposes of jurisdiction, the valuation for the purposes of Court-fees is conclusive.

Per SUBRAHMANIA AIYAR, J.—In the absence of specific statutory provisions, the jurisdiction of Courts with reference to the pecuniary value of the subject matter ought, having regard to the general considerations underlying the condition of the mofussil Courts in the country to depend upon a basis ascertainable and determinable by the Court itself wherever that is practicable and not upon mere will of one of the parties to the litigation, viz, the plaintiff (b).

- (1) Suit for declaration that plaintiffs, who are occupancy tenants, are not liable to pay haq bua—Jurisdiction.

A suit for a declaration that the plaintiffs, who are occupancy tenants, are not liable to pay "door tax" haq bua to the defendants, who are the proprietors of the village is cognisable only by the Revenue Courts and not by the Civil Courts. Gamu v. - (2) Suit for wages—Rate fixed by Record of Rights

A suit for the wages of a labourer is cognisable by a Civil Court, and the fact that the rate of wages is fixed by the record of rights does not make the wages payable a cess, S. 77 (3) (j) of the Punjab Tenancy Act is not applicable. Gujar v. Dula, 41 P.R. 1908=88 P.W.R. 1908=178 P.L.R. 1908.

- (3) Suit for declaration of mukarraridari rights.

The Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit by a person for a declaration that he has mukarraridari rights in certain land. The fact that a mukarraridar is a tenant, not a sub-proprietor, does not necessarily make S. 77 of the Punjab Tenancy Act applicable to the suit. Nawab Khan v. - (4) Jurisdiction—Central Provinces Rent Law (Act IX of 1883), S. 43—Central Provinces Tenancy Act of 1898, S. 45, cl. (3), 47—Occupancy holding, transfer of part of—Limited interest—Adverse possession.

When statutory rights and liabilities have been created, and jurisdiction has been conferred upon a special Court for the investigation of matters, which may possibly be in controversy, such jurisdiction is exclusive and cannot concurrently be exercised by the ordinary Court.

When a transfer of occupancy holding was effected without the consent of the landlord at a time when the rent law in force was Act IX of 1883 as amended by Act XVII of 1889, the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for ejectment. But it is otherwise after the passing of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act of 1898 (b).

The change made in the law in this respect in 1898 is not of procedure only, it affects substantive rights.

S. 43 of the Tenancy Act of 1883 refers to transfers of entire holdings and not of a portion only. So long as the original tenancy subsists the landlord has no right to re-enter and oust the persons, who are in the land by license from the tenant (c).

The possession of a limited interest in immoveable property may be just as much adverse for purpose of passing a suit for the determination of that limited interest, as adverse possession of a complete interest in the property operates to bar a suit for the whole property: but such adverse possession of a limited interest though a good plea to a suit for ejectment, is good only to the extent of that interest; the nature and effect of possession must depend upon the nature and extent of the rights asserted by the overt conduct or express declaration of the person relying on it there can be no acquisition by adverse possession of an absolute title, when nothing but a limited interest has been asserted (d). Icharam Singh v. Nilmony Bahida, 7 C.L.J. 499=12 C.W.N. 636=85 C. 470.

S sued for possession of 8 kanals 6 marlas of land, alleging that he was occupancy tenant of 6 kanals 18 marlas belonging to C and others, and had become proprietor of the remaining 1 kanal 8 marlas by long adverse possession.

He took some land on lease from C and others, who sued for his ejectment in a Revenue Court and obtained a decree, which by mistake and without his knowledge included the land in suit in the land from which he was to be ejected, and that he was ejected from it in execution of said decree.

Held, that, the suit as framed is of the civil nature, and that neither any provision of the Punjab Tenancy Act nor, under S. 13, Civ. Pro. Code, the previous decree of the Revenue Court, bars a Civil Court from taking its cognizance (a). Shib Dyal v. Must Chirag Bibi, 73 P.W.R. 1908=124 P.L.R. 1908 defendant denied that he was a tenant, and the Court decided to determine the question of title, it ceased to be a Revenue Court and became for the moment a Civil Court. (u), Indian Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Art. 135—Construction of the mortgage deed and lease.*

Held, that, where a mortgage of revenue paying land is with possession, but the mortgagee is to charge interest at a certain rate on the mortgage money and leaves the mortgagor to occupy the land in consideration of receiving, within a fixed time, a lump sum, as malikana, calculated at that rate, and the mortgagor agrees to pay interest at an enhanced rate if he fails to pay the malikana regularly, and, in case of making default in payment of the interest, further, allows the mortgagee either to eject him to take a share of the produce by division or to realize rent as Chakota, the relation of landlord and tenant is not thereby created between the mortgagee and the mortgagor, and an ejectment suit of this nature does not fall within the jurisdiction of a Revenue Court (a).

Jurisdiction—(Continued).—3.—(Of Civil and Revenue Courts)—(Ctd.).

Held, also, that limitation of twelve years for obtaining possession of the land in dispute prescribed under Art. 135 of Act XV of 1877 began to run from the date of making default in payment of the malikana or interest. Nathan Singh v. Mina Mal, 17 P.W.R. 1908.

(11)—Landlord and Tenant—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901) U.P.S. 79—Order in ejectment—Suit in Civil Court by lessee of a tenant—Res judicata.

An occupancy tenant leased his land to the plaintiffs. Subsequently he relinquished his rights in favour of the Zemindar. The Zemindar took proceedings in the Revenue Court and got the plaintiffs ejected and put other persons as tenants of the land in dispute. In the meantime he continued to take rent from the lessees but without prejudice to his contesting the lease. Held that the relation of landlord and tenant subsisted between the parties up to the date when the landlord got the lessees ejected. The suit of the lessees for possession was consequently a case which was cognisable by a Revenue Court and was therefore barred by the rule of res judicata on account of the judgment of the Revenue Court in ejectment proceedings. Balwant Singh v. Held that the suit fell within the purview of cl. (j) of S. 77 (3) of the Punjab Tenancy Act and was one cognisable only by a Revenue Court and not by a Civil Court. Abdul Rasul v. Feroz Din, 128 P.R. 1908.

Landlord and Tenant.

The presumption of law, and the general rule in the absence of custom, is that the property in timber on a tenant's holding vests in the Zemindar, and that the tenant has no right to cut and remove such timber. But, in the absence of custom or of a contract to the contrary, a Zemindar has no right to interfere with the enjoyment by his tenant of the trees upon his holdings as long as the relation of landlord and tenant subsists.

Hence, where the Courts below granted to the plaintiff zemindar, an injunction, to restrain the tenants from offering obstruction to the cutting down and removal of the trees upon the holding, held, (affirming the judgment of Richards, J.) that the injunction was improper and had been rightly refused. Ganga Dei v. A denial of the existence of relation of landlord and tenant and setting up a third party as landlord in a previous rent suit by some of the landlords amounts to renunciation of all by the tenant. The latter, therefore, incurs a liability to have his tenancy forfeited.

Though in England any joint tenant may put an end to his demise so far as it operates on his own shares, whether his companions join him in putting an end to the whole lease or not, yet according to the Indian decisions the relation created by the several joint landlords continues until there exists a new and complete volition to change it. This is the law when the khas possession is the relief asked for against the tenant but not in cases of trespassers and tenants when khas possession is not sought for (a).

Where the relation of joint landlords continues, the tenancy of the lessees cannot be put an end to except by all the lessees acting together.

(15) Tanka-tenure—Revenue-sale—(Act VII of 1868 B.C.), Ss. 1 and 14—Ejectment—Revenue Sale Law (Act XI of 1859), S. 29—Subsisting title at date of suit—Title, recognition of, as tankidar, if sufficient to give right of suit—"Revenue" and "proprietor" meaning of—Tankidar, amount due from, and payable to Government—Revenue—Sale by Collector for Government dues, if legal—Occupancy raiyats, protection of, from ejectment—Sale, effect of—Suit, frame of—Multifariousness—Tanka tenures, nature of settlement of—Regulation VII of 1822, S. 10, clauses 3, 4, 5, 7 and 8—Origin and incidents of such tenures.

The word "Revenue," as defined in Act VII of 1868 (B.C.) includes every sum annually payable to the Government by the proprietor of an estate or tenure in respect thereof; and the word "proprietor," includes any tenant by whom any estate or tenure is held directly under the Government.

Upon the disappearance of the Zemindars who held the tenures (tanka tenures) directly from the Government under successive temporary settlements, upon their refusal to take fresh settlements at the time of a re-settlement, the tankidars came into direct relations with the Government and became proprietors of the tenures which were thenceforth held by them under the Government within the meaning of S. 1 of Act VII of 1868 (B.C.) and the sum annually payable by them in respect of the tenures would be rightly described as revenue, within the meaning of the same provision of the law; and the Collector has ample authority to bring such tenures to sale under the provisions of Act VII of 1868 (B.C.).

If the tankidars in a body are the tenure-holders liable for the payment of the Government revenue, each of them prima facie has to contribute a portion of the sum payable. The payment of such sum by any tankidar is payment by him in his character as a member of the body of tankidars; merely because he cultivates the land in his occupation, he cannot be regarded as a cultivating raiyat under the entire body of tankidars which includes himself as a member. The tankidars cannot therefore be regarded as occupancy raiyats protected from eviction under S. 14 of Act VII of 1868 (B.C.).

The cause of action of a plaintiff suing in ejectment cannot be affected by the title under which the defendant prefers to hold possession. What concerns the plaintiff is that another is wrongfully in possession of what belongs to him and that fact gives him his cause of action. What the plaintiff is entitled to claim is the recovery of possession of the land as a whole and not in fragments, and all persons who oppose him in the enforcement of that right are concerned in his cause of action and ought accordingly to be made parties to the suit in which he seeks to eject them, and particularly so, when they combine to keep him out of possession (a).

It cannot be affirmed as a matter of law that upon default of payment by a tankidar, the entire village is liable to be brought to sale so as to destroy the right of all the tenure-holders. The question depends upon the circumstance whether the settlement originally was under cls. 3, 4 and 5 or under cls. 7 and 8 of S. 10 of Reg. VII of 1822.

The fundamental distinction between the two kinds of settlement is that in the case of settlement under cls. 2, 3 and 4, the settlement is made with a Sudder Malguzar who represents all the persons interested in the property, and his default makes the entire tenure liable for sale unless there is a provision to the contrary in the settlement, and in the case of a settlement under cls. 7 and 8, there is a settlement with a selected person as Sudder Malguzar, but his default does not make the entire tenure liable to sale, unless there is a specific provision to the contrary in the settlement.

A settlement can be made under cls. 7 and 8 only in the case of cultivating proprietors who hold their tenure in putteedari or bhyacharee or similar form (c). Bandhu Acharja v. Nathni Bahar Singh, 7 C.L.J. 460.

"Once a tenant always a tenant." Where a tenant has possession and enjoyment of certain land by virtue of his lease, he can never obtain ownership by prescription in any part of his leasehold, during the term of the lease (a). The ownership in trees standing on tenancy lands is always with the landlord, and whenever such trees, or any parts thereof, are severed from the soil, under the general law, such trees and parts can be taken away by the landlord. This general law may be varied by contract or custom, but in the absence of these, it is the law to be applied (b). While the landlord is the owner of the trees on the lands of his tenants, the tenant is entitled to the natural produce of such trees, namely, fruits and flowers as long as there is no custom or contract to the contrary (c).

Lac is a dark red transparent resin which is the deposit of an insect on the twigs of the palas or parsa trees. It is neither timber nor fruit. It can only be collected by lopping off the twigs to which it is adherent. These several branches of the trees standing in tenant's lands are the property of the landlord, and in the absence of a special contract or custom to the contrary, the lac spontaneously deposited must go with them. The landlord is entitled to enter the land, in a reasonable manner, for the purpose of collecting and carrying away such produce.

Where there is no custom or contract to the contrary, the landlord or tenant cannot make use of the land let for agricultural purposes for the propagation of lac, for, where the letting is purely for agricultural purposes, the tenant is bound to occupy and use the land for agriculture and for purposes subservient to agriculture. The landlord may take such reasonable steps as may be necessary to protect the lac already on the trees. But with the protection and removal of existing lac, the landlord's right comes to an end, while the tenancy lasts. The occupancy right over the entire holding lies in the tenant, and for the time being, he is in physical possession of the trees. The landlord cannot disturb that possession. He cannot conserve the existing plantation, nor add to it, as if it were situated on his home-farm. The tenant can use the entire area for agricultural purposes and, except with his consent, the landlord cannot appropriate any part thereof for lac industry. The tenant can insist on the removal, within a reasonable time, of the whole existing lac, so that he may clear the land for the plough. But it is only when the tenant is ready to bring any area under the plough that he can insist on the necessary clearance; otherwise he may render himself liable in damages. Hiria v. By a deed of mortgage, certain land was mortgaged with possession, and the mortgagor agreed that, for a term of six years, he would hold as tenant under the mortgagee and pay rent at a certain rate. In default of payment of rent, he was to pay interest at a certain rate, and in default of redemption in six years, the land was considered to be sold. No interest or rent had ever been paid nor had the mortgagee applied for mutation of names in his favour, although he was bound to report the acquisition of his right by S. 34 of the Land Revenue Act. After the death of the parties to the original transaction and after 12 years had elapsed, during which no action had been taken on the mortgage, the mortgagee's heirs sued the mortgagor's heirs for possession under the deed. Held, that the mortgagor's heirs did not occupy the position of mere tenants of the mortgagee and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to be put in possession as landlord, inasmuch as the mere execution years ago of a document of that character not acted upon in any way and not even brought to the notice of the revenue authorities could not be held to alter the status of the owner into that of the tenant of the mortgagee. Nizam v. An interessee termini is an existing real right which gives the owner thereof an immediate right of entry and, consequently, entitles him to serve a notice to quit to the tenant in possession.

The plaintiff who had an interessee terminum gave notice to quit, through his attorneys, to the defendant, a tenant in possession, in the following terms —“ We give you notice that our client will require you to vacate and give up possession of the premises on the 29th February now next, and that should you fail to comply with the request, our client will take proceedings against you to eject you from the premises, and he will charge you the sum of Rs. 350 per mensem as damages sustained by him during such period as you continue in possession after the 29th proximo.”

Held, it was good clear notice to quit and the addition of the second portion of the notice did not vitiate it (a).

The defendant began to occupy the tenement from the 1st April, 1904, and submitted that the notice to quit ought to have been made to expire on the 1st March and not the 29th February.

Held, the notice to expire on the 29th February was good, although it would be more usual to make the notice expire on the 1st March (b).

profits and prayed for an injunction to restrain the Mahager from recovering by warrant the rent reserved in the lease, as the closing of the canal was a breach of the lessor's covenant for possession without interruption.

It is open to the Zemindar and the tenureholder to contract themselves out of the provisions of S. 41 of the Bengal Cess Act.

Where in a perpetual mokurari lease the rent was fixed by a clause which runs.—“ At varying jamas, to wit, at an annual uniform jama of Rs. 1,580 from 1284 to 1291 (Fasli) and at an annual uniform consolidated jama of Rs. 1,585 of the current coin from 1292 (Fasli) together with abwab such as selami for Dussarah and Holi, Purkha, San, Road cess, Public Works cess, etc., all of which are included in that very sum of Rs. 1,585.”

Lease.

(1) Condition for payment of rent in advance—Suit by purchaser of demised property for rent—Registration—Notice.

Certain property was leased for a term of ten years, the lease containing a provision to the effect that, if at any time during the currency of the lease, the lessor should demand any portion of the rent in advance from the lessee, the latter should be bound to pay it on obtaining a receipt. Subsequently to the execution of this lease, the demised property was sold by auction in execution of a decree. The auction purchaser sued the lessee for rent, but was met by the plea that the rent claimed had been paid to the lessor in advance under the terms of the lease. The lease was registered, and it was found that the auction purchaser had not made inquiry of either the lessor or the lessee, as to whether or not any rent had been paid in advance, according to the terms of the lease. Held that, under these circumstances, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Nand Kishore v. Anwar Hussain, A.W.N. (1908), 13=5 A.L.J. 91=3 M.L.T. 195=30 A. 82.

A forfeiture may be incurred for a breach of any covenant only in case the lease contains a condition or proviso for re-entry for a breach of such covenant (a). Miran Bakhsh v Aziz Bakhsh, 53 P.R. 1908=106 P.W.R. 1908.

(4) Lease, unregistered, when admissible in evidence—Transfer of Property Act (X of 1882), Ss 107 and 130—lien—Charge—Assignment.

Where a lease which requires registration is not registered, it cannot be put in evidence. But, if parties to it have acted upon its terms, if certain course of conduct has been pursued by either which, in point of fact, constitutes the relation of landlord and tenant between them, and if, in pursuance of that relation, one party has deposited money as security for the due performance of covenants in the lease, then a person suing to recover the money deposited may give the lease in evidence for the purpose of proving his right to recover the deposit.

The admission of the lease for such purpose does not contravene the provisions of the Registration Act, because it is used for a collateral purpose.

S 107 of the Transfer of Property Act does not say that, if parties without any lease conduct themselves towards each other as if they are landlord and tenant, and moneys pass from one to the other in pursuance of that conduct upon the understanding that it will be repaid in a certain event, there can be no right to recover that money. In such a case the right to recover arises, not upon the lease, because according to law no lease exists, but upon an independent equity arising from the conduct of the parties and founded upon the law of estoppel.

The mere fact that parties have described a transaction as a 'lien' or 'charge' cannot deprive it of its real nature, if in substance the transaction is an assignment. Where a creditor purports to create a lien or charge on the debt due to him in favour of another person, the word 'lien' or 'charge' has no meaning except as giving the latter a right to recover the debt from the debtor. The transaction is in reality one whereby the owner of what in English law is called a chose in action transfers it to another. Ardeshir Bajasji Surji v. Syed Sirdar Ali Khan, 10 Bom.L.R. 1146.

(5) Accession to leased land by alluvion—Right of lessee—Transfer of Property Act, S 108—Difference between lands temporarily inundated and those becoming part of a river bed.

By a lease-deed, the lessor gave a lease of his jaghir land to the plaintiff, which provided, after giving the measurement of the land, that the lessee would be entitled every season to cultivate them, both kacho and pako, and appropriate all produce realised from the land, as also from trees, pasturage and fishing. At the foot of the deed, the boundaries of the jaghir were given, and the boundary to the east was stated to be the river Indus. Subsequently 200 jerebs of land were washed away by the river, and later on a piece of land about 2,000 jerebs was added to the jaghir by the river having receded. In a suit by the plaintiff for enforcing his right to the accessions, the defendant contended that the jaghir was subject to large variations in area, through the action of alluvion, diluvion and dereliction, and that all accessions were held and enjoyed by him as part of the jaghir.

Held that the land in dispute was included in the term "kacho" and that the plaintiff was entitled to such accession, not only under the lease-deed, but also under S. 108, Transfer of Property Act (a).

The owner never loses his proprietary right in the land that is merely inundated, it always remains his land and the water over it is not part of a public river. But when land has once become the bed of a public river, it ceases to be the property of the former owner until it is again restored by the river, and even then he can only assert his right, if he can clearly identify the land (b) Seth Asandas v. Mir Hassan Khan, 2 Sind L.R. 1.

The administration of justice is a matter for fair and bona fide discussion, but newspaper writers have to be careful as to the language they use, and it is essential for them to differentiate between comments and allegations of fact in which latter case, either the truth of such allegations, or privilege must be established in order to successfully defend an action for the publication of the libel. Imputing to a person the commission of a criminal offence does not come within the range of fair comment (a).

In the case of a libel against a class of persons, if the description in the libel can be shown to be applicable to one of such persons, that person may bring an action for damages for the libel (b).

Several plaintiffs joined to institute a suit well within the prescribed period of limitation; on an objection being raised as to misjoinder of parties and of causes of action, the plaint was amended by striking out the names of all the plaintiffs but one, who elected to continue to carry on the suit so instituted within time; held, the suit was not barred (c).

(2) Privilege—Trade protective society—Information as to position of business man supplied to subscribers for consideration—Volunteering of information—Welfare of society not served by such business—American authorities, value of.

The defendants carried on the business of a trade protective society, their business consisting in obtaining information with reference to the commercial standing and position of persons in the State of New South Wales and elsewhere and in communicating such information confidentially to the subscribers to the agency in response to specific and confidential inquiry on their part.

Held, that the defendants are really to be regarded as volunteers in supplying the information which they profess to have at their disposal, and their motive in carrying on the business is self-interest.

That having regard to the method which will be naturally adopted in carrying on such a business, it is not for the welfare of the society that the protection which the law throws around communications made in legitimate self-defence or from a bona fide sense of duty, should be extended to communications made from motives of self-interest by persons who trade for profit in the characters of other people.

In cases which are near the line and in cases which may give rise to a difference of opinion, the circumstance that information is volunteered is an important element for consideration.

Held, in an action for libel brought against the defendants by a firm in respect of whom the defendants had made communications to a subscriber, that the same were not made on a privileged occasion (a).

(2) Possession of land on donee dying without heir in male line—Cause of action—Art. 144, Sch. II to Limitation Act XV of 1877—Plaintiff to succeed on strength of his own title.

Held, that a claim for possession of immovable property on the ground that it was gifted by plaintiff's ancestors and that on failure of the donee's male line plaintiff is entitled to succeed by custom, is barred by limitation if not brought within twelve years from the date on which the donee dies leaving no heir in the male line.

Held, that plaintiff is to succeed on the strength of his own title and not on the weakness of that of the defendant. Badar Din v. Kale Khan, 63 P.W.R. 1908

I of Schedule to Punjab Act I of 1900—Art. 141 of second schedule to Act XV of 1877—Applicability of the two articles discussed*

On the 2nd December, 1886, R mortgaged his ancestral holding of 528 canals, 15 marlas by way of conditional sale, for Rs 1,200 to T, the mortgagor retaining possession. R died about 1887. On the 7th November, 1889, his widow sold the holding and some other land in addition, to T for Rs. 2,000, made up of the said Rs 1,200 plus some interest thereon and Rs. 700 on account of a mortgage by herself which included Rs. 600 alleged to have been borrowed for her husband's "Chelum." On the 7th November, 1899, T's sons re-sold the whole of the land for Rs. 3,000 to K.

About the end of 1901, R's widow died and G reversioner of R sued the sons of T and K for possession of the land.

Held, by the Full Bench that (a) so far as the sale by the widow is concerned the suit is governed by Art 141 of second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act (XV of 1877) and is within limitation, and (b) it is beyond time as regards the mortgage by R. The provisions of the Punjab Act No. 1 of 1900 apply to this part of the case and under Art. 1 of its schedule the reversioner's right to contest the validity of the said mortgage is barred. The mortgage is not merged in the sale by the widow and the mortgagees are entitled to fall back on, and to keep it alive for their own interests and can hold the property until the said sum of Rs. 1,200 is paid to them according to the terms of the mortgage-deed (a).

Where an executor who owes money to the deceased accepts the executorship, his debt becomes at once assets, and he is responsible for the amount of it. In that case no limitation would run as long as he remained executor or died, whichever happened first.

When a plaintiff does satisfy the requirements of S. 50 of the Civ. Pro. Code by stating what is, in his opinion, the ground upon which he intends to get over the bar of limitation, he ought not to be precluded from taking another, and not inconsistent, ground, should he be later advised that the latter is the true ground (a). Yakub Ebrahim Sayani v. R and others in execution of their money decree applied for attachment and sale of land belonging to J and S. In July, 1882, J made over to R and others, the whole land to hold until the amount of their decree was repaid to them the produce being taken as equivalent to the interest on the decree money and revenue. S sold his share in the land to L who on 13th July, 1900, sued to eject R and others as trespassers ignoring the mortgage altogether.

Held, that J's making over the land, under the above circumstances, to R and others in July, 1882, was tantamount to mortgage of the land.

Limitation—(Continued).

Held, also, that L's claim as laid is barred by limitation in both ways :

(1) If there was any 'defect in the authority of J to effect the mortgage, it has been cured by the adverse possession for twelve years, of the mortgagees (decree-holders) to the extent of their mortgage interest :

(2) If the mortgage be altogether ignored as unauthorised, Art. 136 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act XV of 1877 applied, as S was out of possession when he sold his share to L and was entitled to claim it on the date it was lost by the mortgage effected by J.

Practice "—Plaintiff's prayer to be allowed at this stage to amend the claim to one for redemption was rejected on the ground that he had all along strenuously fought to recover the land without any payment. Lakshmi Chand v. Ram Chand, 69 P.W.R. 1908

(4) S. 5—"Sufficient cause," meaning of—Appeal dismissed for default—Mistake of pleader, how far "sufficient cause"

The true rule as to the exercise of discretion under S. 5 of the Limitation Act is to consider whether, under the special circumstances of each case, the appellant acted under an honest, though mistaken, belief formed with due care and attention.

The words "sufficient cause" in S. 5 of the Limitation Act should receive a liberal construction so as to advance substantial justice when no negligence nor inaction nor want of bona fides is imputable to the appellant (a)

An appeal was dismissed for default; the appellant applied to have the appeal re-opened, on the ground, that his advocate wrote to him telling him that the date of hearing was the 15th January whereas it really was on the 15th December. And it was further found that the advocate had reason to mistake the date to be the 15th January.

Held, that a fair opportunity must be given to the appellant to prove that he had sufficient cause for his non-appearance, and if such sufficient cause is made out that the appellant would be entitled under S. 558, C.P.C., to have the appeal re-opened. Nga Po An v. In an appeal against a decision dismissing an appeal as time-barred, the facts were that, on the 10th February, 1906, the plaintiff applied for a copy of the judgment and decree. The head copyist of the District Court was told that no decree was necessary, and so, on the 21st February, 1906, he gave her a copy of the judgment and returned to her the requisite stamps for the decree, telling her that a decree was not required. The plaintiff said that she then believed that no decree was necessary and that she took back the stamps. She also said that she did not think it necessary to consult any one on this point, until she went to Rangoon and consulted a firm of advocates there, who told her that a copy of the decree was required. Accordingly, an application was made on the 16th May, 1906, and a copy was supplied on the 17th May. The plaintiff made no application between the 21st February and the 16th May.

Two grounds were taken on the appeal. One was that the time between the 10th February, 1906, when the plaintiff filed an application for a copy of the decree of the District Court, and the 17th May, 1906, when that decree was signed and a copy of it given to her, should be excluded, as time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, under S. 12 of the Limitation Act.

Held that the period between the 21st February and the 17th May, 1906, should not be excluded under S. 12 of the Limitation Act, as every would-be appellant should take steps to prosecute his or her appeal with no unnecessary delay; that, if the plaintiff had gone promptly to her counsel, she would have been told that a copy of the decree was necessary, but that, where nothing is done for nearly three months, such period was not a period of time requisite for obtaining a copy, and that her application was not pending after the 21st May, as she accepted the word of the copyist and took back the stamps.

The other ground was that the plaintiff had sufficient ground for not preventing the appeal within the time allowed, and so the second paragraph of S. 5 applied. She pleaded that she was entitled, under S. 14, to exclude the time, during which she was prosecuting the appeal in the Chief Court, and that she was misled by her advocates in filing the appeal in that Court.

Held, that she was not entitled to the benefit of S. 14 of the Limitation Act.

S. 14 provides that, in computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time, during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding, whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of appeal, against the defendant, shall be excluded, where the proceeding is founded upon the same cause of action, and is prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it.

The true rule is whether, under the special circumstances of each case, the appellant acted under an honest, though mistaken, belief formed with due care and attention. S. 14 of the Limitation Act indicates that the Legislature intended to show indulgence to a party acting bona fide under a mistake. S. 5 gives the Courts a discretion, which, in respect of jurisdiction, is to be exercised in the way in which judicial power and discretion ought to be exercised, upon principles which are well understood; the words, “sufficient cause” receiving a liberal construction, so as to advance substantial justice, when no negligence nor inaction nor want of bona fides is imputable to the appellant.

When a client bona fide accepts the advice of counsel as to the proper procedure to adopt in the course of litigation, and, misled by that advice, fails to file an appeal in time, he is entitled to the benefit of S. 5 of the Limitation Act and should not be visited with the serious penalty, which is involved in the rejection of his

Held that the essence of S. 14 is that the party, not counsel, must be prosecuting the action with due care and attention and that, on the facts, as disclosed in the affidavits, plaintiff-appellant had not acted with due care and attention, when she filed her appeal in the Chief Court, more especially as she did not acquaint the advocate she consulted at Rangoon with the cause of the previous litigation. Ma Thein Yin v. plaintiff's palla or dowry, was made over by the husband's father to the keeping of the wife's father, as a fund constituting her palla in accordance with the usual practice prevailing in the caste. This fund having been misappropriated either by the original trustee or after his death by his legal representatives, a suit was instituted against the latter to recover the sum. It was contended in answer that the suit was barred :—

Held, that S. 10 of Limitation Act, 1877, applied to the case, and that it was, therefore, not barred.

A suit to recover trust money is a suit to follow the trust property within the meaning of S. 10 of the Limitation Act, 1877.

S. 10 of the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, requires, as conditions precedent to its applicability, first, that the suit should be against a person in whom property has become vested in trust for a specific purpose or against his legal representatives or assigns, and, secondly, that the suit should be for the purpose of following such property in his or their hands.

The phrase "trust for a specific purpose" in S. 10, is merely a more expanded mode of expressing the same idea as that conveyed by the expression "express trust" of English law. It is used, in the section, in contradistinction to trusts arising by implication of law, trusts resulting, and trusts constructive. Bhurabhai Jamnadas v. Bai Ruxmani. 10 Bom. Defendant executed a Sarkhat in favour of plaintiff's firm, in respect of a barred debt due by him to the firm, stating that no interest was to be paid. Held, that in order to maintain the suit, it was necessary to show express promise to pay, and not merely that the intention to pay was deducible from the language of the acknowledgment. Held, further that to hold that whenever there was a clear acknowledgment of a debt whether time-barred or not, that was equivalent to a promise to pay upon which a suit might be maintained, would be to nullify the effect of S. 19 of the Limitation Act (a). Held, further that under S. 25 (3) of the Indian Contract Act, a promise, made in writing, and signed by the person to be charged therewith to pay a barred debt was a good consideration, but there must be a distinct promise and not a mere acknowledgment. Gobind Das v. There is nothing in the language of S. 19 of the Limitation Act, 1877, to justify the narrow interpretation that an acknowledgment under the section must be addressed to the creditor or some one on his behalf.

An acknowledgment contained in an application by the judgment-debtor by way of a written statement, wherein he said that he was unable to pay the amount then, but would pay if time were given him, is a valid acknowledgment.

A statement in the course of a written statement by the judgment-debtor, that, "I have asked the plaintiff by a written notice to take away the sum from a third party with whom I have deposited that sum," amounts to a valid

- (23) S. 19—Acknowledgment—Mortgagor narrating the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee—Mortgagee admitting its correctness by signature—Effect of the writing.

Where a mortgagor describes his mortgagee as such and the latter admits in writing over his signature the correctness of that description, the meaning of the admission is as plain as language can make it. Thereby the mortgagee unmistakably affirms that he is what he is described to be, a mortgagee, and it is a necessary implication from the admission that he acknowledges all the legal consequences of his position as a mortgagee, one of which is his liability to be redeemed.

It is immaterial for the purposes of S. 19 of the Indian Limitation Act, in what connection, or for what purpose, the description was made by the mortgagor and admitted as correct by the mortgagee,--whether it was or not made in a document which had nothing to do either directly or indirectly with the mortgage. The sole question is whether the writing, whatever its immediate purpose or occasion, contains an acknowledgment of the liability in dispute. Sheikh Mahomed v. Jamal-ud-din Mahomed, 10 Bom. L. Held, Bannerman and Richards, JJ. (Stanley, C.J., dissenting) that when a natural guardian acknowledges a debt, such acknowledgment is by an 'agent duly authorised in this behalf' within the meaning of S. 19 of the Limitation Act and gives a fresh start for the computation of limitation against the minor (a)

Held, Stanley, C.J., that the relation between a guardian and ward is not that of an agent to a principal, but that of a trustee to a cesti que trust. A guardian is not competent to acknowledge a debt due from a minor so as to give a fresh start to the computation of limitation.

The difference between the manager of a Hindu family and a natural guardian of a minor pointed out. Ramcharan Das v. Gaya (26) S. 19—Contract Act, S. 25 (3)—Suit on balance of account—Acknowledgment—Fresh promise to pay barred debt.

In this case plaintiff sued to recover principal and interest due from defendant. The question was whether the claim was within time. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the suit was not barred by limitation for two reasons:—(a) because the debt had, from time to time, been duly acknowledged, at first by defendant's agents, and subsequently, by defendant herself, each acknowledgment being within limitation, and the debt being thus kept alive under the provisions of S. 19 of the Act, and (b) because, in any event, the entries in plaintiff's books, dated 7th Jeth, 1956 and 27th Baisakh, 1959, which were said to be attested by defendant herself, whose thumb impressions were alleged to be at the foot of these entries amounted to an agreement to pay the monies within the meaning, and for the purposes, of S. 25 (3) of the Contract Act, 1872.

Held, that, inasmuch as the earlier acknowledgments were not proved to have been made with the defendant's authority, the later entries, attested by the defendant herself, could not save limitation under S. 19 of the Act, as they were made after the expiry of the period of limitation prescribed by the Act.

Held on the second point, that the entries were mere balances struck and acknowledgment of an existing debt, and at the utmost they amounted to an acknowledgment of the amounts found to be due at the time, and that they could not be construed as a new agreement between the parties within the meaning of S. 25 (3) of the Contract Act. Shankar Das v. The plaintiffs sued the defendants, alleged to be members of a joint Hindu family, for recovery of a debt, contracted for the benefit of the joint family and due on a book account. On 1st January, 1903, A for himself and as agent for B and C, his own father and brother, whose heirs the defendants were, struck a balance of a certain amount on account of previous debts in the plaintiffs' bahi in his own handwriting. The defendants contended, inter alia, that the plaintiffs' suit was not maintainable on the balance of 1st January, 1903, which was merely evidence of the original dealings between the parties and did not of itself constitute a fresh cause of action.

Held, on a construction of the entry sued upon, that no suit could be founded upon it, as it amounted to a mere acknowledgment of liability in respect of an existing debt and did not import a promise to pay the same, so as to constitute a fresh cause of action independently of the debts on which the balance was based. Pala Mal v. (31) S. 22—Pre-emption-suit—Assignment by vendee pending the suit—Assignee added as co-defendant after limitation for suit expired, effect of.

S. 22, Limitation Act, does not apply, where the added defendant derives his title from the original defendant, by an assignment pending the suit. The words "when a new plaintiff added after the institution of the suit," in S. 22 mean a person, who claims in his own right. But when the interest set up by the added party is only derivative, acquired pending the suit, then he is not a new defendant or plaintiff, and the case is one merely of continuation of the original suit with leave of Court under S. 372, Civ. Pro. Code, without any change in the date of its institution. A suit for pre-emption, therefore, is not barred by limitation, by reason of a person deriving title from the vendee-defendant, after the institution of plaintiff's suit, having been joined as a co-defendant, after the expiry of the stipulated period. Fatfeh Muhammad v. A suit was brought against M, the mutwali and imam of a mosque, by some persons on behalf of the general body of worshippers, on the allegation that although the mosque belonged to the Hanafi sect, M had changed his religious views and turned a follower of the Mirza of Quadian, four years before suit, and that therefore was disqualified from discharging his duties. The reliefs sought were —

- (a) That the defendant be declared unfit for the office of Imam of the Masjid;
- (b) That he be ejected from the property appertaining to the Masjid, and
- (c) That he be dismissed from the office of mutwali.

Held, (1) That, since the plaintiffs simply seek the removal of the defendant from the office of mutwali, which would involve his ejection from the immoveable property of which he was in possession in that capacity, and do not seek possession of the property for themselves full stamp need not be levied upon the value of the said property (a).

(2) That, it having been found concurrently by both the lower Courts that M had turned a follower of the Mirza of Quadian in 1891 and not four years before suit as alleged in the plaint, the chief Court has no power under S. 70 (b) of the Punjab Courts Act to question that finding on revision.

(3) That the suit was barred by limitation, under Art. 120 of the Limitation Act, having been instituted more than six years after M's change of religion in 1891 when the cause of action accrued. Neither Art. 142 nor 144 has any application to the case.

(4) That such change and the subsequent persistent adherence to such newly adopted views cannot properly be described as a continuing change amounting to a continuing wrong such as is contemplated by the terms of S. 23 of the Indian Limitation Act, and that the plaintiff should have come to Court within six years under Art. 120 of the Act, since the time when the alleged change in views occurred (b).

On the 21st November, 1900, an order was passed, under S. 332 of the Civil Procedure Code, awarding possession of certain property to defendants. The plaintiffs filed this suit on the 25th August, 1905, under S. 332 of the Code, to recover possession of the property from defendants. The suit was dismissed, as having been barred under Art. 14 of the Limitation Act—

Held, (1) that the suit was not barred under Art. 14 of the Limitation Act, 1877. An order passed by a Judge, under S. 332 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, is not such an act or order as is referred to in Art. 14. A Judge exercising his judicial functions is a Civil Court within the meaning of the Limitation Act and is not an officer of Government acting in his official capacity within the meaning of Art. 14.

Held, (2) that Art. 13 of the Act also did not apply to the case, because an order passed under S. 332 restoring possession, which has been given in execution of a decree, is an order made by the Court in execution proceedings, and is not an order of a Civil Court in a proceeding other than a suit (a). Govinda Bala v. Article 14 refers to orders and proceedings of a functionary to which by law is given a particular effect in favour of one person or against another, subject, in the regular course, to a further judicial proceeding having for its object to quash them or set them aside (a).

The article has no application where an order is null and void and does not affect the plaintiff's interest, so that there is no occasion to set it aside (b).

Where subsequent to the purchase of an entire Noabad mehal at a sale for arrears of revenue by the plaintiff, the term of the taluk expired and Government resettled the taluk in favour of the defaulting proprietors, and the plaintiff instituted a suit for recovery of possession of a parcel of land included in the taluk purchased,

Held, that the rule of limitation applicable was that embodied in Article 121 and not in Article 14.

A Noabad taluk is not necessarily temporarily settled; it may be a permanently settled one. The re-settlement of a Noabad taluk does not necessarily mean a settlement with new talukdars; it may be an adjutment of the revenue and nothing more (c). Maqbul Ahmad v. (49) Sch. II, Art. 29—Wrongful seizure of moveable property under legal process—Starting point of limitation—Suit for compensation for improper attachment—Jurisdiction of Small Cause Courts

A suit for compensation for improper attachment is not excluded from the jurisdiction of a Presidency Small Cause Court. Such a suit is however excluded from the jurisdiction of a Provincial Small Cause Court by Art. 35 (j) of the Schedule to Act IX of 1887 (a).

Art. 29 of the Limitation Act is quite general in its terms and was intended to apply to all cases of wrongful seizure of moveable property, made under legal process.

The point from which limitation begins to run is from the date of seizure of the property, and the period of limitation prescribed is not affected by the fact that the plaintiff objected to the attachment under S. 278, C.P.C., even if the objection proceedings outlasted that period.

In a case like that, the cause of action is complete as soon as the wrongful seizure is made and the subsequent detention is the act of the Court and nominal damages at least are at once recoverable (b).

If there are two articles of the limitation schedule which may possibly govern a case, the one more general and the other more particular and specific, the more particular and specific article ought to be regarded as the one governing the case (c). Nagoba v. Madholala Kalar 4 N.L.R. 49.

(50) Arts. 29, 36, 49, 62 and 120—Attachment—Wrongful seizure through Court of moveable property—Property sold and proceeds distributed—Suit for recovery of money paid—Limitation, whether suit barred by—Civ. Pro. Code, S. 283

A suit was instituted on the 1st June, 1903, to recover the value of the paddy crops belonging to the plaintiff attached by defendants 1, 2 and 3 before judgment, in a suit brought by them against the fifth defendant, and sold on the 10th April, 1900 to satisfy the decree obtained in that suit. The proceeds of the sale were distributed among the defendants on the 15th May, 1900. The plaintiff presented a claim petition when the property was attached, which was dismissed on the 8th March, 1900. He sued to declare his title on the 26th March, 1900, and he obtained his final decree declaring his title on the 7th February, 1903. It was contended that Art. 29, Limitation Act, applied and that the suit was barred, not having been brought within one year from the date of the attachment.

Held by the Full Bench (Sankaran Nair, J., dissenting) that the original wrongful seizure was the cause of action and time began to run from that date, that, whether the article of the Limitation Act that governed the case was 29 or 49 the suit was admittedly barred, and that no allowance of time is made for the time spent in litigating the title, under S. 283, Civ. Pro. Code.

Held per Arnold White, C.J., that the appropriate article was Art. 29, since this was the only article which referred specifically to wrongful seizure under legal process, and that Art. 29 is not restricted in its application to cases of consequential damage, but applies also to the case where the value of the property itself is sought to be recovered; held further that the distinction between Art. 29 and Art. 49 was that the former article applied to a case of wrongful seizure made under legal process, whereas the latter applied when the wrongful seizure was made by a private person (a).

Held per Sankaran Nair, J., that, so long as the property remained in the custody of the Court, the plaintiff could not be said to have lost it and was not, therefore, entitled to any compensation for its loss, and Art. 29 of the Limitation Act did not therefore apply, nor did Art. 49 apply; as the suit was not for any specific moveable property and the defendants had not wrongfully taken, injured, or detained the property. The article that applied, therefore, was either Art. 62 or Art. 120, and in either case the suit was not barred (b) Damaraju Narasimha Rau v. Thadinada Gangaram, 4 M.L.T. 271

Held (Per RAMPINI, C.J. and GEIDT, J.)—that the plaintiff's suit for damages in respect of the above acts of the defendant fell within Art. 36 of the second schedule of the Limitation Act (a).

A registered exchange deed effecting an exchange of lands stated; "There is no dispute in respect of the said lands. If disputes should so arise, the respective party shall be answerable to the extent of his private property." The plaintiff was subsequently deprived of some of the land acquired by exchange and brought a suit upon the above covenant more than three, but less than six, years after the date of deprivation.

Held that, since it was settled that suits for failure to pay money according to contract were to be regarded as suits for compensation for breach of contract and not as suits for specific performance, Art. 113, Limitation Act, should not be applied to the case; that, though, in the absence of a special contract, the provisions above cited may amount to a covenant for title and the breach may be considered to have occurred as and from the date of the deed (which, in this case, was more than six years before the institution of the suit), yet as there was a special contract to indemnify the party as and when the deprivation took place, the plaintiff had, under Art. 116 read with Art. 83 of the Act, six years from the date when he was actually damaged, and that the suit was within time. Srinivasa Raghava Dikshidar v. (82) Sch. II, Art. 116—Limitation—Suit for compensation for the breach of a contract in writing registered

A registered mortgage bond provided that the amount secured by it should be paid by instalments and that in case of default the mortgagee would be entitled to take possession. Further, that, should there be any loss in the recovery of the amount due or in delivery of possession of the mortgaged land, the mortgagee would have power to realize the amount secured by the bond with interest at 1 per cent. from the date of the cause of action till repayment, either from the person or from the property, moveable or immovable, of the debtor, or from the property mortgaged.

Held that a suit based upon the foregoing covenant to recover the mortgage money upon failure of the mortgagor to pay instalments was in substance a suit for compensation for breach of contract, to which the limitation prescribed by Art. 116 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877, applied. Collector of Mirzapur v. The purchaser, failing to get possession of part of the property purchased, sued for possession or in the alternative for a refund of a proportionate part of the consideration money and damages. Held, that as regards the latter relief the suit was governed by Art. 116, and not by Art. 97, of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877.

The suit was instituted on 4th November, 1905. Following the previous Punjab Rulings, the Divisional Judge dismissed the claim as barred by limitation.

Held, that Art. 118 of second schedule to Indian Limitation Act (XV of 1877), does not apply to a suit for recovering possession of property in the hands of a defendant holding it under an alleged adoption even if not set aside within the period prescribed by the said article; and that it (article) applies only to a declaratory suit if brought to challenge an adoption only (a). Surjan Singh v. Held, that the claim of K and others was barred by time inasmuch as their cause of action arose on the date their right was denied, and that, under Art. 120 of the Act which is applicable to a suit of this description, they had to bring it within six years from the date of denial of their right. Ahmad v. A suit for possession by a person in possession does not lie. He can only sue for a declaration of his right to the possession of the land. The period of limitation for such a suit is, under Art. 120, six years from the date on which the vendor denies the title. Certain land was mortgaged with possession and the mortgagor, subsequently executed in favour of the mortgagee a deed of sale of the land. In 1898 mutation was effected in favour of the mortgagee as owner. In February, 1899, this mutation was set aside on the mortgagor's appeal. The suit for declaration was instituted by the mortgagee's heirs in April, 1905. Held, that the suit was barred under Art. 120, Limitation Act. Munshi Ram v. Where the plaintiff is in possession and asks for a declaratory decree, the limitation applicable to the suit is that prescribed by Art. 120, Sch. for were really (1) possession of the property and (2) mesne profits realised therefrom.

Held, also, that the suit is not barred by limitation, inasmuch as, when a Mahant of a Religious Institution mortgages any property belonging to the Institution, his successor can sue to impugn the validity of the mortgage within twelve years, under Art. 144 of the second schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, XV of 1877, from the date of his being appointed Mahant of the Institution, and that a mortgage effected by the trustee for the time being of a "property conveyed or bequeathed in trust" does not constitute the mortgagee a "purchaser" within the meaning, and for the purposes of Art. 134 of the Limitation Act, as the word "purchased" does not include anything short of an absolute alienation of title to the property and is not used in its English technical sense (a).

Held, further, that Art. 134 of the Limitation Act is not applicable. The plaintiff does not derive his right to sue from or through the last Mahant but is appointed, according to the findings of the Division Bench, by the community itself and consequently he is not an heir of the last Mahant (b). Basheshwar Lal v. (118) Art. 178—Rule 859 of the High Court Rules—No period of limitation applies to proceedings under this rule—Practice—Recovery of solicitor's costs.

There is no specific provision in the Limitation Act, or anywhere else, fixing a period of time within which an application for enforcement of payment of costs by a solicitor against his client, by the summary method provided by Rule 859 of the High Court Rules should be made. Art. 178 of the Limitation Act applies only to applications under the Civil Procedure (120-a) Art. 178—See Nos. 114 and 117, supra.

(121) Arts. 178 and 179—Execution proceedings pending—When right of decree-holder to apply for execution will be barred—Prior execution petition—Conditions under which it will be treated as pending

So long as the proceedings initiated by the decree-holder are pending, his right to apply for their continuance occurs from day to day, i.e., on every day on which the Court does not suomotu continue them (a). The right to apply will not then be barred till three years have elapsed after the proceedings have ceased to be pending (b).

A Court has no legal authority to dismiss a petition for execution simply because execution has been stayed, but if that is so, the order of dismissal is not necessarily ineffective to dispose of the proceedings (c). But an order, made without notice and in the absence of both parties, cannot be regarded as an order between the parties at all. It amounts to no more than a direction to the officers of the Court to remove the proceedings from the pending list (d). The execution petition itself should, under the circumstances, be considered to have been pending.

Art. 178 ought not to be applied when the Court is asked to do something which it is bound to do (e), and that so long as proceedings are pending, limitation will not begin to run against an applicant.

On the 3rd October, 1899, an application was made to execute the decree in O.S. No. 260 of 1898, by attachment and sale of certain immoveable property mentioned in the application. An order was obtained on the 7th October, 1899. The judgment-debtor objected that the decree had been satisfied, but that objection was disallowed on the 31st October. The judgment-debtor appealed to the District Judge and obtained an order for stay of execution pending the hearing of the appeal. Upon this the District Munsiff, on the 15th December, 1899, passed the following order on the execution petition.—“Execution order to be stayed. Petition dismissed,” it did not appear that this order was passed after notice to the parties or in their presence.

The District Judge disposed of the appeal of the 20th July, 1900, remanding the matter for further inquiry, and, on the 25th January, 1901, the District Munsiff decided that the decree had been satisfied before the attachment. On the 11th December, 1901, the District Judge reversed this order, and on the 29th October, 1903, his decision was confirmed by the High Court.

Held, that under the circumstances, the petition of 3rd October, 1899, must be treated as pending, that the petition of the 7th July, 1905, was clearly barred so far as it was a fresh application for execution, i.e., so far as it asked for attachment of property not proceeded against in proceedings instituted by the application of 3rd October, 1899, and that, so far as it asked for sale of the property already attached under the petition of 3rd October, 1899, it was not barred. Chalavadi Kotiah v. An application by a decree-holder, who purchases in an execution-sale certain property and obtains a sale-certificate, for delivery of possession, under S. 318, C.P.C., of property purchased, is not in strictness an application for execution of the decree, a direction of delivery of possession being no part of the decree. A decree-holder obtained a decree for the sale of several properties against the representatives of I. He put the decree in execution on the 7th August, 1900, against the village B, which had come on partition, between the heirs of I, to S, and which was mentioned in the order absolute as liable to be sold. S objected on the ground that she had paid the proportionate share of the decretal amount. The application was dismissed. Thereupon, on the 30th January, 1902, the decree-holder applied for sale of another village in possession of the other set of heirs of I. They objected and their property was released on the ground that the village B ought to be sold first. The decree-holder applied for sale of B on 9th February, 1907. Held, that the execution of the decree was barred by limitation and the decree-holder could not get the benefit of intervening proceedings against the second set of I's heirs. The application could not be treated as an application in continuation of the application to sell the other village in possession of the second set of heirs as S had no interest in that. Further it could not be treated as an application made in continuation of the application of 1900 as that application had been dismissed (a). Safia Begam v. Shiam Prasad, 5 A.L.J. 622 = A.W.N. The plaintiff obtained a decree to the effect that according to the compromise between the parties, the defendant shall mortgage certain land of the plaintiff in lieu of a certain sum of money, within one month from the date of the decree. The mortgagee was not executed. Within three years of the decree, the decree-holder applied for execution by being placed in possession of the land specified, and, on the same date, notice issued to the judgment-debtor under S. 248 of the C.P.C., to show cause against execution issuing.

It was held that the decree-holder was not entitled to possession under the decree. The decree-holder withdrew his application, and, subsequently, applied under S. 260 of the C.P.C., for arrest of the judgment-debtor and attachment of her moveables after the expiry of more than three years from the date of decree.

Held, that the later application was barred by limitation and that it was not saved by the previous application, for it was not in accordance with law, and that the payment of any process-fee did not improve the position of the decree-holder. Ganga Ram v. (129) Art. 179 (2)—Appeal by some of the defendants against portion of decree—Appeal dismissed—Limitation for executing remaining portion of decree—S. 230 (a), Civ. Pro. Code.

A partition suit was filed against nine defendants, on the allegation that two houses were joint and ancestral property of the parties. But the decree made a distinction among the defendants and granted relief to the plaintiffs in respect of the two houses, specifying the defendants from whom plaintiffs were to get their share of each house. Thus, there was only a single decree, though all the defendants were not interested in both the properties in respect of which the decree was passed. Some of the defendants appealed against the decree, in respect of house No. 1, which was, however, dismissed by the appellate Court. The plaintiff then applied for execution, in respect of the other house more than three years after the date of the original decree but within three years from the date of the appellate decree. One of the defendants, who was jointly interested in the second house, but had not joined in the above mentioned appeal, though he has been a party to all the proceedings, pleaded limitation, on the ground that the original decree still subsisted inasmuch as he has not appealed therefrom. Held that limitation runs, both under S. 230 (a), Civ. Pro. Code, and Art. 179 (2), Limitation Act, from the last order in appeal, and that Art. 179, cl. (2) applies to any such decree, against which an appeal was preferred by any of the parties to the original suit. Anwar Ali v. Inayat Ali, 52 P.R. 1907=8 P.L.R. 1908.

- (1) Lunatic, contracts by—Lunacy not known to the other contracting party—Contract Act (IX of 1872), Ss. 12, 30—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), Ss. 38, 41—General presumption of insanity—rebuttal of—Expert opinion in questions of insanity—value of expert opinion—Burden of proof in cases of insanity—General rules of estimating evidence as to insanity.

If a party to a contract seeks to enforce a contract which is void under S. 12 of the Contract Act on account of the absence of capacity to contract in the other contracting party, it is not permissible to give equitable relief. However, statutory relief can be given under Ss. 38 and 41 of the Specific Relief Act when rescission of a contract is asked for on this ground.

Where a person is not proved to be a lunatic on inquisition, it is necessary to rebut the general presumption of sanity. This can be done by proving that his mind was completely deranged so that he was incompetent to enter into any contract, or by proving that he was of unsound mind with regard to the particular transaction.

Lunacy—(Concluded).

The opinion of an expert on facts proved or admitted is only relevant when the Court has to form an opinion on a point of science or art. Expert opinion even on admitted or proved facts will differ, and then the Court has to decide which opinion it will rely on. But when the facts are not admitted, the Court has first to come to a conclusion on the evidence as to what facts have been proved, and then apply to such facts the various expert opinions which have been offered. But if it is not a point of science or art, the Court or jury can form an opinion without expert evidence, though the line where there no longer remains a point of science or art on which the Court has to form an opinion is not always very clearly defined.

In a case where a contract is unopposed by the defendant on the ground of his insanity, it is open to the plaintiff to rely on defendant's conduct in transacting business in general, and, in particular, in putting through the impugned transaction as evidence of capacity. On the other hand, it is open to the defendant to show that, though he was not generally incapable, he was incapable as regards the particular contract, either on the ground that he suffered from delusions which influenced the contracts in such a way that his delusion formed the foundation of the contract, or on the ground that owing to general enfeeblement of mind he did not understand the contract in question.

A man who is suffering from delusions may very well perform acts which are not influenced by such delusions, and when it is attempted to set aside a transaction entered into by a man suffering from delusions, the Court has to decide whether the delusions influenced the disposition or contract, and, if so, to what extent.

(2) Spes successionis—Creation of life-interest—A vested remainder—Shias

The creation of life-interest is allowed among Shias. During the period of the life-interest, the deferred interest can be dealt with by way of sale, gift, or otherwise, provided there is no interference with the particular estate; and the purchaser or donee could deal with the interest so acquired by him. A Mahomedan can create a definite interest like the one known to English Law as vested remainder, and such a remainder, though liable to be displaced, is not a mere expectancy in succession by survivorship or other merely contingent or possible right of interest, but an interest that can be attached and sold (a). Banoo Begum v. (1) Talaq-ul-Bidat or, irregular divorce—Re-marriage when valid after such divorce—Parties to divorce bound by rules governing them when divorce took place Husband and wife—Custody of wife not allowed when marriage illegal.

J (husband) and B (wife) followed the doctrines of the Sunni or Hanafi sect. J pronounced the formula of divorce three times consecutively and executed a deed of divorce reciting that he had given his wife three Talaqs and had given her up and had made her unlawful to him. He afterwards re-married her without her being intermediately married to another man.

Held, that among Sunni or Hanafi sect the Talaq Bidat or irregular divorce is, and becomes accomplished, when a husband repudiates his wife by uttering three times, at shorter intervals or even in immediate succession, any word addressed to the wife, clearly indicating to dissolve the marriage; and that if the woman be not Tuhr when the repudiation is pronounced, the divorce does not become conclusive until completion of Iddat.

Held also, that after the said divorce and completion of the Iddat, when necessary, the divorced couple cannot validly be re-married unless and until the woman was married to another man and divorced by him after consummation or left a widow at his death, and that custody of wife cannot be decreed when the marriage is illegal.

Held, further, that parties to a divorce are generally bound by the rules governing the sect to which they belonged when the divorce was pronounced (a). Mussammatt Barkat Bibi v. Jalal Din, 84 P.W.R. 1908=97 P.R. 1908.

the estate—Alienation to discharge debt—Validity.

Under the Mahomedan Law there are two classes of guardians, near and remote. The near guardians are the father, grand-father and their excoctors. The remote guardians are the other male agnates. The near guardians alone have authority to sell immoveable properties.

An uncle, being a remote guardian, has no authority to sell the land of his minor nephew (a). Such a sale may be treated by the nephew as a nullity, and he can recover the property sold.

No doubt, if the guardian is also a co-heir and in possession of the whole estate he represents the whole body of heirs as against the creditors of the estate and can make a valid alienation for the purpose of discharging debts of the deceased. In such a case he makes the alienation not qua guardian, but qua representative of the estate (b).

Held, that Kilohi Mughals of Mudki, a town in Ferozpur District, are governed in matters of inheritance by Mahomedan Law which does not recognise adoption, and that, on account of their not living in a village, the fact of their following agriculture, raises no presumption of their having also adopted customs of agricultural tribes (a).

Held, also, that an adoption inherently invalid need not be impugned independently of the claim brought for possession of the adopter's estate after his death; and that such a claim does not become barred by limitation simply on the ground that no suit for declaration of its invalidity has been brought within six years under Art 118 of second schedule to Indian Limitation Act XV of 1877 (b)

The Mahomedan Law of acknowledgment of parentage with its legitimising effect has no reference whatsoever to cases in which illegitimacy of the child is proved and established, either by reason of a lawful union between the parents of the child being impossible or by reason of marriage necessary to render the child legitimate being disproved. The doctrine relating to cases where either the fact of the marriage itself, or the exact time of its occurrence with reference to the legitimacy of the acknowledged child is not proved in the sense of the law as distinguished from disproved.

In other words the doctrine applies only to cases of uncertainty as to legitimacy and in such cases acknowledgment has its effect; but that Held, that a gift of immoveable property by a Sikh Jat in favour of his sons by a Mahomedan wife before the alienor embraced Mahomedanism was void as the alienees could not be regarded legitimate issue.

A marriage by a Mahomedan with a fifth wife when four previous wives are living is invalid and not void, and the children born of such marriage are not debarred from succession to the estate of their father (a).

The spirit of Islam is against bastardising children. It allows in certain cases, and subject to certain qualifications and limitations, paternity to be established even by acknowledgment. The onus would therefore rest on those who alleged that a child born as the issue of a proper contract of marriage with a female, who is a fitting subject of marriage and not unfit as prohibited females are, is really illegitimate, because the number expressly permitted by the sanction of Al Koran was exceeded. Kushaid Jan v. Mahomedan Law—(Continued).—11.—(Partition)—(Continued).

Under the Mahomedan Law, the minor heirs of a mother not parties to a partition suit, for her share in her father's estate and continued after her death by her husband as her executor, and whose interests were not legally protected at the time of partition, are clearly entitled to have the matter gone into again. But the division, as then made, should not be disturbed more than is absolutely necessary properly to adjust the interest of the heirs.

Even if the portion of a dower that was prompt was not claimed by the wife in her life-time, the same, on her death, together with the deferred portion thereof, becomes available to her estate, vests in her executors and passes on to her heirs.

The executor of a Mahomedan takes the whole estate of the testator by virtue of the Probate and Administration Act and is a trustee for the entirety thereof (a).

When the executor of a deceased Mahomedan woman is her husband who was under an agreement to pay her a certain dower, he cannot avail himself of the ordinary period of limitation of three years as a simple debtor and avoid the payment of the dower to the heirs of the deceased.

Under the Mahomedan Law, a father has the power to make a contract for dower on behalf of his infant sons and the contract so entered into is binding, even though it was made after the marriage.

The amount named in an agreement for the payment of dower must be paid irrespective of the husband's means and the husband cannot be allowed to go into evidence to show that the parties to the contract did not mean to insist upon the payment of the dower but something else (b).

A fixed sum of money agreed by the husband, at the time of the marriage, to be paid monthly to the wife as pan dan (pin money) was considered to be in the nature of a personal allowance, and, if the wife failed to claim and recover the same during her life-time, her heirs could not, after her decease, recover the same from her husband as a part of the assets of her estate.

When the hearing of a partition suit was prolonged entirely on account of contentions raised by a defendant in which he failed, he was ordered, to pay to all parties the costs of

(1) Manager of Court of Wards, power of, to assert the claim of pre-emption—Delay in assertion of right—Formality—Claim, when can be made—Act V of 1897 (Bengal Estates Partition), Ss. 29 and 95—Custom.

A guardian or manager under the Court of Wards can assert a claim of pre-emption, based on the ownership of the ward's property, and such manager does not need any express sanction from the Court of Wards. He can also perform on behalf of an adult female ward the ceremonies of Talab-i-mowasibat and Talab-i-ishtishad (a).

There is no fixed time within which the talab-i-ishtishad should be performed. It is a question of fact for the Court to determine, whether such ceremony was done within proper time (b).

The performance of the ceremony of talab-i-ishtishad is not meant to be done for the information of the vendor or vendee, though its effect may be to give them information. The formality is insisted on with the object of getting evidence that the pre-emptor has really asserted his right, and because evidence is wanted in order to establish proof before the Magistrate. It may be that no witnesses are present at the time of the performance of the talab-i-mowasibat. The talab-i-ishtishad must be performed in the presence of witnesses so that there may be proof that the claim has been made (c).

The performance of the ceremony in the Raj kachary or law office of the vendor is a sufficient compliance with the law (d).

The existence of the custom of pre-emption among Hindus in the district of Champaran, Bihar, has been judicially recognised (e).

The assertion of the claim of pre-emption must be made without delay; but before the shafes can assert his right to pre-emption, he must be satisfied by evidence, which he holds to be credible, that the sale has been completed (f).

It is clear from the authorities that under the Mahomedan Law, before it can be held that the sale was complete, there must have been a cessation of the vendor's right in the property (g).

An order passed under S. 29 of Act V of 1897 has not the effect of dividing the shares of the proprietor finally, until the date specified in S. 95 of the Act; and until the latter date the right of pre-emption subsists (h). Jadu Lal Sahu v. Janki Koer, 35 C. 575.

(2) Shafi Khaleet—Partner in the immunities or appendages—Nature of right—Common servient tenement between property of vendee and property in dispute

Plaintiff pre-emptor and defendant No. 2, vendor, were brothers. Defendant-vendor sold to defendant No. 1, a neighbour, two houses adjacent to each other, and between the female apartments of which and the house of the plaintiff, there was a passage for the use of the inmates. Plaintiff sued for pre-emption as neighbour and shafi khaleet. The defence was that the plaintiff had no right of pre-emption in preference to that of the vendee who was a neighbour and also a shafi khaleet, inasmuch as the water from the privy of his house passed through the land of a third person over which land the water from the roof and painalas of the houses in dispute also fell.

Held, that under the Mahomedan Law, the right of the defendant-vendee over the land of the third person was a totally different right from that of the defendant-vendor over the same land. The defendant-vendee was not a participator in any sense either in the property sold or in any of its immunities or appendages. Musharraf Ali v. Shaikat Ali, 5 A.L.J. 509=A.W.N. (1908), 239.

In regard to succession among Beluchi Mahomedans it was held, that, under S. 37 of the Bengal Civil Courts Act of 1887, the parties would be governed by the Mahomedan Law. Hence, evidence to prove a custom in a family excluding daughters from inheritance—such custom being at variance with the ordinary law—was inadmissible and was rightly rejected (a).

There is as much authority in the Koran for the daughters of a Mahomedan taking shares in their father's estate as there is in the case of sons. A deed of abandonment executed in reliance upon the generosity of the party benefited was held to be without consideration. Ismail Khan v. Intiaz-un-nisa, 4 A.L.J. 792=A.W.N. (1908), 7.

—14.—(Wakf).

(1) Wakf nominally for pious purposes, but substantially to provide maintenance for a particular family and its descendants, validity of.

In a suit for possession the plaintiff was the cousin on the father's side of one M, the deceased owner of the property in dispute, while the defendants were the sons of her first cousin on the mother's side. It was alleged in the plaint that the plaintiff had been manager of the property of M until 1870, when the defendant's father was appointed to look after her property, that on his death his sons, the defendants, continued to act on behalf of M, and that during her life-time she executed certain deeds, one of which was a deed of Wakf, dated the 5th February, 1901. The following were the material portions of the deed. "...I desire that with the property owned and possessed by me some benevolent work may always be carried on, so that it may bring me good name in this world and salvation in the other, and the property may also remain safe. Therefore.....I have executed a perpetual deed of endowment, without the power of revocation, in respect of half the village.I have got the Wakf lawfully enforced through an agent and allotted the income of the said property to the expenses of the Imambara.....I have now endowed for ever the property for the Imambara in Sitapur, and no body can become the proprietor thereof.....I have subjected the property to the rules relating to Wakf, and, having made (the defendants) trustees of this endowed property, I have put them into possession thereof as such, because these very men are my near, nay nearest relations... So the said trustees will ever remain the trustees.....and it will be proper for them to spend whatever expenses may be incurred in connection with the Imambara out of the endowed property during the time of their trusteeship; and it is the duty of every one of them to incur expenses of majalis (religious meetings) detailed below. This is always to be kept in view that whoever may be appointed trustee after the said trustees will be from the family of these very trustees, no one belonging to another family can become a trustee. The said trustees will themselves nominate trustees to succeed them and likewise every trustee will make arrangement to have effect after him....." The annual income of the property exceeded Rs. 1,000, a very small portion of which was sufficient to meet the expenses of the majalis.

Held, that, in the deed, the appropriation was nominally for a pious purpose, and substantially to provide maintenance for the defendants and their descendants, and, therefore, under the Mahomedan Law the wakf was void and of no effect (a) Hakim Muhammad Sharif v Zakir Hussain, 11 O.C. 48.

(3) Dedication—User—Graveyard—Alienation of land pertaining to graveyard—Ouv. Pro Code (Act XIV of 1882), Ss. 30 and 539—Suit by members of a community—Individual rights

The plaintiffs, some Mahomedans of Multan city, sued the Court of Wards representing the estate of Khan Bahadur Mahkhum Hassan Bakhsh for a declaration that the land in suit situate in Mauza Taraf Daria, Tahsil Multan, was a graveyard in the possession of the Mahomedan community, and for an injunction restraining the defendant from transferring any part of the land. It was alleged by the plaintiffs that the whole of the land in suit was the graveyard known as Mai Pak Daman and was wakf and inalienable.

Held, that the plaintiffs had proved that the land in suit was graveyard known as Mai Pak Daman and was wakf by user, if not by dedication (a).

That user, as such, does not deprive the owner of his title but the title remains subject to the user of the land as wakf (b).

That the plaintiffs, as members of the Mahomedan community, were competent to institute the suit, and Ss. 30 and 539 of the Civ. Pro. Code did not apply to the case, that it was not necessary for each plaintiff to show that he had used the graveyard; a newcomer, for instance, if a Mahomedan, had an equal right with the oldest residents.

That, by the fact that previously some portions of the land pertaining to the graveyard had been alienated without objection on the part of any one, the plaintiffs did not lose their right to object to further alienation. *Ilahi Bukhsh v. In 1852-53, some Mahomedan merchants of Mauritius purchased certain properties, purporting to act on behalf of the whole Mahomedan congregation of the place, and founded a mosque. Thereafter, from time to time, adjoining properties were bought and added to the mosque by Mahomedan merchants, purporting to act in the same way on behalf of the whole Mahomedan community. In 1877 and on subsequent dates, several purchases of properties were made by Cutchee merchants purporting to act on behalf of the Cutchee Mahomedans alone, but this practice was not consistently followed in later times, and though the Cutchees, being the richest members of the congregation, contributed individually in proportion to their means, considerable contributions were also made in the aggregate by the Hallaye and Soortoe Mahomedans. The administration of the affairs of the mosque was left mainly, if not entirely, in the hands of Cutchee Mahomedans, because they were leading merchants, but not because they belonged to that particular class of Mahomedans. In 1893, 93 Cutchees executed deeds, forming themselves into a society (which they subsequently had incorporated) consisting of Cutchee Mahomedans alone and excluding the other classes for all future time from membership of the society and the management of the mosque, for which purpose they appointed a committee of management out of their own body with extensive powers of selling and letting properties other than the mosque and its accessories. All the properties they declared to have vested exclusively in the society.

Held, that a portion of the congregation had no right, by forming a new association, to transfer all the property to the new association and exclude the rest of the congregation from membership and from participation in the management of the affairs of the mosque. The charter of incorporation obtained by the defendants did not legalise their position, as the only association which could claim to be legalised was the congregation on whose behalf the mosque had been founded.

That the rule laid down in the French Civil Code (which is in force in Mauritius), that a religious community does not constitute a "civil person" and cannot, without being authorised by the State, hold property, has not always been carried out to its logical conclusions, and the Court will grant relief to aggrieved members of an unauthorised religious community against their fellow-members.

That, having regard to the existing law of Mauritius, the Court, in setting aside the deeds and the scheme of management set up by the defendants, could not proceed to frame a new scheme of management such as would be entirely free from legal objections. In th absence of any reason to fear that the restoration of the statu quo' ante would lead to maladministration, this should be left to the congregation to be settled amicably, and to be given effect to, by obtaining a charter of incorporation.

That, in a suit by some of the aggrieved Hallayes and Soortees to set aside the deeds set up by the defendants, the Crown was not a necessary party, as the law of Mauritius does not require that the Crown should be impleaded, and the prerogatives of the Crown would not be affected by the decision in the suit.

That, in any case, the objection, that the Crown had not been made a party, ought to have been taken in the lower Court.

Quaere—Whether a congregation, formed for the purposes of prayer and religious worship, requires the sanction of the Government, so that, without such sanction, it becomes an illegal association, in the sense of being criminal, within the meaning of Arts 210 and 212 of the Ordinance 6 of 1838? Ibrahim Esmael v. (2) Bequest to legal sharers—Power of disposing one-third of the property—Bequest to trustees for charitable purposes—Void for uncertainty of subject-matter.

Where, under the will of a Mahomedan testator, the widows have received more than they are entitled to, under Mahomedan Law, as legal share, i.e., one-eighth of the estate, a decree for the balance over and above their share should be passed against them.

Mahomedan Law permits a very wide scope to a testator as regards the one-third of his property which he may dispose of by will. His power of disposition for expenditure on charitable or religious purposes is subject to very slight restrictions.

Bequest of property by a Mahomedan testator for such charitable objects as the trustees appointed under the will may think proper, or for such purpose as that by which the testator may obtain eternal bliss, though valid under Mahomedan Law, is, on general principles applicable to all testators, inoperative and void on account of uncertainty of the subject-matter of the trust (a). Shahab-ud-din v. (1) Suit for damages—Information to police—Informant engaging pleader to prosecute—Reasonable and probable cause—Conviction of plaintiff by Court of first instance if conclusive.

Where a person gives false information to the police, he cannot escape liability for the natural and intended consequences of the act, merely because there was a subsequent investigation and the prosecution was set in motion by the police. When, further, he is found to have conducted the prosecution by engaging a pleader and a mukhtear, it cannot be urged that the police, and not he, was responsible for the prosecution.

A person cannot be held liable for damages for malicious prosecution, if it is not found that there was want of reasonable and probable cause, or that the circumstances of the case were such as to be in the eyes of the Judge inconsistent with the existence of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution.

The fact that the plaintiff was convicted by the Court of first instance and was only acquitted on appeal ought to be considered in determining whether there was reasonable or probable cause, but it cannot be regarded as conclusive in favour of the defendant. Bhula Chand Patro v. (3) Suit for—Information to police—Prosecution by police, instigated and conducted by private individual—Real prosecutor liable—Question of fact—Malice.

Malicious prosecution—(Concluded).

A suit for damages for malicious prosecution may lie against a person, who makes a false report which results in a prosecution, or who instigates the police to send persons up for trial, or who conducts the case against those persons when sent up for trial.

The question in all cases of this kind must be—who was the prosecutor? And the answer must depend upon the whole circumstances of the case. The mere setting of the law in motion is not the criterion. The conduct of the complainant before and after making the charge must be taken into consideration. Nor is it enough to say that the prosecution was instituted and conducted by the police.

Whether or not in any case, the prosecution was instituted and conducted by the police is a question of fact.

The foundation of the action is malice, and malice may be shown at any time in the course of the inquiry.

If a complainant does not go beyond giving what he believes to be correct information to the police, and the police, without further interference on his part (except giving such honest assistance as they may require), think fit to prosecute, it would be improper to make him responsible in damages for the failure of the prosecution (a). Pandit Gaya Parshad Tewari v. Before applying the general presumption of marriage arising from cohabitation with habit and repute, it is necessary to make sure that there are the conditions necessary for its existence, viz., first, there must be some body of neighbours, many or few, or some sort of public, large or small, before repute can arise, and second, the habit and repute, which alone is effective, is habit and repute of that particular status which, in the country in question, lawful marriage.

Held, that such a suit would lie (a) and that the plaintiff was entitled to a declaration that the second defendant had no conjugal rights against her, but that, under the circumstances of the case, without more definite material to go on in support of the wife's contention and the plaintiff having made out no clear and public repudiation of herself by her husband (b), the suit as against the first defendant should stand dismissed. Ishri v. Plaintiff sued to set aside the attachment and, proclamation of the plaint properties. The defendant obtained a money decree against certain junior members of a tarwad and attached the tarwad properties in execution of such decree. The Karnavan was also impleaded as a party defendant as the representative of a deceased junior member. It was found that the decree expressly exonerated the tarwad properties from liability. Held that the plaintiff's remedy was by way of separate suit, and not by way of application under S. 238, C P C.

Although, ordinarily speaking, an attachment subsists till set aside or is terminated by reason of limitation, attachment before judgment stands on a slightly different footing, viz., that the decree subsequently obtained must be capable of execution by the attachment already obtained, in other words, the attachment depends upon the decree for its further validity. If the decree extinguishes the alleged liability, the attachment becomes ipso facto void. It was therefore held that the question of limitation did not, in the circumstances of the case, arise. Sankaran Narayanan v. Kanaku Sankaranarayanan, 23 T.L.R. 57.

A family Karar authorised a member of the tarwad to make alienations of the family property for the discharge of certain debts specified in the Karar. The member made certain alienations under the Karar, but failed to discharge the debts specified in the Karar out of the proceeds of such sale

In a suit by the plaintiff for setting aside the alienation and for the removal of the manager from karnivasthanom, to which he became entitled after the Karar, it was held,

(1) that the alienations were binding on the other members only to the extent to which the sale proceeds have been applied for the purposes mentioned in the Karar,

(2) that the creditor was bound to show that consideration passed for the sale and that the sale proceeds were utilized for the discharge of debts mentioned in the Karar.

The ordinary presumption attaching to alienations made by karnavan does not arise in the case of a mere manager acting under limited powers.

Whenever an authority purports to be derived from a written instrument, a third party dealing with the agent is bound to take notice that there is a written instrument, and he ought to call for and examine the instrument itself to see whether it justifies the act of the agent. And if from his omission he should encounter a loss from the defective authority of the agent it is properly attributable to his own fault, since he must know that he has no other security than his reliance upon the good faith and credit of the agent *Kauli Lekshmi v. Master and servant *

(1) Contract of hiring providing for payment of certain wages—Discontinuance of business—Master liable to pay the wages agreed upon, whether he find work for the servant or not—Action for damages.

Where the contract of hiring provides for the payment of certain wages (not in proportion to the work done), although it may be optional on the part of the master to find work and he may, if he pleases, discontinue his business, yet he must nevertheless pay the wages agreed upon, whether he find work for the servant or not, or he will render himself liable to an action for such damages as a jury may think proper to give. This is the English Law on the subject. In the absence of any special Indian Law, this law may fairly be applied. This also appears to be in accordance with equity and good conscience.

In all such actions the servant seeks compensation, not for services he has rendered previous to his discharge, but for the injury he has sustained by such discharge in not being allowed to serve and earn the wages agreed on. The amount of damages must depend on the nature of the contract and the amount of wages agreed to be paid. If there were an express agreement for a month's notice it might be only a month's

(1) Assessment—Zerail land—Possession before trespass, character of—Assessment upon produce—Net produce to be considered—Customary and competition rent.

Dispossession of proprietor's zerail land. Principles for assessing mesne profits discussed.

The character of possession before trespass should be ascertained to arrive at the true measure of damages, because such possession is a fair index of intention as to the mode of occupation, if there were no trespass.

The character of the land and its use for a long series of years indicating that the plaintiff, if he had been in possession, would have used the land for cultivating it himself with ordinary food crops.

Held, that, mesne profits, should, be assessed on the basis of produce and not rent.

If the defendant used the land to suit his own fancy, if he did not use it in the most advantageous way, if he took the risk of cultivating it with indigo on the chance of getting high profits by manufacturing indigo, or if he adopted the more comfortable use of the land by letting it to tenants, and was satisfied with a comparatively small income, the plaintiff ought not to be a loser thereby. He must not suffer for the indolent or speculative conduct of a trespasser (a).

The difficulties of ascertaining mesne profits on the basis of produce adverted to.

The net and not the gross produce is the true measure of damages

The resultant net produce, after taking into account the costs of production and the risks of the agriculturists differs very little from competition or rack rent. Assuming complete freedom of competition, the rent paid by a tenant at will would practically coincide with the whole net produce of any given piece of land

Customary rents paid by most of the raiyats in a village tend to keep down the rent of zerail lands. Pundit Luchmi Narayan v. Sheikh Mazhar Hassan, 12 C.W.N. 650.

When a decree for mesne profits was satisfied by some out of the entire body of persons liable thereunder by payments made from time to time, and a question arose as to the principle which would regulate contribution amongst the parties themselves.

Held, that the correct principle was to allow interest on the sums paid from the date of payment, and then to apportion rateably the whole sum crediting interest on each amount paid in favour of the party on whose behalf it was paid,

(1) Inherited property of one's paternal grandmother—rule of the Dhammathats as to such property—whether the rule is that the party by whom it is inherited has a superior right in the inherited property to the other party—and why—what is the share of the inheriting party in case of divorce by mutual consent—and why—Mortgages effected by husband of paternal grandmother after her death—whether grandson on redeeming mortgaged property is bound to pay the whole amount due on such mortgage or only amount proportionate to his share.

Maung Aung Mayat sued for a $\frac{1}{3}$ share of the inherited property of his paternal grandmother, Ma Ka, the said property consisting of four holdings of land shown in the maps and aggregating to 4.72 acres

The lower Courts agreed in finding that the land in suit, 4.72 acres or 17 yauk-seiks, was all acquired by Ma Ka by inheritance during her coverture with Maung Sa.

Plaintiff-respondent, who is still a minor, is the only grandson of Ma Ka and Maung Sa, who had three children, two of whom died without issue. The eldest son, Aung Pyo, had one son, plaintiff. Ma Ka died about 25 years ago; Aung Pyo died about 13 years ago and Maung Sa about 11 years ago.

It was argued that the suit was barred by limitation, as it was said that Aung Pyo had 12 years within which to bring the suit from the death of Ma Ka. It was, therefore, urged that he was barred before his death and that Aung Myat was equally barred as claiming through him.

Held, that it was not clear that Aung Pyo was time barred before he died, as appellant, Ma Shwe Hmon, herself stated that, at her marriage with Maung Sa, Aung Pyo was only 9 years old, and that, therefore, he was a minor when his mother died; and because Ma Shwe Hmon in her written statement said that Aung Pyo died 14 years ago.

It was further argued that plaintiffs' share should be $\frac{1}{3}$ and not $\frac{1}{4}$, land inherited during marriage by husband and wife being classed as lettetpwa.

Held, that, throughout the Dhammathats, it was recognised that the party by whom it was inherited had a superior right in the inherited property to the other party, and, that, in the case of divorce by mutual consent, for instance, the inheriting party takes a $\frac{2}{3}$ share, because he or she is the party through whom it was obtained (a).

Held, also, that the rule was clearly laid down in para. 226 of the Attathakega, according to which the plaintiff was entitled to a $\frac{1}{3}$ share of his grand-mother's inherited property, namely, the 4.72 acres of land in suit.

There were two mortgages effected on the land by Maung Sa after Maung Ka's death, which he was entitled to effect. One was of 2.84 acres to San Dun for Rs. 80, and the other of the remainder of the land for Rs. 50 to Maung Seik, afterwards transferred to Maung Shan Gyi.

Held, that, as regards the mortgage for Rs. 50, plaintiff was not entitled to claim possession until he had paid off the mortgaged debt, but that he was not entitled to possession of $\frac{1}{3}$ on paying off $\frac{1}{3}$ of the debt, as the mortgage affected the whole land and was not divisible.

Held, as regards the other mortgage, that the plaintiff had nothing to pay to any of the present defendants in respect of this land and that as against them he was entitled to the relief prayed for. Ma Shwe Hmon v. Maung Aung Myat, 14 Bur. L.R. 117.

On the 28rd October, 1897, one M.A., executed a mortgage of certain property in favour of H.A., which was registered on the 29th of October, 1897. This mortgage was found to be fictitious and without consideration, and to have been made solely for the purpose of defeating the creditors of the mortgagor. On the 15th of August, 1898, the mortgagee transferred his rights under this mortgage to his wife B, in part satisfaction of her dower debt. It was found that this was a bona fide transaction and that B obtained the transfer of the mortgage without any knowledge of its fraudulent character and was a transferee in good faith and for consideration. On the 29th of October, 1897, the same property was again mortgaged to one B.P., who accepted the mortgage in ignorance of the existence of the mortgage of the 23rd of October, 1897. This mortgage was registered on the 22nd of March, 1898. B.P. afterwards brought a suit for sale on his mortgage impleading B as a defendant, as well as the mortgagor and the prior mortgagees.

Held, that B was entitled to no relief as against B.P., though as against the mortgagor she was entitled to be paid the amount of the consideration named in the deed of transfer in her favour out of the surplus sale proceeds (if any) of the mortgaged property, and that the proviso to S. 51 of the Transfer of Property Act did not apply to the case as it was intended to safeguard rights already acquired. Basti Begam v. The plaintiff executed a mortgage-deed in favour of the defendants Nos. 2 and 4, defendant No. 3 being the son of defendant No. 1, and defendant No. 4 being the son of defendant No. 2, for Rs. 1,000 of which Rs. 875 were to be applied by them towards payment of the prior mortgages. Upon the same day he executed a permanent lease of the mortgaged land in favour of the defendant Nos. 1 and 2 and subsequently received a labuliat from them. The defendants did not pay up the prior mortgages but continued in possession of the lands leased to them. The plaintiff in the case sought for cancellation of the mortgage and the perpetual lease with the labuliat. The Courts below found as a fact that the mortgage and the lease were part and parcel of one and the same transaction.

Held, that the case, being one of contract based upon reciprocal promises in which the defendants refused to perform their part of the contract, and that, the contract of lease and that of mortgage being parts of one and the same bargain (a), the plaintiff was entitled to be relieved of both of the deeds. Saiyed Muhomed Bakar v. (8) Mortgagor, purchase by, if and when extinguishes his mortgage—Mortgagee purchaser, rights of, to fall back upon mortgage—Mortgage, if and when kept alive—Equity—Lis pendens, doctrine of, when applies.

Although a security is extinguished upon the actual sale of the mortgaged properties and distribution of the proceeds, yet, a mortgagee, who has purchased at a sale in execution of a decree upon his mortgage, is entitled to rely upon his mortgage as a shield against a subsequent encumbrancer (a)

The question whether a mortgage which has been satisfied is to be construed as extinguished or kept alive for the benefit of the person who makes the payment, is simply a question of intention to be determined with reference to the surrounding circumstances as they exist at the time when the mortgage is discharged. Although, ordinarily, when the interests of the mortgagor and the mortgagee are united in the same person, it is not necessary for him to keep them distinct, equity will keep them distinct, when, from the intention of the party, either express or implied, it is for his benefit that they should be so kept; it depends upon the intention actual or presumed, of the person in whom the interests are united, and this person will be presumed to intend that which is most to his advantage.

Where the mortgagee institutes an action to enforce his security, proceeds to judgment, sells the premises, and purchases them himself, it does not necessarily follow that he intends that his title under the mortgage should merge in the equity of redemption.

A mortgage, however, will not be kept alive in aid of a fraud or wrong; a mortgage substantially satisfied may be kept alive in equity.

only when this is requisite to the advancement of justice, and this will never be allowed when the result will be, form the forms of law, to aid in perpetrating a fraud or an injury (b).

A purchaser of a share of an estate under S. 13 of Act XI of 1859 may be affected by the doctrine of lis pendens, if he makes his purchase during the pendency of a litigation to enforce a mortgage upon that property (c).

In the case of a mortgage suit, the lis pendens continues after the decree nisi, and the doctrine of lis pendens is applicable to proceedings to realise the mortgage after the decree for sale (d).

But where, as in the present case, the purchase at the revenue sale was effected some time after the mortgage sale had been confirmed, there was no lis pendens on the mortgage pending at the date of the revenue sale. Bhawani Koer v. Mathura Prasad, 7 C.L.J. 1.

A prior mortgagee should join the puisne mortgagees as a party to a suit for sale against the mortgagor, if he has notice of their mortgages. He cannot in the execution of a decree against the mortgagor, attach property in the possession of a puisne mortgagee, if the latter has not been made a party to the suit in which the decree sought to be executed against him was passed. The mere fact that the puisne mortgagee has himself brought a suit for a declaration that the property in his possession is not liable to be attached in execution of the decree against the mortgagor will not entitle the prior incumbrancer to have the questions regarding his right decided in that case (d).

Held, that it is a well established legal principle, that, when a mortgagee with possession does not keep a proper and true account of the income of the mortgaged property, the mortgagor is entitled to calculate it on the basis of the highest profits the property is capable of yielding.

Held, also, that, (as in this case), where a vendor is a helpless puppet in the hands of a vendee, and the deed of sale is executed and registered under peculiar circumstances, the sale cannot be treated as a genuine transaction entered into with free consent. Ram Chand v. A mortgage by deposit of title deeds is something more than a mere oral agreement or declaration, and, therefore, S. 48 of the Registration Act does not apply (a).

As regards one of the pieces of land in suit, the only document appearing from the record to have been deposited with the 1st respondent, who claimed an equitable mortgage, was a duplicate of a report to the thugyi that, after Ma Tha's death, the land was inherited by Maung Shwe Tu.

Held, that this was not a title deed, and the deposit of it could not effect mortgage. Pau Wa v. O.A.R. Yallappa Chetty, 14 Bur. L.R. 311.

The title-deeds of a house were deposited with the plaintiffs, when a promissory note for Rs. 10,000 was executed, with the intention of thereby giving plaintiffs a mortgage over the property as security for this loan. There was a note or memorandum to this effect made on this promissory note.

Afterwards the promissory note sued on (for Rs. 19,000) was executed, when there was no further deposit of title-deeds, which were said to be with the plaintiffs, but were not produced. A memo was made on this note that the grants already with the plaintiffs were security.

Held that, as regards the original loan Rs. 10,000, there was a completed transaction of mortgage, evidenced by the delivery of the deeds to plaintiffs, with the obvious intention of giving them a charge thereon, and that the note or memorandum on this promissory note was not the document creating the mortgage, but a mere note or narrative of the transaction, which had been completed and could be proved independently of it.

Held also that, when the promissory note for Rs. 19,000 was executed, the obligation on the promissory note for Rs. 10,000 was extinguished and a fresh obligation was created.

Held further that the only act of the parties, as regards this promissory note, from which any intention could be inferred, was the retention by plaintiffs of the title-deeds, after the promissory note, as security for which they were originally deposited, had been discharged, that, in the absence of any other evidence, the Court would not be justified in holding it proved that the deeds were retained as security for this loan ; that the fact that they were so retained was evidenced only by the memorandum at the foot of the promissory note, which was not a mere narrative of a completed transaction, but was in itself the means, by which the charge, if any, was created.

Mortgage—(Continued).4.—(Equitable)—(Concluded).

Held, therefore, that the memorandum, read with the promissory note, to which it was appended, constituted a complete record of the mortgage set up, that the mortgage of the property for Rs. 19,000, if created, was created by this memorandum and could only be proved by it ; that it was the embodiment of the transaction and that there was no complete mortgage before it was made, and could not be proved for want of registration L.P.R. An order of an additional District Judge, refusing to make absolute a conditional decree for foreclosure, by which the mortgage-money was made payable by instalments, on the ground that all instalments due up to date have been deposited in Court, is a "decree" within the meaning of S. 2, C.P.C.; and an appeal lies against such order under S. 540, Civ. The defendants bought lands worth more than Rs. 100, and, being unable to pay the purchase-money, mortgaged them to secure payment of the price. They took no deed of conveyance from the vendor, the mortgage-deed reciting that the conveyance was to be executed later on. In a suit by the plaintiff to foreclose the mortgage ;

Held, dismissing the suit, that, the defendants having acquired 'no title, and having nothing to mortgage, the mortgage in favour of the true owner was meaningless (a), even where the mortgagor was in physical possession, and that the mortgage was not enforceable at law.

Where both the parties to a transaction know the truth as to matters therein stated, no question of estoppel by a false statement can arise (b). Sitaram v. Mt. Harku Bai, 4 N L R 28.

(3) Promiss to re-pay mortgage money in instalments—Agreement to treat mortgage as sale in default of paying instalments—Application of Reg XVII of 1806—Meaning of the term "stipulated period" in S. 8 of the regulation.

Regulation XVII of 1806, does not apply to the case of a mortgage, in which there is no stipulated period for redemption, but there is a condition that the mortgage debt is to be re-paid in annual instalments, and that on default the land should be deemed to have been sold for the balance due at the time of default (a). The term "stipulated period" in S. 8 of the regulation means stipulated period for redemption, i.e., the full term, on the expiry of which the mortgage money is payable, although the mortgagee may, on a default being made, sue to foreclose at an earlier period under the terms of the deed. A foreclosure notice issued before the expiry of the stipulated period is premature and useless (b). Har Gopal v. Bhagwan Sahai, 70 P.R. 1907=38 P.L.R. 1908.

S. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act prohibits a sale of mortgaged property held in contravention of the provisions of that section (a).

In a joint Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara, a son is not deprived of his equity of redemption by virtue of a sale prohibited by law (b).

A suit for redemption is not barred merely by reason of silence or acquiescence on the part of mortgagor unless there is a release of the equity of redemption (c). The only modes in which a mortgagee can extinguish the right of redemption are either by getting the mortgagor to execute a release of the equity of redemption in his favour, or by a proper suit under the Transfer of Property Act. A mortgagee by erroneously representing himself as owner of the mortgaged premises cannot make his possession adverse to the true owners. Jhabba Lal v. Chhajju Mal, 4 A.L.J. 787 = A.W.N. (2) Suit for redemption—Practice—Plaintiff suing as also heir—Death of plaintiff—Abatement of suit.

One P, sister of the respondent D, sued the appellant for redemption of mortgage, executed by P's father in favour of the appellant, on the ground that she, as an unmarried daughter, had obtained the sole right to the property of her father to the exclusion of her married sister, to whom along with herself, when a minor, the mortgaged property had, in a previous litigation between the parties interested in the mortgage, been surrendered by the order of the Court, which had held the mortgage debt to have been satisfied. In the present suit P was made a pro forma defendant.

P having died during the pendency of the suit, D applied to have her name removed from the array of defendants and substituted as plaintiff.

Held, that the right claimed by P being a personal right and adverse to that of her sister D, the suit abated after P's death, and D could not get her name substituted as plaintiff and continue the suit Balak Puri v. Musammat Durga, 4 A.L.J. 783 = A.W.N. (1908), 6 = 3 M.L.T. 181 = 30 A. 49.

(3) Practice—Transfer of Judge—Propriety of re-opening questions already decided—Mortgage—redemption—Decree, interpretation of—Accounting.

When a Judge gives his decision on some of the questions involved in a case leaving the remaining questions to be determined at a subsequent date, the Judge who succeeds him in the meanwhile does not act properly, though not illegally, in passing judgment contrary to the decision given by his predecessor, especially in a case when judgment is open to appeal. It is only when there is an obvious and patent error in the earlier decision that a successor should re-open a question in an appealable case.

A mortgagee obtained a decree that he was entitled to recover the mortgage-money from the mortgagor and other property of the mortgagor and the latter was also made personally liable for a part of the sum decreed. The mortgaged property was in possession of the mortgagee under the terms of the mortgage for profits to be realized in lieu of interest. The mortgagor brought a suit for redemption and claimed deduction for the profits realized by the mortgagee from the amount adjudged against him by the decree.

Held, that the claim was valid under the terms of the decree.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the case it was ordered that on the mortgagor's failure to redeem within the fixed period he would not be able to redeem in execution of the decree.

On the true construction of cl. (4) of the mortgage deed, which provided "that in case of default in payment by me (mortgagor) of instalments of interest at the time herein appointed, the mortgagee shall have immediately on such default, power either to recover the whole of his principal, interest, and, sud Mazid Mun-afa Maskura, further interest on the said interest according to the rate herein fixed ... or the said mortgagee shall, in default of payment of the instalment or instalments of interest aforesaid, take possession of the mortgaged property," their Lordships agreed with the lower appellate Court that the mortgagor was not liable for compound interest, since the mortgagee entered into possession of the mortgaged property.

Their Lordships upheld the concurrent finding of both the lower Courts, that, under the mortgage deed in this case, the mortgagee was entitled to get from the mortgagor, over and above the usufruct of the mortgaged property, the amount paid by him on account of maintenance and enhanced Government revenue.

Under cl. (10) of the mortgage deed in question, which provided that "whenever after the term of the mortgage or during the said term I (mortgagor) pay to the mortgagee in any khal has (fallow season), i.e., in the month of Jeth, the whole of the mortgage money, and the whole of the interest together with Government revenue, arrears of rent and takanj advances, due from tenants, and other expenses incurred under the terms of this document, without raising any objection of law, such as limitation, etc., I, the mortgagor, shall have power to redeem the mortgaged property," their Lordships agreed with the lower Courts that the mortgagee was entitled against the mortgagor to arrears of rent due from tenants, even when such arrears were statute-barred as against the tenants.

The mortgagee brought a suit against the mortgagor, alleging that at the date of the suit there was due to him a sum of Rs. 33,087-13-8 and, praying for a decree for possession of the property, or, in the alternative, for recovery that sum with further interest. A Commissioner appointed to make up the accounts reported that Rs. 33,087-9-8 were due to the mortgagee at the date of the suit. The Court in giving judgment, held, that there was no necessity for passing an order as to the amount due under the mortgage bond saying that the account was correct, and then proceeded to give the mortgagee a decree for possession. The amount alleged to be due by the mortgagee and found due by the Commissioner was arrived at by calculating compound interest on unpaid instalments of interest. It was contended by the mortgagee, in a subsequent suit brought against him by the mortgagor for redemption of the mortgaged property, that the decree in the previous suit must be accepted as settling the amount due to the mortgagee on the date of that suit.

Held, by their Lordships, who adopted the conclusion of the Lower Appellate Court, that nothing had occurred in the previous suit to raise an estoppel against the mortgagor, and, therefore, he might, in the subsequent suit, show, if he could, that, under the terms of the deed compound interest was not payable.

The mortgagee was not entitled to recover the costs of the previous suit in the absence of any provision in that behalf, in the mortgage deed.

A point not taken by a party before either of the lower Courts was not open to it, at the time of the hearing of the appeal before their Lordships. Muhammad Naseem v. Mirza Muhammad Abbas Ali Khan, 10 Bom. L.R. 126 (P.C.)

(6)—Construction of the deed—Provision to make over land on failure to redeem at a certain time, effect of.—Right of redemption—Transfer of Property Act, S. 60, applicability of, to Burma.

A mortgage document ran as follows:—

On the 11th Tazaungmon Lazok, 1261, U.E. and his daughter, Ma Kywe said to Ko Yunut and his wife, Ma Paw, "We wish to mortgage our land, called Maubin, yielding 600 baskets of paddy, situated on the north of Ywagauk and bounded as shown below, for Rs. 430. We will redeem it in Tabaung, 1262, by payment of an extra sum of Rs. 70, i.e., Rs. 500 in all. If while the land is in Ko Yunut's possession there be any interference on the part of Government or others, we will bear the responsibility thereof with costs. If, on the arrival of the date (specified), we fail to redeem, we will make over outright to Ko Yunut and wife, Ma Paw, the land within the (aforesaid) boundaries for Rs. 430, the money advanced." Whereupon Ko Yunut and wife, Ma Paw, paid over Rs. 430 and accepted the maubin land in mortgage, etc.

The mortgagors sued for redemption after the expiry of the stipulated time.

Held (1) that, in Burma, the Courts have nothing to do with the ancient law of India in relation to mortgages, that they are bound by equity, justice and good conscience, and that the rules contained in the Transfer of Property Act have been commended to the Courts as rules of equity, justice and good conscience (a);

(7) Who is entitled to redeem—Person having an interest in mortgage property, repudiating the mortgage as unauthorised and a not binding on him, whether entitled to redeem.

Redemption is primarily an incident of the contract of mortgage, and, as such, the right to it can only exist in such persons as are reached and bound by the contract. No person who is not affected by the contract of mortgage can sue to redeem such mortgage. Thus, where a person having an interest in the mortgaged property repudiates the mortgage as unauthorised and as not binding on him such a person has no right to redeem. If he has any interest in the property covered by the mortgage, his suit would be one, not to enforce, but to avoid the contract. Ghanya v. Ukund Rao, 4 N.L.R. 9.

Where, in a suit for possession, by redemption, of half of a building, which half was worth more than Rs. 2,500, but the mortgage burden on which was only Rs. 1,500, the claim was for redemption on payment of Rs. 1,000, and the decree, appealed against, was for redemption on payment of Rs. 1,500, the value of the suit was held to be Rs. 1,500, i.e., the sum made payable by the decree appealed against, and not the value of the property bearing the mortgage.

burden, and the case was held to be one to be argued on the basis of cl. (b) of S. 70 (1) of the Punjab Courts Act and not under S. 40 (1) (a) (ii).

Where a mortgagor appeared, on receipt of a defective notice of foreclosure issued under the provisions of Reg. XVII of 1806, to contest the notices and offered to pay to the proper persons, held that the mere offer to pay to the persons entitled did not amount to a waiver of his right to take advantage of the legal defects in the foreclosure procedure in a subsequent suit for the redemption of the mortgage (a).

(9) Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), S. 13—Suit for redemption decreed—Second suit for surplus profits recoverable by mortgagee during mortgage not maintainable—Effect of Art. 105, Limitation Act (XV of 1837).

Art. 105 of the Limitation Act must not be construed so as to conflict with the provisions of S. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and must be deemed to refer to cases in which the mortgagor has got possession of the mortgaged property otherwise than by a suit for redemption (a). Where a mortgagor brings a suit and obtains a decree for redemption, he cannot maintain a second suit for recovery of surplus collections made by the mortgagee, during the period of the mortgage, S. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure being a bar to the maintenance of that suit (b).

Per Karamat Husain, J.—The right to claim the surplus profits is synchronous with the right to claim possession of the mortgaged property, and to hold that the cause of action for claiming excess collections accrues when the mortgage-debt has been satisfied, is inconsistent with the principles on which the law of redemption is based (b). Ram Din v. (10) Right of a prior mortgagee to compel puisne mortgagee to redeem the whole—Redemption of a portion of the mortgaged property where the mortgagee refuses to allow redemption of the whole—Estoppel by defence raised in the previous case.

Under a mortgage of September, 1879, and a subsequent agreement, S became the mortgagee in possession, for a term of 12 years, of a 4 annas share of K and an 8 annas share of B in two villages. In December, 1889, K mortgaged his 4 annas share for 30 years to the plaintiff, who redeemed the mortgage of 1879 and took possession of both shares. In 1897, B mortgaged his 8 annas share to the defendant, who then sued the plaintiff for redemption of that share on the payment of the amount due on it under the mortgage of 1879. The plaintiff insisted on the defendant redeeming the whole share of 12 annas, and the defendant's suit was dismissed. In 1899, the defendant brought another suit for redemption of both shares, obtained a decree and took possession. In 1901, plaintiff sued for redemption of the 4 annas share of K only, on payment of the amount due on it under the mortgage of 1879, but offered to redeem the share of B also. The defendant did not accept the offer.

Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem K's 4 annas share. Jawahir Singh v. Baldeo Bakhsh Singh, 10 O.C. 193 (P.C.) = 6 C.L.J. 672 = 12 C.W.N. 515.

The purchaser of the mortgaged property from the mortgagor sued for redemption and contended that the condition as to redemption was so inequitable and onerous that relief from it should be given on equitable grounds, and it should be struck out.

Held, that, a person, who, believing himself to be a representative of a mortgagor, redeems the mortgaged property, becomes virtually an assignee of the mortgagee; and in a redemption suit subsequently brought by the de jure heir of the mortgagor, he cannot successfully plead that he has lien on the said property for the amounts spent by him on funeral ceremonies of the mortgagor and his wife and liquidation of their debts, and that he can retain possession of the property redeemed until those amounts are paid to him. - (14) Recital by joint mortgagees—Acknowledgment—Liability—Limitation.

Certain items of properties were held on mortgage under one deed jointly by the defendant's father and his nephew, from plaintiff's ancestor. Subsequently the nephew executed a deed in favour of the first defendant's father signed by them only, containing a recital that the share allotted as the due proportion of the consideration amount chargeable on some of the items of the mortgaged property was Rs. 400 and that their share of the debt had been released in favour of the first defendant's father.

A suit was brought by the plaintiff for redemption of the whole of the mortgaged properties. The defence was that the suit was barred by limitation. It was contended on behalf of plaintiff that the recital in the release deed was an acknowledgment of liability which saved limitation. Held, that the recital was an acknowledgment of the mortgage so far as those properties are concerned, but that no further acknowledgment could be implied that the remaining portion of the consideration mentioned in the document executed by the plaintiff's ancestor stood charged on the remaining items of properties mentioned in that document.

An existing liability cannot be read into a document by proof alunde or even by admission subsequently made by a party to the suit in which the acknowledgment is relied upon as saving the bar of limitation.

An acknowledgment to bind a party to a suit must be signed by the party or some person through whom he derives title or liability. Narayanan Parameswaram v. Narasimha Aiyar Sankara Narayana Aiyer, 23 T.L.R. 36.

Property subject to a possessory mortgage was again mortgaged by an unregistered deed to secure a fresh advance. The second mortgage provided that the property should not be redeemed except upon payment of the additional advance.

Held further, that a purchaser of the property subject to the mortgage was not bound by the stipulation postponing redemption till payment of the additional advance.

The puisne mortgagee is bound to pay the mortgage money with interest at the rate specified in the mortgage to the prior mortgagee and any amount paid by the prior mortgagee in possession for the protection of the property or for redeeming any prior mortgage with interest as also the costs of the suit and appeal as in an ordinary redemption suit. Held further, that secondary evidence of the terms of the mortgage deed, if admissible, must be of the kinds specified in S. 69 of the Evidence Act.

a question as to the conditions of the redemption arose. Held, that the prius mortgagee not being a party to the previous suit, it ought not to affect either his rights or his liabilities. He could not use the previous decree so as to cut down the prior mortgagee's interest, and at the same time deprive him of the whole advantage of it. The prior mortgagee should, therefore, be entitled to whatever interest his contract entitled him to (a).

The equitable considerations which appear to have prevailed with the learned Judges in *Gangaias Bhattar v. Certain immoveable property, belonging to the joint estate of a Hindu family governed by the Mitakshara Law of the Benares School, was mortgaged by A, B and C, three of the members of the above family. To the foreclosure suit brought by the mortgagee against A, B and C, the sons and grandsons of the mortgagors, A, B and C, were not made parties. After the foreclosure decree was made absolute, when the mortgagee sought possession, the co-parceners, who had not been made parties to the former suit, instituted a suit for redemption. The lower Court, while decreeing redemption, held that the price of redemption should be fixed at what was found payable in the former suit. Held :

If it be taken as a general proposition that the price of redemption, to persons, who should have been, but were not, made parties to the foreclosure decree, is to be limited to the sum fixed by that decree, regardless of the time which may have passed since the decree was made, then the rule laid down would be at variance with the principle enunciated in 15 C.P. L.R. 26.

It is difficult to see how a foreclosure-decree could be regarded as non-existent with respect to the redemption rights of the plaintiffs, and yet be used against the correlative rights of the defendants. No undue advantage would be given to the defendants, if a fresh mortgage account, unconnected with the account which formed the basis of the foreclosure-decree, is now made the foundation of the redemption-decree.

The mortgagees are not under any legal obligation to create an opportunity for redemption, by the mortgagors or any person claiming under them, at any particular time. Their obligation is limited to this—that whenever they might claim to foreclose against any such person, they must give him a period to be fixed by the Court, within which to exercise his right of redemption.

The mortgage-debt remains a debt which the plaintiffs are bound to pay according to the terms of the deed, and they are therefore liable for daily increasing interest while they choose to leave the debt unpaid. This increase of interest is not due to any fault of the defendants. The plaintiffs are not bound to await a foreclosure-suit by the defendants before they seek redemption. They could have paid and redeemed on any day after the due date fixed by the bond.

A decree, which is a dead letter so far as it grants relief to the decree-holders, is equally ineffective to bind them, in respect of the rights of persons not parties to such decree (a).

No Court of equity, justice and good conscience, would allow redemption in 1908, on payment only of the amount declared due in 1901, the mortgagees having in the meantime been kept out of possession of the mortgaged property.

If the defendants obtained physical possession for any time, they must account for the profits, if any, taken by them during that period, or lose their interest therefor.

If, though in possession for a term, they, in fact, obtained no produce from the land, they are still liable to allow something for their use and occupation of it.

If the physical possession of the plaintiffs has never been disturbed, under cover of foreclosure-decree, by the defendants or any person claiming under them, then the calculation will be one of unbroken interest from the date of the bond to the date of redemption.

The account must be made without any reference to the foreclosure decree, which, for the purpose of this case, must be regarded as having no existence.

It is not permissible to make any assumption or conjecture as to what would have been the precise result—redemption or foreclosure, if plaintiffs had been joined in the foreclosure suit Ghasiram v. Jhingwa, 4 N.L.R. 168.

The plaintiff obtained a sub-mortgage of the 2nd defendant's interest under a usufructuary mortgage from the first defendant in 1892. He sued on this sub-mortgage and obtained a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property as well as a personal decree. In execution, the land mortgaged to the 2nd defendant under the mortgage of 1892 was put up for sale and purchased by the plaintiff and he obtained possession, but was dispossessed under S. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, at the instance of the 1st defendant who alleged that the mortgage had been redeemed. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover possession, it was held, that, as the rights of a sub-mortgagee could not be affected by transactions between the original mortgagee and the mortgagor effected after notice of the sub-mortgage, the plaintiff was entitled to the possession of the lands, and that he could not be met by the plea of payment of the original mortgage after the date of the sub-mortgage, when the same had not been made before notice of the sub-mortgage. Narayana Mudali v. The maxim "nemo potest esse tenans et dominus" (a person cannot be at the same time both landlord and tenant of the same premises) does not mean that a landlord cannot own the equity of redemption in respect of a holding as a separate interest. By effecting a valid mortgage a tenant splits his right into two parts, each of which being distinct from the other.

It is competent to a landlord to take a mortgage direct from a tenant with an absolute occupancy right (a).

Where an absolute occupancy tenant made a valid usufructuary mortgage of his holding, and afterwards surrendered his rights in the tenancy to the landlord, it was held that the landlord acquired the equity of redemption of such holding.

Held, also, that the landlord's mere acceptance of rent from the mortgagee in possession did not extinguish his right of redemption.

More acceptance of rent from the man in possession does not make that man a tenant (b). Ball Ram v. Ram Rao Mahratta, 4 N.L.R. 57.

If the Court of Wards, which, under direction of the Local Government acting under S. 43 of Madras Act I of 1902, has dispossessed a usufructuary mortgagee of the mortgaged property and has administered the estate itself, and on the death of the ward, takes no action under S. 57, its power of superintendence ceases ipso facto and the property ceases to be the property of a ward within the meaning of S. 43. So in accordance with cl. (2), S. 55, the usufructuary mortgagee is entitled to be replaced in possession of the mortgaged property. He regains the right to collect the rents and profits, the effect of S. 43 being not to turn the usufructuary mortgagee into a simple mortgagee.

Where the Court of Wards, on the death of the disqualified proprietor, releases the property from its superintendence and hands over to the usufructuary mortgagee, who was dispossessed under S. 43 of the Act, inter alia, certain promissory notes executed by tenants, for arrears of rent (due on the mortgaged property), in favour of the Court of Wards' manager, held that, he having been replaced in possession of the mortgaged lands in accordance with S. 55 (2), is entitled to sue on those pro-notes without obtaining an endorsement from the Court of Wards, because, on the death of the ward, the power of the Court of Wards having ceased, there was no one who could legally endorse the notes.

The Hyderabad Subsidiary Force which had its head-quarters in the Secunderabad cantonment, was a force in the employment of the East India Company and commanded by the Company's officers, but maintained, by agreement, in Hyderabad territory for the protection of the Nizam. There never was in existence any treaty prescribing the limits of the powers of the Nizam's officers on the one hand, and the military commander commanding the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force on the other, with respect to the management, control, and disposition of the cantonment and the land comprised in it. When the Nizam's Government admitted a British force within its territory, and allotted to it Secunderabad cantonment as its head-quarters, it no doubt, by necessary implication, conveyed to the military authorities all powers of jurisdiction, control and management incident to maintaining the efficiency and the discipline of the troops, the peace and good order and convenient use of the cantonment. But it would be going long way beyond this to hold that the officer commanding the troops was empowered to alienate, in perpetuity, land forming part of the cantonment and undoubtedly Hyderabad territory for a purpose wholly unconnected with military requirements.

The appellants, who were members of the Parsi community, claimed that the founders of the Parsi Tower of Silence, which stands on a portion of certain land, situated in the Secunderabad cantonment, were in their life-time owners of the land in question, and that the property had devolved upon themselves as descendants, and representative in title, of the original founders. The Respondents, who were also members of the Parsi community, contended that the land in question had been granted to the whole Parsi community for a public purpose, and to enure for the benefit of the community generally for all time by the cantonment authority. The most important document relied upon by the Appellants was issued by an Officer of the Hyderabad State and purporting to express a transaction, by which the State had assented to the grant of the land in question to the founders, and directed possession of it to be delivered to them. Another document in evidence also obtained on behalf of the founders, through their agent, purported to be issued by the authority of the Brigadier commanding the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force and to certify that the Parsis of Secunderabad had permission to enclose the land in question, which was given for a tower to be built on it.

Held—That the considerations set out above must be borne in mind in estimating the effect of the two documents, that the first, emanating from the State, purported to deal with and enforce, a grant of the land to the founders by name, and the delivery of possession to them, that the second document, emanating from the cantonment authorities, did not deal with title or possession, but gave permission to use the land, already conveyed, for the particular purpose of a Tower of Silence, and to enclose the land, which were matters obviously within the discretion of the commanding officer, and that the effect of the two documents, was to show a good title in the founders, and not in the Parsi community. Pestonji Jivanji v. Occupancy holding.

(1) Non-transferable—Purchase by landlord in execution of money-decree, whether subject to previous mortgage—Estoppel—Evidence Act (I of 1872), S. 115.

Where in execution of a money decree, the landlords of a non-transferable occupancy holding purchased the holding after it had been mortgaged by the tenants in favour of a third party.

Held, that in a suit by the latter to enforce the mortgage, the landlords were not estopped from setting up the defence that the holding was not transferable without their consent.

That the sale of the holding by the landlords did not amount to a representation that it was transferable without their consent, but only that it was transferable with their consent.

That the landlords did not merely purchase the equity of redemption, the English law of mortgage not being applicable to the case.

The law of estoppel in force in this country is contained in S. 115 of the Evidence Act (a). Bibi Asmatunnessa Katun Saheba v. Harendra Lal Biswas, 12 C.W.N. 721 = 8 C.L.J. 29.

(2) Transferability—Usage—Growing usage not sufficient—Usufructuary mortgage by tenant—Subsequent relinquishment to landlord—Right of landlord to re-enter—Mortgage or out-and-out sale

In 1894 an occupancy ryot executed a usufructuary mortgage of the holding, put the mortgagee in possession, and though it was arranged that the tenant would continue to pay rent to the landlord, the tenant left the village and abandoned all connection with the land. In 1901, the tenant executed a deed of relinquishment in favour of the landlord and surrendered the land to him, and it did not appear that he paid any rent since.

BRETT, J. held, on second appeal, upon a consideration of the terms of the mortgage-bond and the circumstances connected with the transaction, that although the document purported to be a usufructuary mortgage for sixty years, the transaction was really an out-and-out sale and the deed was drawn up in that form in order to evade the provisions of law against the transfer of occupancy-holdings.

Held by Rampini, C.J. and Mitra, J.—That apart from such considerations, the moment the deed of relinquishment was executed by the tenant, the landlord became entitled to re-enter.

A growing usage of transferability of occupancy holdings is of no effect against the landlord. The usage, to be effective, must have already grown up (a). Rajendra Kishore Adhikari v. Chandra Nath Dutt, 12 C.W.N. 878

(3) Non-transferable—Transfer, if may be questioned by transferor's heirs—Transfer by will—Void or voidable—Landlord's option.

The transfer of an occupancy holding which is not transferable by local custom or usage, is not a void transaction. It is binding between the parties, namely, the transferor and the transferee, and all persons claiming through them, and is voidable only at the option of the landlord.

The heirs of an occupancy riyat would therefore be bound by a transfer of the holding made by will (a). Hari Das Bairagi v. Uday Chandra Das Bairagi, 12 C.W.N. 1086=8 C.L.J. 261.

Occupancy rights.

(1) Suit by landlord to resume occupancy right after the death of widow of late tenant—Plea of adverse possession by one holding under widow, validity of.

In a suit by proprietors to eject a person who set up title as occupancy tenant, immediately after the death of the widow of the previous tenant, the defendant set up adverse possession, based on mutation of names in his favour during the widow's lifetime, on a subsequent possession as occupancy tenant and on an unsuccessful application by the father of some of the plaintiffs, and failure by them to sue in a Civil Court as directed by the Revenue authorities. Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to sue till after the death of the widow and that S. 9 of the Tenancy Act would preclude the acquisition by mere lapse of time of a right of occupancy. The suit was, therefore, not barred by limitation and the defendant could not set up a claim by adverse possession. Held also, that the plea that the defendant's possession was adverse to his adoptive mother, and through her to the plaintiffs, was not valid. Ganda Singh v. A mortgage or other alienation in favour of several persons, in which the shares of the several alienees are definitely specified, does not constitute those alienees joint-tenants. They are tenants-in-common and there is no jus accrescendi between them.

Where, in a suit for the partition of joint property, by reason of a mistake of the parties which was shared by the Commissioner who was appointed to make the partition, a certain portion of the property was omitted from the report and the final decree did not deal with the lands comprised in that portion.

Held—That the effect of the decree was to leave unaffected the joint title and possession of the parties in the lands omitted in the decree.

That such lands may be partitioned in a subsequent suit at the instance of one of the parties.

A mere determination of the shares by the preliminary decree is not tantamount to partition.

A suit for dissolution and winding-up of a partnership involves the determination of the plaintiff's share and the taking of accounts, and the plaintiff's share could not be determined definitely without making all the parties interested in the partnership, parties to the suit, and the accounts could not be properly taken in the absence of any of them.

(4) Presentation of plaint by managing member of the partnership—Non-joinder of necessary parties—Effect—S. 263, Contract Act—C.P.C., S. 27.

Though, under S. 263, Contract Act, the rights and obligations of partners continue, after the dissolution of the partnership, in all things necessary for the winding up of the business, yet it is only agents of a special kind that are recognised by the C.P.C., as having authority to make an appearance, or application, or do an act, on behalf of party to the suit. No ordinary agent is recognised, nor has a partner, as such, any power to act for, or represent, a co-partner, except for the purpose of accepting service of summons (S 74, C.P.C.)

Hence, a plaint, which purports to be in the individual names of the partners, but is signed and verified by one of them as managing partner, and which is presented by a pleader having a vakalatnama from and after the dissolution of the partnership, is not duly filed or presented. Such a presentation is not a mere irregularity which can be cured by an amendment. S. 27, C.P.C., only applies where a suit has been instituted in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff, or, where it is doubtful whether it has been instituted in the name of the right plaintiff, and it is not intended to cover the case of the non-joinder of a necessary party.

(5) Contract Act, S. 253, Distribution of assets—Contribution to losses.

Under S. 253 of the Contract Act, the share of each partner in the partnership property is the value of his original contribution, and partners must contribute equally to losses sustained by the partnership. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the share of loss or profit is ascertained by dividing the total loss or profit by the number of partners. The rule laid down is, that, if the assets of the partnership will not suffice to pay the amount of capital to be credited to each partner, the deficiency is a loss of capital, and is to be borne or made good by the partners. Nam Raj v. Gokal Chand, 10 P.R. 1908.

(6) Dormant partner—Shikmi Sharik—Notice of dissolution on retirement of dormant partner whether necessary—His liability—Contract Act, Ss. 249 and 264—Evidence Act, S 105.

The phrase Shikmi Sharik, by its etymological sense, means a partner whose name is not disclosed, that is, a dormant partner. Therefore, on the retirement of a Shikmi Sharik, no notice of the dissolution of the partnership need be given. But he is liable to all the claims on the partnership till the date of his retirement. The onus of proving that he has retired from the partnership at a specific period lies on him, on general principles as well as under S. 105, Evidence Act. Hashmat Ali v. Lachmi Narain, 75 P R 1908 = 122 P.W.R. 1908.

(2) Dissolution—Civ. Pro. Code, Ss. 17, 215 and 215-A—Amendment of plaint—Jurisdiction.

K. and others sued J. and others for recovery of a debt alleged to have been advanced for working a cotton and flour mill. The plea was that, under an agreement with their father, the plaintiffs became partners in the factory to work which they advanced capital, their share being fixed at one-fourth of the profits and losses, and the rate of interest on their advance at 6 per cent per annum.

The Lower Court on this plea held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue as for recovery of a loan, but that their proper remedy was to sue for an account of the partnership. It ordered amendment of the plaint accordingly, and, after inquiry, decreed the full amount with interest.

Held, (1) that the amendment of the plaint, as being approved of by the Chief Court in appeal from that order, could not further be discussed;

(2) that S. 115-A, Civil Procedure Code, is imperative and a preliminary decree for dissolution of partnership must have been passed before the accounts could be gone into. Suit remanded on this point (a);

(3) that the suit being one arising out of contract, the agreement of partnership being written and executed at Ferozepur, and the defendants being British subjects of the Ludhiana District, subject to the law of British India, it did not matter that the factory, which was the subject-matter of the partnership, was situated in a foreign territory, and, hence, that the Ferozepur Court had jurisdiction to try the suit (b).

(5) Methods that may be applied against the party bound by the decree to furnish accounts pointed out and held also that the party may be treated as in default, if, after being allowed suitable opportunities to furnish accounts, the party fails to do so. Jagnandan Singh v. Kishore Chand, 100 P.W.R. 1908.

(8) Single partner's power to mortgage immoveable property of the firm—English and Indian Law—Mahomedans living as joint family—S. 251, Contract Act.

The English doctrine that a single partner cannot mortgage the immoveable property of the firm appears to be due to the technical rule of English Law that an agent cannot execute a deed on behalf of his principal unless so authorised by deed.

In India one partner can effect a legal as well as an equitable mortgage of partnership property (a).

Partnership—(Continued).

Power to borrow is incidental to power to trade and power to pledge the business assets is incidental to power to borrow (b).

Where, therefore, some Mahomedan brothers entered into a partnership in the nature of a joint family business, the eldest brother has power as manager to mortgage the business, and the express mention of a power to mortgage certain properties in later deed would not restrict the power to sell or mortgage other properties, which may be inferred from the power to borrow given by a prior document.

S. 251, Contract Act, does not apply in the absence of any agreement between the parties restricting the partner from executing a mortgage. T. P. Asan Kani Ravuthar v. Aru, Aru, Somasundaram Chettiar, 4 M.L.T. 66=31 M. 206.

(8-a) Dormant partner—Partner contracting on behalf of himself and a dormant partner cannot sue the contracting party after the death of the partner entering into the contract.

If one partner enters into a contract in his own name, still, if he is acting as the agent of the firm, his co-partners will be in the position of undisclosed principals. They can be sued on the contract and may join as plaintiffs in suing.

A railway company entered into contracts with a person in the belief that he was the only person interested in them, but he had a partner unknown to the Company. After some time the person, who contracted with the Company, died, and the dormant partner claimed payment of the amount due to the firm under one of the contracts. The Company refused to pay except on a joint receipt of the plaintiff and the administrators of the deceased. The dormant partner brought a suit to recover the amount.

Held, that, the Company having contracted with the deceased partner alone, the right to claim performance rested with him during his life time, and he could have sued on the contract alone; and that the dormant partner might have joined his co-partner in suing, but that he could not sue the Company alone. Ali Miyan Mahomedbhai v. (9) Maintainability of suit by one partner on pro-note given him by another.

The proper remedy of one partner against the other members of the firm is ordinarily a suit for a dissolution of partnership, and one partner is not entitled to maintain a suit, other than a suit for dissolution, against the other members of the firm, in respect of the partnership transactions, on the ground that the plaintiff as a member of the firm would be a necessary defendant and that a man cannot maintain a suit against himself (a).

But this rule does not bar a suit by one member of the firm, upon a promissory note given him by two other members of the firm, in respect of an advance made by him to the firm and interest thereon (b). Yallamkondub Subbiah v. Malupeddi Venkatramiah, 4 M.L.T. 195=18 M.L.J. 347=31 M. 343.

(13) Criminal breach of trust—Dishonest conversion by partner—Liability of partner to account for partnership money.

In a partnership, it is open to a partner to spend the money he receives and to account for it in dealing with the partnership; and such a partner is plainly entitled to be called upon for an account of the expenditure of the money which he has received.

In a case where it was not satisfactorily made out that this was not done, and it could not be made out in the absence of a proper demand for an account, it was held that no dishonest conversion could be found, which would justify the conviction of the partner under S. 406, Penal Code. Debi Prasad Bhagat v. (1) Application for leave to sue as pauper, when good prima facie title to property in suit not established—Civ. Proc. Code, Ss. 407 and 409—

In the matter of an application for leave to sue as a pauper, it was pleaded that the applicant had grossly over-stated his claim, and documents were filed which bore out this contention. Several adjournments were allowed in order that the applicant might establish a prima facie claim to the share in the villages in dispute but he was unable to do so.

Held, that a person, who applies for leave to sue as a pauper, must make out that he has a good subsisting prima facie cause of action, capable of enforcement in Court and calling for an answer. Sheopal v. Singh Sukh karan Singh, 11 O.C. 67.

Pleadings.

(1) Practice—Setting up inconsistent pleas—Defence of want of genuineness of a deed—Issue upon that basis—Plea of misrepresentation, undue influence or fraud, not allowed subsequently.

A genuine document might or might not be binding upon a party, but if the party, who has executed it intends to raise the defence that it is not binding, he ought either to raise it in his written statement, or get an issue framed on it. If a party denies the execution of a document, he cannot, strictly speaking, be allowed to raise the inconsistent defence that the document is not binding upon him (a).

Where, in a suit upon a deed, the defence is that the deed is not genuine and upon that issue the parties go to trial, it is not open to the defendant subsequently to rely on misrepresentation, undue influence or fraud as vitiating the deed. Parag Naran v. Chodra Chatla Jakhlo, 10 Bom. L.R. 424.

(2) Inconsistent issues—Non-execution of promissory note and coercion.

Suit on a promissory note. In his written statement, the defendant denied the execution of, and the consideration for, the note; and issues were raised on these contentions. Plaintiff proved the execution and the passing of consideration. Judgment was given in his favour. On appeal, defendant contended that the note was executed under coercion on the plaintiff's own showing that, as such, the contract was voidable. Held, the contention as to the coercion was inconsistent with the contention as to the non-execution of the note, and was, therefore, inadmissible. The determination in a cause should be founded on a case either to be found in the pleadings, or involved in or consistent with the case thereby made. In this case, the contention as to coercion was inconsistent with the case set up in the written statement.

The contention of the defendant that, on the plaintiff's own evidence, he was not entitled to a decree, will not prevail, because the contract was not illegal or void, but only voidable, which latter contention was not raised by the defendant in his statement. *Ma Hnin Get v. Possession.

(1) Suit for possession—Failure of cause of action—Proper decree to be made in such a case—Possibility of media concludendi being the same in other actions gives the Court no power to pronounce upon them.

Where the plaintiffs claimed to have possession of their mother's property on the ground that she was dead, and the Court held that it was not proved that the lady was dead, the inevitable inference would seem to be that the suit should be dismissed. The mere circumstance that some of the media concludendi might be the same in other actions does not vest the Court with any right or duty to pronounce upon them in a suit which has gone by the board, because of the failure of the ground of action. *Musummat Waliha v. (2) Suit for—Onus of proof—Nature of evidence to be adduced by either party—Title, proof of, effect of—Presumption of possession—Constructive possession—Survey map, value of, as evidence.

In respect of jungle and hilly land, possession must be presumed to be with the rightful owner (a).

Plaintiff in an action for possession, must not only prove his title, but also his possession, actual or constructive, within twelve years of suit (c). When plaintiff has established his title, it is not necessary for the defendant to prove a better title, or establish that he has acquired a good title by adverse possession, which has extinguished the title of the plaintiff, but plaintiff must prove his possession also within 12 years.

Nature of evidence required in such cases discussed.

Revenue Survey Maps are evidence of title and possession (c). They are not conclusive and may be shown to be wrong, but, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, they may be properly and judicially received in evidence as correct when made.

The doctrine of constructive possession applies only in favour of the rightful owner, and must not, as a rule, be extended to the wrongdoer, whose possession must be confined to land of which he is actually in possession. (3) Suit for—Title at the date of suit—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), S. 167—Notice, proof of service of—Notice, validity of—Order-sheet of the proceedings, entries in, essential value of.

In a suit for recovery of possession, the plaintiff can succeed only on the title as it stood on the date of the institution of the suit.

Until the notice has been properly served under S. 167 of the Bengal Tenancy Act upon the incumbrancer, the incumbrance subsists.

It is obligatory on the purchaser to show that the notice under S. 167 had been served in the manner prescribed. The entries in the order-sheet are not prima facie evidence against the incumbrancer that the notice was served (b).

Possession—(Continued).

The purchaser, who relies upon the service of notice, must prove it either by the production of the person who served the notice or by any other means recognized by law; and if a question arises as to the validity of the notice it must be shown that it was a valid notice and was signed by a competent officer as required by cl. (5) Limitation—Possession, suit for—Mortgages purchaser—Formal possession—Period from which limitation runs—Third person in actual possession—Ouster.

In execution of a mortgage decree, the mortgagees purchased the property under mortgage on the 7th October, 1888, and took formal possession of it on the 17th February, 1890. The plaintiff, who bought the property from the auction-purchaser, brought a suit for possession on the 20th December, 1901, against the mortgagor and his vendees, who were not parties to the mortgage suit.

Held, that the suit was barred by limitation, as the cause of action accrued when the mortgage security ceased on the 7th October, 1888, (a).

In the case of a third person who had already purchased the property and obtained actual possession, delivery of possession, as against the judgment-debtor alone, cannot amount to an ouster of the person in possession (b). Ramjan Mahomed v. Chunder Mohan Aditya, 7 C.L.J. 640.

Possession is in itself title in the absence of proof displacing the presumption that arises from possession. The man in possession starts with this presumption in his favour, and the maxim presumptio est pro possessoribus applies; and it is, therefore, for the other side to show, not only that the former's possession is not evidence of his title, but that the latter has a superior title. Bhagwaning Daulatting v. The Secretary of State, 10 Bom. L.R. 571.

- (7) Suit for possession—Cause of action—Dispossession—Whether plaintiff must prove possession and dispossession within 12 years.

The general rule of law is that, when a suit is for possession and the cause of action is dispossession, the plaintiff is bound to prove possession and dispossession within 12 years, or, in other words, the plaintiff must not only show that he has a title, but that he has a subsisting title, which he has not lost by the prescriptive sections of the Limitation Act. Ma Pyu v. Ma Main Mu, 14 Bur. L.R. 200

- (8) Possession on title by purchase—Specific title alleged, not proved—Title by adverse possession not being inferable from plaintiff's issue—Limitation.

A declaration cannot be given on a title not distinctly stated in the plaint or the issues (a). In a suit for possession based on title by purchase, if the specific title alleged is not proved, and if, on reading the issue with the plaint, it cannot be said that it raises the question of title "based on 12 years' adverse possession, a declaration of the title on the strength of adverse possession for more than 12 years cannot be made. Somasundaram Chetty v. Possession—(Continued).

- (10) Defence, alternative—Possession either as a tenant or for more than 12 years—Adverse possession.

It is open to the defendants, in the first place, to plead, that the lands were compassed in their tenancy and that consequently the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover possession, and, in the second place, to assert that if the tenancy was not established, as they had held possession for more than 12 years, the right of the plaintiffs to recover possession was extinguished by the law of limitation (a).

When the case of the plaintiffs was that the defendants were tenants in respect of other lands not in dispute and that by act of trespass they came to occupy the disputed land within 12 years before suit, but it was proved that the defendants had been in occupation for more than 12 years, the title of the plaintiffs to recover possession by ejectment of the defendants was barred by limitation. The question is not one of adverse possession but of limitation (b). Raktoo Singh v. Sudhram Ahir, 8 C.L.J. 557.

(2) Decree—No specific direction as to accounts in the decree—Court cannot direct accounts to be taken before Commissioner when parties have arrived at an agreement after the decree—Appeal against order of a Judge, when lies.

A decree of the High Court on the original side contemplated an account being taken between the parties, but it was silent on the question as to how that account was taken, whether by the Commissioner of the Court or by some person selected by both the parties.

The Court of first instance decided that where a direction as to account ought to have been incorporated in a decree when passed, it was competent to the Court at any stage of the proceedings to direct necessary inquiries or accounts to be made or taken.

Held, on appeal, that as some account was taken under the decree by a person appointed jointly by the parties, a new agreement had come into existence superseding the decree, and the Court was not competent to make the order appealed against.

An appeal lies against an order of a Judge sitting on the original side, if that order decides a question of some right between the parties. Sir Jehangir Cawasji Jehangir v. The Hope Mills, Ltd., 10 Bom. L.R. 488.

A Judge sitting on the Original Side of the High Court is ordinarily bound to follow the judgment of another Judge when the latter has decided a question of law, or laid down certain principles of practice or procedure, or judicially construed any provision of the law prevailing in the country; but the former is not bound to follow the latter's findings of facts based on the evidence recorded by him, when the evidence that may be available before the Judge in a later case may be fuller and more reliable and may tend to lead him to a different conclusion (a). Jamshed K. - (13) Remand to Lower Appellate Court—Appellant not entitled to notice—Date of hearing on remand—Change of settled practice.

Where the High Court, on hearing a second appeal, remands a case to the Lower Appellate Court for a fresh decision, the appellant in the latter Court is not entitled to a notice intimating the date on which the case will be taken up (a).

A settled practice cannot well be disturbed, unless it is shown to be illegal (b).

The position brought about by a remand to a Court of first appeal resembles that in O.X.L. r. 12 (= S. 552 of Act XIV of 1882) rather than what is reached by successive adjournments after the date originally fixed for hearing.

Once the appeal has been admitted and registered, the date of hearing may be fixed at once or after an interval; but, in either case,

(6) Mortgage—unregistered deed—Sale of property hypothecated—Purchaser having notice of the mortgage—Property pre-empted by the defendant—Whether notice to pre-emptor necessary.

A right of pre-emption is not a right of repurchase, but is simply a right entitling the pre-emptor to be substituted for the vendee as purchaser, and to stand in his shoes in respect of all the rights, and obligations arising from the sale under which he derives his title. He can only get what the vendee bargained for.

S. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) does not protect a purchaser who purchased with knowledge of an unregistered encumbrance.

Where, therefore, a vendee purchases with notice of a prior unregistered encumbrance and the property is pre-empted the pre-emptor takes subject to that mortgage even if the existence of that mortgage was concealed from him. Tejpal v. (7) Wajib-ul-arz—One mahal—Perfect partition—Custom—Contract

Mauza Barauli was sub-divided by perfect partition into three mahals; Mahal Ali Mazhar, Mahal Bhairon Pershad, Mahal Sheo Dial Ram. Before partition the wajib-ul-arz of the Mauza provided that a right of pre-emption existed in the following order—first to sharers descended from a common ancestor, then to co-sharers in the village, then to strangers. At the time of partition, three wajib-ul-arz were prepared for the three mahals. The wajib-ul-arz for the mahals Ali Mazhar and Bhairon Pershad, which mahals had a sole proprietor, reproduced the wording of the wajib-ul-arz of the undivided village, in a chapter, the heading of which referred to the rights of sharers in the mahal. In the third mahal, which had numerous sharers, the wording of the original wajib-ul-arz was modified, and it was provided that a right of pre-emption in case of a transfer by a pattidar would exist in the following order: first co-sharers descended from a common ancestor, then pattidars, then strangers. On sale of Mahal Ali Mazhar the proprietor of Mahal Bhairon Pershad sued for pre-emption, basing his claim on the wajib-ul-arz. Held, that the preparation of new wajib-ul-arz for three mahals abrogated the old custom of pre-emption, and that the fact that the sole properties of Mahals Ali Mazhar and Bhairon Pershad had caused to be made an entry in the wajib-ul-arz relating to the right of pre-emption in those mahals did not give these proprietors any authority to control their own rights or the rights of their successors over the property. The Wajib-ul-arz did not prove the existence of a custom of pre-emption in the mahals in question. B. E. O'Connor v. Raj Bhadur, 5 A.L.J. 79.

On the 12th December, 1904, vendor, a Mahajan and not agriculturist, sold his half share in a joint khata to his first cousin. The new Pre-emption Act II of 1905 came into force on 11th May, 1905. The pre-emption suit was instituted on the 16th March, 1906.

Held, by a majority of two Judges of the Full Bench of three, that the priorities given by S. 12 of the Punjab Pre-emption Act II of 1905 are applicable to a claim to the right of pre-emption with reference to a sale executed before the commencement of the Act (a).

Held, also, that where the vendee had a superior right of pre-emption under the Punjab Laws Act, IV of 1872, to the pre-emptor, the saving clause of S. 3 (3) of Act II of 1905 protects him against that pre-emptor who has superior rights under the Act of 1905. Sarta v.

In a suit for pre-emption of land in a bhaya-chara village, the grounds being the agnatic relationship of the plaintiff to the vendor and his being a jaddi malik, whereas vendee is a malik by purchase, plaintiff, in order to prove that relationship helps him, should prove a special custom to that effect.

The chakwar wajib-ul-arz is not, properly speaking, part of the settlement record, which is a village record, and, therefore, no presumption of correctness attaches to it under S. 44 of the Act (a).

Even if it be taken to form part of the settlement record, the circumstance that it states the custom of pre-emption as tribal, whereas pre-emption is peculiarly a local custom, deprives the entry of all its presumptive value (b).

Where a village wajib-ul-arz states no custom, but does not exclude it, the party alleging a special custom must prove it. A document, in which customs are stated for a whole Tashil, tribe by tribe, inasmuch as it does not deal with rights and liabilities "in an estate," cannot be said to fall within S. 31 (2), cl. (b). Having, therefore, no presumptive value, it only helps to prove them, and serves as a guide to enquiry, but actual instances of enforcements of the customs stated are necessary.

The value of even a genuine wajib-ul-arz, favouring relatives in the matter of pre-emption and standing unsupported by actual proof of custom, followed by a later wajib-ul-arz, in which the "law" of Act IV of 1872 is stated to contain the rule of pre-emption, is so small as to be virtually nil. Technically, the value is not nil (c), but even negative indications, the other way, are sufficient to reduce its value to nothing (d). Guldad Khan v. Gul Khan, 44 P.R. 1907 = 82 P.L.R. 1908 = 111 P.W.R. 1907.

The right of pre-emption must be exercised, and the claims necessary to give effect to it must be made with the utmost promptitude, and any unreasonable and unnecessary delay is to be construed as an election not to pre-empt. Whether there has been such delay is a question to be determined upon the facts of each particular case.

The plaintiffs, in this case, claimed the right to pre-empt by reason of their having previously acquired a share in the property. They had also obtained the transfer of a zupeshgi mortgage binding the share, the sale of which was the occasion of the present suit. In the course of the suit, the purchaser, defendant, deposited the mortgage amount in Court and the same was withdrawn by the plaintiff.

Held, that until a decree for pre-emption was made the purchaser owned the land, and had a right to redeem, and that the taking out of the money by the plaintiffs, as mortgagees, was no recognition of anything more than that and was quite consistent with their claim to pre-empt. Bajjnath Gaenka v. Where a rival claimant of the right of pre-emption obtained a consent decree in a suit to which plaintiff, the first claimant, was not made a party, and the suit in which the rival claimant obtained the consent decree was instituted subsequently to the suit instituted by the plaintiff, the first claimant.

Held, that, the plaintiff having first filed his suit and thus shown superior diligence, the fact that the rival claimant obtained the consent decree did not place the plaintiff in a worse position than that which he occupied when he filed this suit and that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree.

Superior diligence in suing constitutes superior claim to pre-emption (a).

A certain property subject to pre-emption was sold to M. After the sale two persons claiming a right of pre-emption separately sued to enforce their rights. During the pendency of those suits, K, a person having a right of pre-emption superior to that of the two former pre-emptors, also brought a suit for pre-emption. His claim was admitted and a registered sale-deed executed by M in his favour. K allowed his own suit to be dismissed in default and applied to be, and was, admitted as a defendant in the former two suits. The Lower Courts decreed against K on the ground that the sale to him was made pendente lite.

Held that the doctrine of lis pendens cannot be called in to defeat the claims of another claimant whose right to pre-empt existed before the suits of the other claimants were filed (a).

In claims for pre-emption, the right of any particular claimant is not prejudiced, qua own right by the assertion by another claimant of his own pre-existing rights.

The doctrine of lis pendens forbids the creation of new rights over property already the subject of suit pendente lite which are calculated to injure the rights of the claimant. It does not, and could not, apply to the assertion of rights which existed prior to the institution of the pending suit (c). Mahmud Khan v. Certain vendees became landholders in a village by reason of a purchase made by them on the 27th July, 1896. They also made a subsequent purchase in the village on the 8th November, 1900. The present suit was instituted by the plaintiff, on the 29th October, 1901 for pre-emption in respect of the sale of 8th November, 1900.

Held that the effect of the pre-emption decree of 8-1-04 was to divest the present vendees of their alleged ownership of land under the sale of 27-7-1896 and to vest the same in the plaintiff pre-emptor as from the date of the said sale (a), that at the time of the sale in dispute the vendees were not landholders in the village in which the land was situate and that consequently the plaintiff had a superior right of pre-emption. Kehr Singh v Mahman Singh, 25 P.R. 1908=51 P.W.R. 1908 128 P.J.R. 1908.

(28) Wajib-ul-arz, construction of—Custom or contract—Partition—Co-sharer

Where a wajib-ul-arz opened with a declaration that the zemindars and khewatdars, agreed that up to the term of settlement and in future to the termination of the next settlement they should abide by the following conditions and act upon them, and one of the conditions related to pre-emption, held that the record was one of contract and not custom.

Where a wajib-ul-arz recognised a right of pre-emption in favour of co-sharers descended from a common ancestor, and by reason of a subsequent partition, the pre-emptor, though descended from the same stock as the vendor, had ceased to hold any share in the mahal, portion of which was the subject of sale, semble if the right recorded was one existing by custom, the plaintiff would be entitled to pre-empt. Budh Singh v. against it—Whether co-occupant can claim pre-emption regarding such property.

The plaintiff was, joint sharer in certain survey numbers in Berar. His co-sharers mortgaged the fields (including his shares) and the mortgagees got a decree for sale of the mortgaged property, and brought it to sale. The plaintiff sued to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of the shares, other than his own, which had been so sold by auction. Held that the lower Court was right in holding that the suit did not lie, as it can lie only under Chapter XVIII of the Berar Land Revenue Code, since in Berar pre-emption is a right created by statute, and as it did not appear that any provisions of the Code were applicable to the present case. Maidabi v. Held, that, whenever a pre-emptor sues for pre-emption upon a sale, and it is found that before his suit the vendee has transferred the property to a third party, the test is whether the pre-emptor has a superior right of pre-emption in regard to the first sale as compared with the transferee, and that where it is re-conveyed to the original vendor, the pre-emptor must succeed as the former cannot have any right of pre-emption whatever in regard to the sale.

The representative of the pre-emptor in a suit based upon the wajab-ul-arz is a co-sharer and can carry on the suit which his predecessor in title instituted. The principle of Mahomedan Law does not apply to a case of pre-emption based on custom.

A plaintiff claiming pre-emption is not entitled to a decree unless his right subsists upon the date of the decree. Where the vendees purchase a second share in the property and no suit for pre-emption is brought in respect of that share within one year, they are entitled to retain the share formerly purchased and in respect of which a suit for pre-emption had been instituted.

Primogeniture

(1) Restriction on alienation—Civ. Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882), S. 162—Leave of Court, if to be express—Presumption—Compromise—decree when to be set aside

Where there is a custom of primogeniture, there is no restriction on alienation by the incumbent for the time being, unless a special custom is proved to the contrary (a).

In order that a compromise may be binding upon a minor, the leave of the Court must be express, and further it must be arrived at upon the exercise of judicial discretion as to the propriety of the compromise in the interests of the minor (b).

Primogeniture.—(Concluded).

Where a decree was passed without any judicial inquiry, or finding as to whether the compromise was for the benefit of the minor, although a formal order of sanction to file the compromise petition was given by an Official of the Court who acted as the minor's guardian ad litem

Held, that the decree was inoperative

When the Court permits a compromise, it must be presumed in the absence of evidence to the contrary that it gave due consideration to the matter (c)

Although in appeal, a decree made upon a compromise in a suit in which a minor was a party, would be held to be invalid as against a minor, it could not, after it had become final and been acted upon, be set aside, unless it were shown to be prejudicial to the minor (b).

(1) Promissory note payable to order—Discounted with a bank—Bank returning the note to maker, it not being para—Subsequent endorsement in blank and delivery to another without striking out first endorsement—Delivery again to plaintiff to enable him to sue upon it—Whether plaintiff was holder in due course—S. 50, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881.

A promissory note was given by the defendant to P.S., in connection with some partnership transactions between them, on those transactions being brought to an end. P.S. discounted the note with the Bank of Bengal; when it was not paid, the Bank returned the note to him. He subsequently handed the note to one C.J., to whom he owed money, and wrote his second signature on the back of the note. C.J. handed it to his clerk, the plaintiff, in order that the latter may file a suit on it. In a suit by the plaintiff against the defendant to recover the amount.

Held that the plaintiff was not a holder in due course of the note and did not become the possessor of it for consideration; the legal title to it was in the Bank of Bengal, since the endorsement to it was an endorsement in full, and there was no endorsement by it to any one else in full or in blank.

Held, also, that the plaintiff had no right at all to sue upon it, as he did not prove his title to it either (1) by negotiation, for the note was payable to order and was indorsed to order and that endorsement was not struck out, a note in such condition could only be negotiated by endorsement and delivery by the last indorsee to order. The title by negotiation must be taken to be that shown by what was on the back of the note, and the Bank of Bengal, not having endorsed it, either in full or in blank the title by negotiation stopped with it (a), or (2) by assignment, for C.J. handed the note to the plaintiff to enable him to file suit on it and the plaintiff said that he simply filed the case under the instructions of C.J.

The note having been discounted with the bank and the endorsement not containing express words restricting or excluding the right of further negotiation, the endorsement was not for collection, as contended (b). In order that a right of further negotiation may be restricted or excluded in respect of a promissory note S. 50 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 requires that an endorsement must contain express words to that effect. Babu Goridut Bogla v. (2) Lease—Application to set aside—Summary jurisdiction—Pro interesse suo—Receiver's account—Action—Practice.

No summary order can be passed to set aside a lease already executed and granted by a Receiver. The proper remedy of the aggrieved parties is to institute a regular suit to set aside the lease against the Receiver and also the lessee, if it is alleged that the lease was obtained by collusion (a)

No order can be made against a lessee from a Receiver for arrears of rent or interest in an application in a suit. A regular suit ought to be instituted to recover them.

The claims against a Receiver for giving up arrears of rent or interest, due under a lease granted by him, are matters which cannot be dealt with in an interlocutory application in the suit.

The appointment of a receiver is entirely in the discretion of the Court. A good prima facie title has to be made out before an order for the appointment of a receiver can be granted (a).

Receiver—(Continued).

The step of appointing a receiver should not be taken without special reasons, particularly in the case of a bona fide possessor with legal title. The appointment of a Receiver under S. 503, C.P.C., is not a matter of course. Though S. 503 gives a wide power to the Court, that power must be exercised with a sound discretion on a view of the whole of the circumstances of the case, not merely the circumstances which might make the appointment expedient for the protection of the property, but all the circumstances connected with the right which is asserted and has to be established. Unless there is proof of violent and wholesale charges of waste and malversation against a defendant in possession of property as the tenant for life, a Receiver will not be appointed. Jiwani v. "Vested" and "contingent" defined—Transfer of Property Act IV of 1882, Ss. 19 and 21—Agreement inadmissible—Oral evidence barred—S. 91, Indian Evidence Act.

Held, that, in S. 17 (b) of Act III of 1877 the clause, "whether in present or in future" belongs to the bunch of infinitives preceding it and not to the nouns "right, title or interest," consequently the "right, title or interest," whether vested or contingent must be a present and not a future, right, title or interest.

Held, also, that a deed prescribing the mode of partition of certain immovable property of the value of Rs. 100 or more, to be acquired in future by the parties thereto, does not fall under cl. (b) of S. 17 of Act III of 1877.

Held further, that the definition of "vested and contingent" given respectively in Ss. 19 and 21 of Act IV of 1882, are applicable to these terms used in S. 17 (b) of Act III of 1877 (a).

(1) S. 51—Valid notice, contents of—Undivided taluk—Joint settlement—Separate collection—Assessment—Measurement—Separate tenancy—Declaratory decrees—Liability of taluk to enhancement, not in issue.

A talukdar is entitled to a notice of demand for enhancement of rent under S. 51 of the Bengal Decennial Settlement Regulation (VIII of 1793). The notice should contain one of the grounds mentioned in the said section; a notice not containing any such ground is bad in law.

A declaratory decree declaring a talukdar's tenure liable to enhancement should not be passed, where the question of the liability to enhancement of the taluk as a dependent taluk under the provisions of S. 51 of the Bengal

Reg. VIII of 1793 (Bengal Decennial Settlement)—(Concluded).

Decennial Settlement Regulation was not put in issue.

A taluk was situated within three zemindaries. The settlement of it was a joint one, but the collection was separate. The proprietors of two of the zemindaries caused the entire taluk to be measured, assessed with rent upon the area found therein, and granted a dowl to the holders of the taluk, who agreed to pay their share of rent thus assessed;

Held per Mitter, J.—That, the effect of the dowl was to constitute the fractional share of the undivided taluk a separate and distinct tenure with which the proprietor of the remaining zemindary had no concern. Hence in a suit for enhancement of rent of a taluk by the zemindar, the proprietor of the remaining zemindary was not a necessary party. The Bank of Hindustan, China and Japan, Ltd. v. (1) S. 6—Putni, share of, without the consent of the Zemindar, effect of—Co-sharer landlords collecting share of rent separately, if constitutes separate tenancy—Sale in execution of decree for share of rent, effect of.

A purchaser of a share of a putni acquires a valid title in the property although his purchase was not recognised by the Zemindar. He is not exempted from liability for rent jointly with the transferor, if the landlord chooses to recognise him as one of the joint-holders of the putni. S. 6 of the Putni Regulation only prevents any splitting of the tenure and apportionment of the rent without the sanction of the landlord (a).

One of the co-sharers in the Zemindari who had a 5 annas interest brought a suit for his share of the rent against the registered putnidar and obtained a decree, in execution of which, he sold a 5 annas interest in the putni.

Held, that the effect of the sale was precisely the same as that of a sale under a money-decree, that is, the right, title and interest of the judgment debtor at the time of the attachment passed (b).

No separate tenancy is constituted under a co-share; landlord merely by his collecting his share of the rent separately from the tenant. Aosub Ali Pramanik v. Bisseshuri, 8 C.L.J. 554.

Regulation, terminated by satisfaction of the debt is unnecessary, when the plea of suit is set up as a reply to a claim for rent and the defendant uses it only as a basis for resisting that claim.

The creation of a grubi estate is a formal act both according to the language of Reg. VIII of 1819, S. 11, and according to universal practice and cannot be inferred from the conduct of parties.

When a contract has terminated, it cannot be revived unless by the incorporation of its terms in a new one.

Per Mooherrjee, J.—The under-tenure-holder who makes the deposit under S. 13, Cl. 1 of Putni Regulation is entitled to remain in possession only so long as the full amount advanced, with interest, is not realized from the usufruct of the tenure. If, after his debt has been satisfied, he does continue in occupation, he does so at his peril and renders himself liable to account for the profits received in excess. His position is analogous to that of a mortgagee in possession who stays on the premises after his dues have been satisfied.

The lien is extinguished by satisfaction of the debt from the profits of the tenure. No order of the Collector is necessary in this behalf, nor his recourse to a regular suit essential to alter the legal position of the parties. The moment the lien is extinguished, the defaulter becomes entitled to recover possession.

S. 13, Cl. 1 of the Putni Regulation makes it a condition precedent to the creation of the lien that the amount lodged should be advanced from private funds and should be paid by the tenure-holder after he had already paid the whole of the rent due from himself.

The lien in question is (a) creation of the Statute and statutory lien cannot be created by consent, the provision of the law must be strictly complied with before reliance can be placed upon the lien.

A mere treatment of the under-tenure-holder by the landlord as a usufructuary encumbrancer is not sufficient to create the statutory lien.

A statement in the plaint, unchallenged and made by the plaintiff after his interest has been transferred is in no way binding upon the transferee (a)

Reg. II of 1827.

S. 56—Pleader—Misconduct—Disciplinary jurisdiction—High Court.

Pleaders are a privileged class enrolled for the purpose of rendering assistance to the Courts in the administration of justice. Their position, training and practice, give them influence with the public, and it is directly contrary to their duty to use that influence for the purpose of bringing the administration of justice into contempt.

A pleader, presiding at a public meeting and procuring the passing thereof of a resolution contemptuously denouncing, or protesting against the conduct of a Judge of the High Court in passing sentence at a trial at the criminal Sessions, is guilty of misbehaviour under S. 56 of the Regulation II of 1827. Government Pleader v. Reg. III of 1891 when applied to any lands would have the effect of confiscating proprietary rights and giving compensation in exchange. The onus therefore lies on Government to show, that the facts of any case are such as to bring it within its operation. The Government must prove that at the Permanent Settlement, the Officers of the Government included amongst the assets of the estate, income derived by its owners from jhum cultivation carried on beyond the limits of the estate.

The argument, that under the Regulations then in force no assets not arising out of the estate could be lawfully taken into account, and that a strong presumption was thus raised that the course which was in accordance with law was followed in a particular case, was not entertained in the face of the preamble to the Regulation which shows that in a number of cases the income of jhum cultivation carried on beyond the estate was rightly or wrongly taken into account.

It was proved that as early as 1837, the owners of the estate received kabuliyats from tenants carrying on jhum cultivation on the disputed land, that in 1812 and 1813 they succeeded in defeating an attempt on the part of persons interested in the adjoining mouzah to exercise rights over the land, and that on several occasions they successfully resisted proposals on the part of the Revenue authorities to settle portions of the land as slam land, open for settlement.

Held, that from this and other evidence of continuous possession and enjoyment, it should be inferred that the land was included within the permanently settled estate of the owners, and the Regulation had no application to it.

The question here was in one sense a question of fact, but every point in this process of the reasoning involved considerations of law, and thus although the findings of the Courts in India were concurrent, the Judicial Committee could review such findings in appeal. Mahomed Ali Haidar Khan v Secretary of State for India in Council, 12 C.W.N. 1095 (P.C.) 4 M.L.T. 234—10 Bom. The power to appoint a mutualis is a power in the nature of a trust. The power to appoint a new mutualis stands on the same ground as the power to appoint new trustees in England.

A Mohunth of a mutt cannot transfer the right of management vested in him, though coupled with the obligation to manage in conformity with the trust annexed thereto (a).

Where one mutt is subordinate to another in the sense that the latter has the right of nomination of the Mohunth of the former, the Mohunth of the former mutt cannot by a deed of transfer alienate his rights in favour of the Mohunth of his superior mutt.

There is no fixed rule which regulates the relation between a superior and a subordinate mutt, even if a mutt is subordinate to another, it must be governed by its own rules of management (b)

In the case of mutts, the custom governing the particular establishment has to be proved (c)

In the case of mutts, there is no uniform custom applicable to all mutts so far as the question of succession to the office of Mohunth is concerned (d)

In cases in which a Mohunth is allowed by custom to nominate his successor by word of mouth or by a will, such nomination is subject to the confirmation of the entire body of Sanyasis of different mutts who are invited to be present at the ceremony of installation when the new Mohunth is invested with Chudder or the robe of office.

When no custom is proved and no authority in the outgoing Mohunth to make a nomination is established, the Mohunth should be elected by all the Sanyasis of the institution (e)

Where the plaintiff has not asked for declaration of his rights to nominate a Mohunth for another mutt, nor in the plaint stated precisely the nature of the relations between the two mutts but claimed title in himself on the basis of the Supardanama (which created no valid title in him in the disputed properties), he cannot, at the appellate stage of the case, be permitted to turn round and say that he is entitled to have a decree for administration, to recover possession of the disputed properties and to keep such possession till a Mohunth has been appointed (f). Prayad Das v. but it does not dispense with the necessity of finding, in a particular case, the other equally essential requirements of the section, such as that the parties were litigating under the same title and that the matter in issue was finally heard and decided. So, where the former suit brought by a person was based on an allegation that he was owner of the land then sued for by reason of his purchase, the dismissal of that suit is not res judicata in a subsequent suit brought by him for possession of the same land on the ground that he was entitled thereto, not as owner, but as lien to the last male owner. A suit for profits by one co-sharer against another was dismissed in 1905 by the Assistant Collector as barred by the rule of res judicata. This decision was reversed by the District Judge who remanded the case under S. 562, Civ. Pro. Code. The decision of the District Judge was affirmed on appeal by the High Court. In second appeal, after remand, the plea of res judicata was again put forward, based upon certain decisions of the High Court, barring a second appeal in case of remand, under S. 562, Civ. Pro. Code, under the Tenancy Act, and also based upon two other decisions between the same parties, which had not been set up on the previous occasion. Held, that the decision of the District Judge became final and its effect was not nullified by the decisions subsequently passed as to the right of appeal. As to the other decisions, they, not having been relied upon before the District Judge as a ground of defence, could not be now set up under explan. 2 of S. 13, Civ. Pro. Code. The appellant not only might but ought to have relied upon those decisions in the previous litigation.

In a suit under S. 164 of the Tenancy Act, only the actual collections, made by the defendant, are to be taken into account in determining the amount of profits due. In a suit like the present, a plaintiff is not entitled to have profits calculated on what might have been collected or on the rates paid by tenants in other khewates, for lands of the same kind.

This constitutes the distinction between a suit of this nature and one under S. 165, Tenancy Act. Abdul Rashid v. Abdul Latif, 5 A.L.J. 117—A.W.N. (1908), 68.

Pro. Code, S. 13.*

An agreement was entered into between the plaintiffs and the defendants by which the plaintiffs were appointed the agents of the defendants to institute an appeal on behalf of the defendants at the expense of the plaintiffs themselves, the defendants promising to convey to the plaintiffs half the lands in dispute. The defendants succeeded in the appeal, and then sued for the cancellation of the agreement on the ground that it was not supported by consideration. The suit was decided against the defendants.

The plaintiffs afterwards brought the present suit for the enforcement of the agreement. Held, that the judgment in the previous suit, being a decision on a mixed question of law and fact, was a bar to the present suit.

Although the use of the expression "Res judicata" in the case of execution proceedings is not strictly correct, orders in execution proceedings are governed by principles analogous to those of res judicata and are binding, if not appealed against, in subsequent proceedings in the same suit. The plaintiff sued D. 1, the husband and D. 2, the wife, for recovery of the amount due on a pro-note and cheque alleged to have been signed respectively by D. 1 and J, the brother of D. 2, in payment of certain accounts due to him on building agreement. Before the institution of the present suit, plaintiff filed a suit on the whole account in which the amount of both these documents were included. That suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff, having taken from D. 1, a pro-note in settlement of the account had no longer a cause of action on the account itself.

Defendant 1 denied execution of the pro-note sued on, alleging that his signature was forged.

The plaintiff, on the contrary, alleged the documents to be perfectly genuine, and, as regards the pro-note executed by D. 1, sought to make D. 2 also liable on the allegation that it was signed for D. 2 by her husband D. 1, as her duly authorized agent. D. 2 denied the allegation.

Held (1) that the dismissal either rightly or wrongly of previous suit on the whole account which included the amount of the cheque now sued on operated as res judicata under S. 13, Civ. Pro. Code and that on this account, part of the claim which is based on the cheque should fail.

(2) that the evidence did not disclose that there was any such authority given by D. 2 to D. 1 to sign the pro-note as alleged by plaintiff.

Obiter—It is extremely doubtful whether any evidence would be admissible to show that D. 1, signed not only as a principal but also as an agent of a principal not named in the pro-note. Both under English Law, and Indian Law (see S. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act), such evidence would be inadmissible.

(3) that the circumstantial evidence proved that the pro-note alleged to have been signed by D. 1 was in fact so signed and genuine.

Practice (4) that it is not only illegal, but improper and unfair for Courts to permit the defendant, at the very outset of the case, to be put in the witness box nominally as plaintiff's witness to be cross-examined in the presence and hearing of the plaintiff, before the plaintiff is even called upon to go into the box and tell his own story. This practice generally prevalent, as it is in the Courts of this province, is much to be deprecated. It is certainly in accord with justice and equity that a party who has to defend a suit should hear what his opponent has to say before he is called upon for an answer, and it is only under exceptional circumstances that the opponent should be called at all as witness of the party who may be then putting his case before the Court

(5) that it is improper for a Judge to receive from any party to a suit, private communication in writing as to the special grounds of requiring production of certain documents, which communication is kept concealed from the opposite side

(6) that the following statement of Defendant 2's counsel does not amount to a confession of judgment

"If the pro-note is established and receipt of consideration is proved Mrs. Max Mink does not wish to protract matters by disclaiming liability."

In this case, interest at the rate given in the pro-note sued upon was allowed on the amount decreed and costs from the date of institution of the suit to the date of the decree and further interest at 6 per cent. per annum on this amount till payment Max Mink v. Shankar Dass, 116 P.W.R. 1908

(8) S. 13, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882 Mere filing of an appeal—Effect—Appeal dismissed on ground of limitation alone—Effect—Pendency of proceedings by way of appeal—English Law—Law in India

The mere filing of an appeal does not vacate or annul the judgment appealed against. A judgment still liable to appeal, which has not yet been appealed from or an appeal which is actually pending, cannot operate as res judicata during the interval preceding the appeal or while the appeal is actually pending (a). Where an appellate Court dismisses an appeal on the ground of limitation alone the appellant is not in a better position than one who is heard but fails on the merits. In such a case the decision of the lower Court on the points actually decided binds the parties to the suit (b). In English Law even the pendency of proceedings by way of appeal is no answer to a pleading of estoppel by judgment, though it may be ground for applying for a stay of proceedings (c). For India Explanation IV to S. 13, Civ. Pro. Code (1882), lays down a different rule Ram Chandra Narain, I N.L.R.

Pro. Code (Act XIV of 1882) S. 13—Crim. Pro. Code (Act V of 1898), S. 403*

The parties were husband and wife, living apart. The respondent applied to the sub-divisional Magistrate for an order for the applicant to pay an allowance for the support of their child. The Magistrate wrote "Respondent offers to maintain the complainant in a separate house, but she refuses to accept the offer. She alleges no ill-treatment. I have consequently no power to interfere. Case dismissed."

This Magistrate was transferred, and the respondent subsequently applied to his successor for an order of maintenance for the child. The case was duly heard and an order made to pay Rs. 5 per month.

Held on appeal, that res judicata does not bar any proceedings by general principle but only by special enactment, as contained in S. 13 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and S. 403 of the Cr. P. C.

Held also that where a Magistrate, to whom an application is made, knows or has reason to believe that a similar application on the same facts has been adjudicated on, he ought not to act on the application without considering the previous decision, but that, when he does so, he is not wrong in law, nor are his proceedings bad and void, regardless of the merits.

Where the second Magistrate has done substantial justice, it is a sufficient reason for refusing to interfere in revision Maung Po So v. Ma Kyin Mi, 14 Bur. L. R. 259.

The plaintiff claimed certain properties as the reversionary heir of one M, basing that claim on the allegation that his father was taken in adoption as a son by M's divided brother. His claim was unsuccessful in the Court of first appeal, and in second appeal to the High Court, he asked permission to allege and prove a different claim as heir to M on another ground, that is to say, as being the grandson of M's sister. The High Court refused permission to do so in that suit and he now sought to do so by this separate suit.

Held that, as a plaintiff, who sued as reversioner, was bound by S. 42 to frame a suit in such a manner as to afford ground for a final decision as to his claim as reversioner and to prevent further litigation concerning it and as, in a suit to establish a claim as reversioner, that claim should be held to be the subject in dispute within the meaning of the section, the plaintiff in the former suit ought to have relied upon his descent from M's sister as well as upon the adoption, so that, if proof of the adoption failed, he might still establish his right as reversioner on the ground of this descent and prevent further litigation regarding it and that, therefore, his subsequent suit was barred. Masilamania Pillai v. of purchase money—Mortgagee taking the mortgage without notice of unpaid purchase money—Estoppel—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Ss. 3, 55 (4) (b), and 55 (6).

In a registered sale deed of a chawl, it was stated that the vendor had received consideration in full and there was also an acknowledgment of the vendor at the foot of the deed to the same effect. The vendor had also parted with all title deeds relating to the property. The vendor subsequently mortgaged the property to the plaintiff who had no knowledge that the full amount of the consideration money was not paid to the vendor though he knew that the vendor was in possession of some portion of the property.

Held, that the defendant was estopped from contending that she had a lien on the chawl for the unpaid balance of the purchase money by her declaration as to receipt of the whole purchase-money, and by her act of handing over the title deeds.

Per BAUCHOP, J. A vendor of immovable property who endorses upon the sale deed a receipt for the purchase-money cannot set up a lien for unpaid purchase money as against a mortgagee for value without notice under the purchase. Tchilram Girdharidas v Kashibai, 10 Bom. L R. 403

(2) Land sold by Government for arrears of revenue—holder of money decree against owner of such land bringing suit alleging that land bought by purchaser for and as trustee for the owner and praying that the land belonged not to the purchaser but to former owner—whether it is necessary first to set aside sale of land for arrears of revenue—plaint containing no allegation of attachment and objection, but allegation, thereby showing plaintiff's object was to vindicate the right to attach the property—whether an amendment of such plaint is allowable on second appeal—whether a person claiming to be the owner of attached property has a right of suit independent of S. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act IV of 1852)

The first defendant's land was sold by Government for arrears of revenue and was bought by second defendant.

Sale—(Continued).

The plaintiffs who had obtained a money decree against the first defendant, brought this suit, alleging that the second defendant purchased the land on behalf of the first defendant, and in order to evade attachment of the same, and held the land as trustee for the first defendant. The plaintiffs prayed (inter alia) that, on payment of the arrears of revenue, the sale be set aside, and for a declaration, under Chap VI of the Specific Relief Act, that the land was the property of the first defendant and was held by the second defendant as trustee for the first defendant.

The District Court held the sale for arrears of revenue could not be set aside (which decision was admittedly correct), and without considering the other prayers in the plaint dismissed the suit.

Held, that, although the plaint was defective, as it contained no allegation of the attachment and the objection, viz., as the allegations in the plaint (as set out above) showed clearly that the plaintiffs' object was to vindicate their right to attach the property, an amendment of the plaint should be allowed now, more especially, as the second defendant actually suggested the issue "does the second defendant hold the said lands in trust for the first defendant."

It was admitted that Chap. VI of the Specific Relief Act does not apply to the case, but it was argued that, long before the suit was instituted, the plaintiffs attached the land in execution of their decree, and the second defendant applied for the removal of the attachment, but his application was adjourned pending the decision of the suit.

Held, that a person, who claims to be the owner of the attached property, has a right of suit quite independent of S. 283 of the Civ. Pro. Code (2). (a)

Held, also, that there is no reason why a decree-holder should not have a like right of suit, provided he has attached the property, and his right to attach it has been disputed.

Held, further that, as plaintiffs not only claimed reliefs to which they were not entitled, but also omitted to state all the material facts which would entitle them to any relief, no order for costs should be made. The Societa Coloniale Italiana v. Maung Shwe Le, 14 Buz L.R. 135; 4 L.B.R. 252.

(2a) Contract for sale of house—Sale of encumbered property—Failure to clear encumbrance—Claim for rent—Refutation of purchase money—Transfer of Property Act—Applicability of principles of S. 55 (1) (a) and 5 (b).

Plaintiff entered into a contract with defendant to sell his house to the latter, who was already in possession. The house was encumbered at the time of the contract. Plaintiff received a portion of the purchase money, agreed to clear the encumbrance himself within a certain time and execute a conveyance to the defendant on receipt of the balance at the time of the sale. Defendant continued in possession. Two years later, plaintiff, without clearing the encumbrance and executing the sale, sued defendant for rent of the house. There was no contract for payment of rent after the contract for sale. The defendant retained with himself the balance of the purchase money towards the payment of the encumbrance. Held, the plaintiff was not entitled to the rent. The defendant remained in possession as purchaser and owner, and all that remained for the plaintiff to do was to clear the encumbrance and execute the sale to the defendant. Plaintiff having failed to do this, the fault was his own and he could not hold the defendant liable to the rent or damages.

The principles of S. 55 of the Transfer of Property Act were applicable to the case, though the Act was not in force at the place where the contract was entered into. Plaintiff was bound to clear the encumbrance and the defendant was entitled to retain the purchase money. H. McDonald v C. B. Wills, 41 L.B.R. 224.

Sanad.

(1) Construction of—Mokarari, grant of—Revision of rent, if in perpetuity—Set off—Res judicata—Civ. Pro Code, S. 13—Non-realization of rent for many years, effect of—Landlord and tenant—Batta, agreement to pay, if and when legal

On the construction of the sanad, which recited that, by a previous grant, Rs. 72 had been fixed as the annual horse expenses of the lessee to be paid out of mokarari rent of Rs. 250, and as the lessee had with the consent of the donor taken a transfer of the mokarari interest, the sum of Rs. 72 was to be annually set off against the mokarari rent, and the remainder Rs. 178 was remitted for the kitchen expenses of the lessee and for feeding the poor and occasional visitors and which concluded with the following statement, viz., "This sanad is, therefore, granted to Shah Pn Mahomed Saheb, as regards the remission of Rs. 250, being the amount of mokarari rent of mouzah Kaler, and according to this sanad, the Shah Saheb as well as his heirs shall get acquittances year after year from my cutchery."

Held, that there was no maintenance grant in perpetuity to the lessee or donee and his descendants from generation to generation, nor was there even a maintenance grant to the donee and his heirs, but that there was a maintenance allowance granted to the donee and his heirs then living (a).

Per Stephen, J.—Where in a previous litigation the question was whether the heirs of the grantee were entitled to claim the remission of rent and the same question, that is, as to a permanent remission of rent, is raised in a subsequent litigation by the transferees from the representatives of the original grantee, the decision in the former litigation does not amount to res judicata.

A claim for batta being a claim in excess of rent is not enforceable at law.

Per Mookerjee, J.—The Revenue Courts are Courts of limited jurisdiction, and notwithstanding the decision of the Collectorate Court, a suit may be brought in the ordinary Civil Court to establish the character of the land in suit, that is whether it is rent-free or rent-paying, in other words, the Revenue Court and the Civil Court are not Courts of concurrent or equal jurisdiction for the purposes of a suit to declare finally, whether the land is rent-free or liable to pay rent.

A decision of the Revenue Court may be evidence, but it is by no means conclusive upon the issue whether the land is rent-free, or rent-paying (b).

A maintenance grant is prima facie for the life of the grantee (c).

But the presumption may be rebutted, either by the express provisions of the grant, or where the terms of the original grant are unknown, by long course of conduct of the parties concerned (d).

When the relation of landlord and tenant exists between two persons in respect of any property, the mere non-payment of rent, though for many years, is not sufficient to show that the relationship of landlord and tenant has ceased (e).

Batta is not abuab, if it is merely an allowance for the exchange of sacca rupees into Company's rupees, the latter of which was introduced by Act XVII of 1835, and the former ceased to be a legal tender by Act XIII of 1836. If the rent claimed has been fixed before 1836, Batta is prima facie not an abuab, but if it has been fixed subsequently, it is prima facie an abuab. Rameshar Koer alias Dolphin Saheba v Go bardhan Lal, 7 C.L.J. 202

Small Cause Court.

(1) Jurisdiction of, to award compensation for erroneous attachment before judgment—S. 491, C.P.C.

By Sch II of the C.P. Code, Ch XXIV of the Code, relating to arrest and attachment before judgment, is extended to the provincial Courts of Small Causes, except as regards immovable property. This exception prohibits the Small Cause Court not only from ordering attachment of immoveable property, but also from determining the question of compensation, in case an attachment is ordered by mistake. That Court has, therefore, no power to allow compensation under S. 491 of the Code, and its order so far is ultra vires. Such a case is not one of compensation for improper attachment provided for by S. 491, but one for an attachment, which the Court had no power to order. Baru Mal v. The plaintiff mortgaged certain property to the defendants for Rs 12,000. He received Rs. 4,000 in cash Rs 7,000 were left with the defendants to pay off a prior mortgage and the balance, Rs. 1,000, was to be paid to the plaintiff after a month and half. This was a suit to recover this sum of Rs 1,000. The defence was that the defendants had to pay Rs. 8,400 to the prior mortgagee so that instead of there being a sum of Rs 1,000 due to the plaintiff he owed them Rs 400.

Held that, it being a contract to lend money, a suit for specific performance of such a contract was not maintainable.

Held, further, that such a contract does not create a debt (a). Mehdi Abbas v. Muhammad Fakhr-ud-din, 11 O.C. 217.

(7) S. 42—Possession—Suit for declaration of title—Application for partition in Revenue Court—Objection—Land Revenue Act (Act III of 1901), sections 111, 233 (k).

The plaintiffs, who were lambardars, objected, under section 111 of the Land Revenue Act, to an application for partition made by the defendant, alleging that the latter had no share in the Zemindari, and they were required to institute a suit in the Civil Court. Accordingly the present suit for declaration was brought.

Held, that the plaintiffs, being admittedly in possession as lambardars, all that was needed was a declaration to the effect that the defendant had no title, and such a declaration having been made by the Civil Court, it would not be necessary for the plaintiffs to seek any further relief. The suit, therefore, was not barred under the provisions of section 42, Specific Relief Act.

Held also, that section 233 (k), Land Revenue Act, did not apply to the case, as it was provided

- (9) S. 42—Declaration, suit for, that a decree was fraudulent—Further relief—Court-fee how to be assessed—Plaint originally framed correctly—Subsequent amendment, defective—Restoration by appellate Court

It is necessary for the plaintiff to ask not only for a declaration that a decree obtained against him was fraudulent, but also for a consequential relief, viz., either to have the fraudulent decree set aside or to have a perpetual injunction granted to restrain the decree-holder from executing it (a)

A suit for a declaration that a decree obtained against the plaintiff was fraudulent, with a consequential relief, should ordinarily be valued at the amount for which the decree sought to be set aside was obtained (b)

Where the plaint was originally correctly framed, but by reason of an unfounded objection as to deficiency of Court-fees taken by the defendant, the plaintiff withdrew his prayer for consequential relief, which resulted in the dismissal of the suit on the ground of its not being maintainable, the High Court in second appeal allowed the plaint to be amended and restored, to its original form. Thakur Prosad v. C sued A for a declaratory decree, under S. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, to declare his right with respect to certain land alleging that, in the year 1236 B.E., a monastery was built on it, and that it and the land around it was given him as a poggalika gift, that, in the year 1261 B.E., the monastery fell into disrepair, and he tried to pull it down and build a new one on the site and that the defendants tried to prevent him from so doing. The defence was that the monastery was given as a poggalika gift but not the monastery land.

Held that, as the gift appeared to have been made in 1226 B.E., or before that date and long before the Lower Burma Land and Revenue Act came into force, by S. 4 (b) of the Act, nothing in Part II of the Act applied to the land and that the land did not come within the provisions of S. 56 of the Act; and that, therefore, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court was not barred with respect to it.

Held also that, as the plaintiff alleged that he was forcibly prevented from building a fresh monastery by certain persons, whom or whose representatives he sued and that, as the defence did not allege that he was not forcibly prevented, but that the land did not belong to him, in other words, that his claim to the land was contested, there was a cause of action, which was peaceful possession for the future.

It was also urged that the second Court was wrong in holding that, when the gift of the monastery was made, the land was included in the gift.

Held that the second Court agreed with the first Court in its view of the evidence, and that, as there was a concurrent finding of fact, that finding could not be questioned on second appeal.

It was further urged that the plaintiff could not sue in his personal capacity.

Held that, as in poggalsha gifts the person to whom the offering is made has a right to keep it, a priest, who has received a poggalsha gift, has a right to sue to protect his rights in it. Mra Paw v. U Pyin Nya. 14 Bur. L. R. 277.

Takarridar.

- (1) Takarridar—Succession to his holding by his adopted son—Claim by proprietary body of Mauza Talwandi, Tehsil Dina Nagar, District Gurdaspur—Land entered as Shamilat Deh—Charitable gift—Muafi—Occupancy tenant—No analogy between Takarridars and Mukarridar of Rawalpindi—Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887), Ss. 5, 6 and 59.

Takarridar—(Concluded).

In 1829 A.D. one S acquired some land as a charitable gift (Dharm Arth) from the Sikh Government.

In 1850, S received Musafi grant from the British Government for his life.

In 1875, on his death the grant was resumed and an engagement for payment of revenue at full rates was made with his son R, and he was recorded as Takarridar in the proprietary column paying a small amount of rent (Malikana) to the proprietary body. This entry was repeated in the last settlement of 1890-91 and was continued till R's death in 1901 when mutation was effected in favour of R's adopted son K.

Held that, the term Takarridar is neither defined in the Punjab Tenancy Act (XVI of 1887) nor it falls within the definition of various tenants detailed therein.

Held, also, that under the above circumstances, Takarridar occupies the position of a proprietor and not that of an occupancy tenant, and his adopted son is entitled to succeed him.

Per Kensington, J.—R could establish occupancy rights under S 5 of the Punjab Tenancy Act.

The mere fact that the land has all along been shown in the settlement record as Shamilat Dch proves nothing, especially as in 1890 Settlement Record R was entered in the column for proprietors.

R's Takarridar tenure has no analogy to that of Mukarridar of Rawalpindi District as explained in (a). Budha Singh v Kanshi Ram, 120 P.W.R. 1908.

(1)—, evidentiary value of—Statement recorded in presence of parties—Effect

The presence at the preparation of, and the signing by the parties or their agent of, a thakbust map may fairly be taken to be an admission by the parties of the boundary lines between adjoining villages.

In this case the dispute was whether certain land belonged to the estate of the plaintiff or to that of the defendant. Plaintiff produced thakbust and survey maps for 1852 to 1853, the former containing a statement in support of his case. The defendant produced a survey map of the years 1855 to 1856, in support of his case, but failed to produce any thakbust map of the same year. It was found that the predecessor of the defendant had full notice of the thak proceedings, that he objected to the boundary line as laid down in the plaintiff's map between their estates, and that the objection was disallowed.

Held, that the evidentiary value of the thakbust map and the survey maps produced on behalf of the plaintiff was greater than that of the survey map produced on behalf of the defendant. Dunne v. Dharani Kantha Lahiri, 35 C. 621.

Toda giras allowance.

(1) Toda giras allowance—Execution of decree—Attachment and sale of the allowance—What interest in the allowance is attachable—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), S. 266—Bombay Act (VII of 1887), "S. 5—Likely to become due"—Interpretation.

A decree holder, in execution of his decree, applied for the attachment and sale of a toda giras allowance, which the judgment-debtor was entitled to receive periodically from the Government treasury, and which was to become payable to him during the twenty years following the application. The lower Courts held that the life-interest of the holder, computed at its valuation for twenty years, could be attached and sold in execution of the decree—

Held, reversing the order, that it is clear from the language of S. 5 of Bombay Act VII of 1887, that it is not the life-interest of the judgment-debtor in a toda giras allowance but something short of it that is allowed by the Act to be attached.

The words "money likely to become due" must be restricted to the case when, for instance, during the life time of the judgment-debtor, a sum of money is directed by the Collector to be paid to him on account of a toda giras allowance, not immediately, but on a date subsequent to the date of the order of direction, and the judgment-debtor dies before that date, and to other cases of a similar character.

Under what circumstances money is likely to become due on account of a toda giras allowance is a question which cannot be answered exhaustively and must depend on the facts of each case as it arises. Amarsang Maysang v. Jethalal Maganlal, 10 Bom.L.R. 1201.

A Municipality constructed a dam in a creek but by allowing a ditch, which was connected with the creek and which drained away rain water, to be filled up with rubbish of the town and the sluices at the dam to be choked up with weeds, silt, and such other things, the rain water collected in the creek was carried away and flooded the plaintiff's property.

Held, that the Municipality was liable for the nuisance; since it turned their works by their negligence into a nuisance (a) Rajendralal Maneklal v. Surat City Municipality, 10 Bom. L. R. 198.

Water was not brought on defendant's land by any act of his, but water which flowed on one portion of his land for the purpose of protecting another portion of his land, was retained by him, and as a result of such retention, damage was caused to the land of the plaintiffs which adjoined.

Held, under the circumstances, that the retention of water on defendant's land in order that it might not flow to another part, is not an act done in the natural and ordinary course of the enjoyment of property which would protect him from being liable in damages to the plaintiffs, if injury had been done to his land Ramanuja Chariar v. No action of libel or slander lies whether against Judges (a), counsel (b), witnesses (c), or parties for words written or spoken in the ordinary course of any proceeding before any Court or tribunal recognised by law. The principle on which this rule is based would seem to apply also to an accused person, as it is essential to the administration of justice that those who are protecting their own interests should be under no apprehension of any proceedings from the opposite party (d).

A reply to a notice of action will be privileged, so long as it is confined to the matter in hand, is relevant and is not published. A. P. Pachaiperumal Chettiar v. Dasi Thangam, 18 M. L. J. 353 4 M. L. T. 222=91 M. 400.

(5) Execution of decree for rent due Third person's property sold in execution—Third person suing decree-holder for damages—Decree-holder liable, not for negligence, but for wrongful act—Whether third person concluded by estoppel.

H, rented a serai from B, the defendant, for storing his machinery. He rented the serai for four months, paying one month's rent in advance. The plaintiff, with the permission of H, stored his turbine in the same place. Subsequently, H removed his machinery, but the plaintiff's turbine remained in the serai. The defendant sued H, for rent unpaid and got an ex parte decree against H, in execution of which he sold up the plaintiff's turbine. The plaintiff then sued the defendant for the value of the turbine;

Held that the suit could not be considered as an action for tort on account of negligence, but that the defendant was accountable to plaintiff in damages, though his wrong-doing was unintentional, as on an action for conversion. The question of contributory negligence could only arise in the case of an action based on negligence. The plaintiff's neglect, in so far as it excused the defendant's wrong-doing, could only be taken into account in assessing damages, by requiring the plaintiff to prove strictly the damage suffered by him.

Tort—(Concluded).

On the question whether the plaintiff was estopped by his conduct from alleging the turbine to be his and whether he should be held to have represented it to belong to H, held that there was no representation by the plaintiff on which any reasonable man could hold that the turbine belonged to H, and that the plaintiff by omitting to notify the goods to be his could not be held to have intentionally permitted the defendant to believe the turbine to be H's, and that he was not, therefore, estopped from alleging it to be his Parmeshari Das v Basheshar Nath, 129 P R. 1908.

(1) Passing of goods—Admissibility of evidence of intent—Intent to deceive

The general principle applicable to passing off cases is that "no body has the right to represent his goods as the goods of somebody else" (a). In an action for an injunction to restrain the trade-mark, or mark if the defendant's goods on the face of them and having regard to the surrounding circumstances are calculated to deceive, evidence to prove the intention to deceive is inadmissible as being unnecessary the "rule being that a man must be taken to have intended the reasonable and natural consequences of his own acts" Where the defendant adopted a trade-mark identical with that of the plaintiff, which trade-mark was calculated to deceive and there was evidence to show, that some person was actually deceived, held, the plaintiff, was entitled to succeed without a necessity for him to prove an intention to deceive (b) and to obtain an injunction (c). Munna Lal Serowjee v. (2) Breach—Right of manufacturer to sue—Title of assignee of trade-mark without business—Pleadings—Statement by plaintiff not admitted by defendant—Proof

It is title law that an assignment of trade-mark, without the business, confers no effective right.

An action for breach of trade-mark does not lie at the instance of the manufacturer who supplies articles, when another firm carries on the actual business with the articles supplied.

The manufacturer may be interested in the success of the firm which de facto carries on the business, but this cannot put him in the shoes of the latter in vindicating the latter's right against wrong-doers.

Where a statement by a plaintiff is not admitted by the defendant, the plaintiff, if he ignores the point, does so at his peril, for the defence puts him to prove his title. J. Ullman & Co. v Cesar Leuba, 13 C.W.N. 82.

Held that the vendor could not recover the property from the vendee in possession, without proving that the fraudulent purpose of the parties to the sale was never carried out, and that the vendor's heirs were in no better position than the vendor. The words of S. 81 of the Trusts Act, 1882, clearly indicate that it is for the plaintiffs to make out that the fraud never got beyond the state of intention, and, in the present case, the defendant having the benefit of possession, the maxim "in pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis" applies. Ragho Atmaram v. As a right must always be on the one side or the other, the fact that the right is on his side is not by itself sufficient for a party to set aside a compromise entered into by him on the supposition of a doubtful right.

There is nothing illegal in a Hindu widow acquiring full ownership in any property under a will; and a razinamah or decree recognising that right is, therefore, not illegal.

A Hindu widow brought a suit, as the sole owner of her husband's property under his will, against her husband's brother and some others, who were executors under the will, for a declaration that she had become solely entitled to the possession of the property and for other reliefs. A razinamah was entered into by which the suit property was acknowledged to be the absolute property of the widow in accordance with the terms of the will. A decree was passed in accordance with the terms of the razinamah, and a deed of release was executed by the reversioners. A suit was brought to recover these properties by the son of the testator's brother, as reversioner, alleging that the razinamah was invalid for misrepresentation and coercion.

Held, that the acceptance of the release deed was not an acknowledgment of the existence of any right in the releasor, but amounted only to an agreement (a) not to disturb the widow in the enjoyment of the property absolutely and that there was nothing to countenance the view that the razinamah and the release should be treated as effecting a transfer of only a chance of succession or spes successionis to the widow, which was incapable of transfer by virtue of S. 6 (a), Transfer of Property Act, and, therefore, illegal and invalid. Olati Pulliah Chetty v E. (7) S. 43—Estoppel—Representation—Transferor—Subsequent acquisition of right

The rule of law underlying S. 43 of the Transfer of Property Act is that, as between the transferor, and the transferee, the transferor cannot plead subsequent title to the land transferred, if he had induced the transferee to pay money for the transfer. The principle is an extension of the rule of estoppel.

Where a person who had merely a ghatwali interest in certain land mortgaged it on the representation that it was his jagir, and he subsequently got a moharari title to it.

Held, that on a decree for sale upon the mortgage, the moharari interest of the mortgagor passed to the mortgagee. Mokhoda Debi v. Umesh Chandra Banerjee, 7 C L.J. 381.

The whole of a certain house was mortgaged, the mortgagor having at the time an interest in only a fractional share in it. The mortgagee sued, and obtained a decree for the sale of the whole house. After that decree was passed and partially executed, the mortgagor in virtue of a partition acquired the remaining interest in the house. Held, that section 13 of the Transfer of Property Act applied and that the decree-holder was competent to continue execution of his decree against the mortgagor's after-acquired interest. Durga Das v. (8-a) Ss. 43 and 41—Rights of sub-mortgagee—Whether sub-mortgage is transfer of immoveable property—Equitable mortgage—Preference over legal mortgage, where latter is not taken with notice of prior charge—Notice, actual or constructive

A sub-mortgagee has not merely the rights against the mortgage debt. A sub-mortgage comprises, (a) the personal covenant of the sub-mortgagor, (b) the transfer of the original mortgage debt and mortgaged property with the benefit of all powers and remedial clauses contained in the original mortgage and (c) in English mortgages a power of sale.

Held, therefore, that a man who assigns a mortgage or sub-mortgages, does transfer immoveable property within the meaning of S. 43 of the Act.

The mere fact of a person depositing certain title-deeds with another is sufficient evidence of a representation that he was authorised to transfer the property to which the deeds refer.

S. 43 protects a purchaser or transferee for value without notice, and there is no such provision in it as is found in S. 41, requiring the transferee to take reasonable care to ascertain the power of his transferor to give a clear title.

There is no authority for the proposition that a transferee is to be imputed with notice under

S. 43, if he has not exercised the utmost care in investigating his transferor's title.

Equitable mortgages are not entitled to preference over legal mortgages, unless the latter be taken with notice of the prior charge, and such notice may be either actual or constructive. And a person must be held to have had constructive notice of a prior mortgage, if such mortgage would have come to his knowledge, had he exercised the diligence of an ordinarily prudent man, and if the facts show that he did not exercise such diligence. Maung Ba Tin v. Maung Po Kin, 14 Bur. L.R. 329.

(9) S. 50—Lessor and lessee—Payment of rent by lessee in good faith—Liability of the lessee to pay rent to the rightful owner.

On the 14th December, 1895, S went into possession of certain property as mortgagee, and on the same day he let the property to the defendant for twelve years. S after some years died, and his interest as mortgagee survived to his younger brother R. Thereafter R died, and since then S's widow G took possession of the property and managed the same, and got her name placed on the khata as the owner of the property. She also recovered rent from the defendant for the years 1902 and 1903. The person who was really entitled to the property at R's death was his sister, the plaintiff. She sued to recover rent for the years 1902 and 1903 from the defendant on the ground that G had no authority to receive rent and give a discharge for the same. It was found that the defendant in making the payment to G had acted in good faith and had no notice of the plaintiff's interest in the property.

Held, that the defendant was not chargeable with the rent sued for, as S. 50 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, applied to the case.

The language of S. 50 is general. It applies even to cases where there has not been an assignment by the lessor during the tenancy. Kaveriamma Putta Hegde v. Lingappa Rama, 10 Bom. L.R. 1190.

- (12) S. 52—Transfer after decree and before appeal filed by vendee—Appeal—Final decree

The function of an appellate Court is not under the Code of Civil Procedure (1882), the final decree in the case, and the proceedings in the appellate Court must therefore be treated as a continuation of the proceedings in the lower Court.

It is not open to a defeated suitor to file an appeal immediately as he has to obtain copies of the decree and judgment and he ought not to suffer for the delay imposed by law. There is no reason why this delay should prejudice him in this respect any more than the delays due to adjournments or stay of proceedings.

The law of lis pendens in this country is founded on the necessity, if possible, of a final adjudication, and it is unjust that a plaintiff should be prejudiced by any acts of the defendant subsequent to the institution of the suit and with notice thereof. Setta Goundan v. A transfer of property, the considerations for which are separable, part being for valuable consideration and part for the intention to defeat or delay other creditors, is valid and enforceable with regard to the part which is for valuable consideration.

A mortgage was executed for a total sum of Rs. 8,500. It was found that Rs. 4,853 was actually advanced by the mortgagees, the evidence as to the balance, Rs. 3,647 was extremely suspicious and seemed to be for the purpose of delaying another creditor who had obtained a decree on a bachchitta.

Held, there ought to be a mortgage decree on the footing of Rs. 4,853, being the principal money secured (a).

On reading the two Ss. 56 and 81 of the Transfer of Property Act, it was held, that a purchaser of one of the lands comprised in a first mortgage has no right to insist that the other lands comprised in the mortgage should first be sold before selling the land that he purchased.

It may however be pointed out that, under S. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Court may order that a portion sufficient to discharge the plaintiff's debt be sold, and if the part sold is sufficient, and if the plaintiff cannot possibly be prejudiced by such sale, it may be open to the Court to direct in the decree itself its sale before the other property.

Further, in execution of a decree for the sale of all the lands, the lands not sold may be sold first, and if the sale-proceeds are sufficient to discharge the plaintiff's debt, the sale of the other lands may be stopped. Kommineni Appayya v Mangala Rangayya, 3 M.L.T. 287 (F.B.) = 18 M.L.J. 229.

A certain person borrowed a sum of money from plaintiff, and as security therefor, temporarily sold certain land to her with a promise to re-take it on payment of the consideration money and the vendor put plaintiff in possession. Sometime after, the borrower vendor entered on the land without the plaintiff's consent and was in wrongful possession. Plaintiff sued for a decree for ejectment and for possession or in the alternative, for recovery of the amount lent, to be paid within a time to be fixed by the Court and that, in default, the land be sold and the proceeds applied towards satisfaction of the amount decreed. Held, that, the transactions amounted to a usufructuary mortgage within the definition contained in S. 58 (d) of the Transfer of Property Act. Though that Act was not in force, where the land was situated the principles of that Act were applicable. Applying the principles of Ss. 67 and 68 of that Act, there could be no decree for sale.

The decree for sale passed by the Lower Court was therefore set aside and a decree ejecting the defendant and putting the plaintiff back in possession was passed. Shwe Lok v. Ma Selk Kaung, 4 L.B.R. 222.

For the purposes of S. 17 (b), Registration Act, under S. 59, Transfer of Property Act, as it stood in 1901, i.e., before the amending Act (No. 6) of 1904 came into force the "value" of the right, title, or interest in immoveable property created by a mortgage is the principal money secured (a). Hence in order to see whether the special kind of instrument known as a mortgage requires or does not require registration it is not necessary to ascertain what the least sum recoverable under the mortgage is (b). From the simple fact that interest is calculated in advance and made payable along with the principal at a certain specified period, it cannot be regarded as principal. The proper presumption therefore is that the words "principal money secured" were deliberately inserted in S. 59 to show that interest is not to be taken into account. Gama v. Laharoo, 4 N.L.R. 86.

The fact that it is not open to the transferee to institute a suit, under S. 67 of the Act, as he is not the mortgagee, does not relieve him from the condition of not bringing it to sale otherwise than under S. 67 of the Act (a).

It is the right of the prior mortgagee to require the second mortgagee to redeem him or submit to a sale of whatever interest he holds in the property (S. 75) ; and the decree must give effect to this right, unless by doing so it unnecessarily deprives the second mortgagee of any right of his own.

S. 96 of the Act does not support the view that the puisne mortgagee is not required to redeem the prior mortgagee when the latter is a party to the suit (a).

In a mortgage deed, after enumerating several contingencies, provision was made on the happening of any of them in the following terms:—

"Notwithstanding anything contained to the contrary, the mortgage-debt, for the time being owing on the security of these presents, shall at once become payable, as if the due date, or extended date, if any, had elapsed, and, in such case, all such right and remedies shall be available to the Banker, as will be available to her under the term of these presents, upon default being made in payment of the principal moneys or interest, and all other moneys hereby secured, and the banker may, in such event in her discretion, without any further consent on the part of the Company, forthwith enter upon or take possession of the mortgaged premises, or any of them of which she is not already in possession."

Owing to the happening of some of the contingencies, the plaintiff claimed that the debt, owing on the security of the mortgage deed, had become payable, and that she was entitled to enter upon and take possession of the premises mortgaged to her. She contended that the expression "as if the due date had elapsed" not only served to accelerate the due date, but also to fix the amount of the mortgage money at what it would have been, if, in fact, the due date had elapsed. The defendant alleged a tender of the mortgage money to plaintiff's attorneys and refusal to accept the same, and claimed to redeem the property.

Held, (1) that the words 'as if due date had elapsed' were used merely to accelerate payment, and they could not be construed to cover the further amount that would have been due on the expiry of the due date of the mortgage.

(2) That the tender was not good, as the plaintiff's attorney disclaimed authority to receive it.

(3) That the defendant was entitled to redeem the property.

On a decree directing sale, in default of payment, of property usufructuarly mortgaged, the mortgagor paid the money, some months after the fixed date, into Court with an application in the form of an application for execution of a decree, and obtained delivery of possession of the mortgaged property. Till then the mortgage remained in possession, but had not, when he was ousted, applied for an order for sale under S. 89, Transfer of Property Act. He refused to receive the money and contended that the Court had no power, in execution proceedings, to permit the mortgagors to pay it into Court and to direct delivery of possession to them, they not having paid on the fixed date.

Held, that a decree for sale, under S. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act, is a final decree, and, all subsequent proceedings are proceedings in execution of that decree, and to them the provisions of the Civ. Pro. Code are, so far as they may be applicable, to be applied (a) Unless, then, there is something in the decree to debar him from so doing, the judgment-debtor is entitled to stop execution by payment of the debt, at any time after the decree has been passed, and before the execution-sale is complete and it is not finally complete until he has had his opportunity of obtaining its rescission under S. 310-A of the Code.

The decree for sale does not debar the mortgagor of any right in default of payment; the only penalty affixed to the default is the liability to have the property sold (b).

Though the mortgagors be regarded as decree-holders, within the meaning of S. 2, C.P. C. (c), by their default, they only lose the privileges of a decree-holder, which their creditor has thrust upon them, but they do not thereby lose their rights as judgment-debtors to pay the debt into the Execution-Court and require satisfaction to be entered up. A mortgagor can obtain possession of his property in execution-proceedings after paying money into the Court executing the decree.

Regarding the rate of interest to be awarded to the mortgagee after the decree directing the sale, he was held entitled only to the usual Court rate of interest, i.e. 6 per cent., and not to the melwarām of the property according to the terms of the mortgage. Audipurānam Pillay v. Held also that on an application under section 90 of the Transfer of Property Act it is the date of filing the suit which has to be looked to in considering the question whether the balance is legally recoverable from the defendant. Jangi Singh v. Personal decree for large sum should not be ex parte decree—When such decree can be passed—S. 4, Succession Certificate Act.

A decree under S. 90 of the Transfer of Property Act was passed ex parte in a suit to enforce a mortgage. Held that there was inherent jurisdiction in the Court to set it aside (a), and that if the decree be a personal decree for a large sum, it ought not to have been made ex parte, as the person against whom it was passed had a right to be heard as to his personal liability for this sum, and whether his property was liable for the debt claimed, and whether the amount was correct.

A decree can only be passed under S. 90 against a defendant, from whom the balance is legally recoverable. Having regard to S. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act, the Court cannot pass any decree under S. 90, Transfer of Property Act, in favour of the representative of the mortgagee, where no certificate had been granted to him under any of the Acts mentioned in that section, and a certificate which is granted after the passing of the decree under S. 90 is not sufficient to get rid of the difficulty in his path created by the clear language of S. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act. Abdul Sattar v. Defendant purchased a certain property in execution of decree on a suit by a first mortgagee in which the plaintiff a third mortgagee was no party. He (the defendant) redeemed the second mortgagee and was in possession of the property. The plaintiff sued to enforce his mortgage as also to redeem prior incumbrances

Held, that S. 93 of the Transfer of Property Act did not, in its literal terms, apply to a case where there was no prior mortgage still in existence, but the principles there laid down ought to be followed in dealing with such a case.

The plaintiff who did not deposit the redemption money within the time allowed by Court can redeem afterwards before a final order is made under cl. (2) of S. 93 of the Transfer of Property Act, that is, before the decree is made absolute (a).

The position of the defendant, who is in possession of the property under an obligation to re-transfer it, if the redemption money is paid on a fixed date, is analogous to that of a mortgagee by conditional sale.

If a deposit of the redemption money is accepted by the Court before the final order under cl. 2 of S. 93 of the Transfer of Property Act, but after the date fixed for payment, it becomes an effectual deposit, although no formal order extending the time was passed. Bepin Behary Shaha v. Held, that a notice dated 1st Falgun (= 13th February) was not a valid notice when the 30th Chaitra fell off 12th April as it was not a full 'two months' notice but fell short of it by one day.

In view of the provisions of Cl. (j) of S. 108 of the Transfer of Property Act, all lessees including lessees holding under permanent leases are liable for rent even after they have transferred their rights.

A suit for recovery of royalty upon a registered document is governed by art 116 and not art 110 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act (a).

The failure by tenant to renew a lease for a term in compliance with the provision for renewal contained therein does not operate as a forfeiture, determining the tenancy ipso facto and relieving the tenant from liability to pay rent under the lease. (77) S. 111—Forfeiture—Denial of landlord's title—Pleading

Where, after the denial of a landlord's title, he received rent from the tenant, he cannot rely upon the denial as a ground of forfeiture.

Semble—S. 111 of the Transfer of Property Act deals with the whole lease of the immovable property comprised therein and not with a part or moiety of it, a denial of title by one of several joint lessees cannot therefore entail forfeiture.

Held—That a suit for khas possession for denial of landlord's title by one of two joint tenants is not maintainable when the other tenant has not been made a party.

When the tenants did not repudiate their lease but rather stuck to it, and only questioned the right of the plaintiffs as transferees from their lessor, the alleged transfer appearing to be of a prior date to the lease.

Held—That there was no denial of landlord's title to cause a forfeiture of the tenancy.

Where the tenants could not obtain possession of the whole area leased to them, and on reference to their lessors got no satisfaction from them, and then took a lease of the portion of which they could not get possession, from a stranger whom they found in possession.

Held—That there was no renunciation by the tenants of their character as such so as to entail forfeiture. Srimati Farman Bibi v. Sheikh Tash Haddad Hasain, 12 C.W.N. 587 = 7 C.L.J. 648.

A gift of immovable property duly made by means of a registered deed is not invalid merely because registration of the deed of gift may have taken place after the death of the donor (a).

It is the invariable practice of the Courts in the mofussil that, when a remand, involving the taking of fresh evidence, is ordered, the District Court sends down the case to the first Court in order that the evidence may be taken there, and this is done in the interests of the parties themselves and for their convenience. Trusts and bequests of lands or money—for the purpose of devoting the income thereof in perpetuity for the performance of Muktad Baj, Yejushni and other like ceremonies, are valid "charitable" bequests, and, as such, exempt from the application of the rule of law forbidding perpetuities.

The performance of the Muktad ceremonies is a religious duty imposed upon the Zoroastrians by the proved tenets of the religion they profess. The ceremonies themselves are acts of religious worship. They include worship, praise and adoration of the Supreme Deity, and a thanks-giving for all His mercies. They contain petitions for benefits both temporal and spiritual for all Zoroastrians—for all holy and virtuous men of all other communities—and they comprise prayers for the well-being and long reign of the Sovereign, for good Government by him, and for victory to him over all his enemies. The Muktad ceremonies tend most unmistakably towards the advancement of the religion promulgated by the Persian Prophet Zoroaster, and the performance of these ceremonies is an act of Divine worship in its highest and truest sense.

The moneys paid to the priests for the performance of the Muktad ceremonies forms a good portion of their ordinary income. The priests make a higher income during the Farvardigan days than they do during any other period of the year, and the Muktad ceremonies form a sort of endowment which goes a long way to maintain the priestly classes whose existence is necessary to the community of Zoroastrians. According to the belief prevailing amongst the faithful followers of the Prophet

The remaining trustees alleged that the money was advanced in equal shares by them and the deceased trustee, and not out of the trust funds.

The plaintiff who was appointed a fresh trustee sued the remaining trustees and the widow for the appointment of a trustee for the trust funds, for a declaration that the pro-note and the funds in the hands of the widow were part of the trust property, for the vesting in such trustee of the property belonging to the trust, and for directing the widow to hand over to the trustee the papers and the funds in her possession belonging to the trust. Held, (1) that the joining of the widow with the trustees did not constitute a mis-joinder, and, (2) that the suit fell within S. 539 of the Civ. No discretion is given to the trustees under the will to spend what was necessary or legitimate, but they are directed to pay the whole amount. He went on to say that, if for any reason the Court could not order the demolition of the building, a decree might be passed in his favour for possession on payment of compensation for the building. Vendor and vendee

- (1) Mortgage—Rights and position of vendee of a share in joint mortgaged property when it is redeemed in part or whole by his money—Amendment of plaint in further appeal.

Held, that when a vendee of a share in a joint property already mortgaged by all its owners redeems whole of it by his own money, he steps into the position of the original mortgagee, in respect of the shares of the other co-sharers, and acquires a charge thereon, and that the co-sharers have no right to take possession of their shares without paying, to the vendee their quota of the mortgage-money.

Practice Under the circumstances of this case, plaintiff was allowed to amend his plaint in further appeal. Fazal Din v. Budha 61 P.W.R. 1908.

Where plaintiff sues defendant for damages on the ground that the release deed executed by defendant as part of the consideration for the sale deed had become useless, and that there was thus a breach of an implied warranty of title, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed.

The acceptance of a collateral security by the vendor does not ipso facto extinguish the vendor's lien for unpaid purchase money, but the sale would be deemed to be extinguished if on the evidence, it be found that by the acceptance of the security it was intended to extinguish such lien. Held, also, that the suit was governed by art 132 of the Limitation Regulation. Raman Govindan v. Vendor and vendee—(Concluded)

Where, shortly after the defendant sold to plaintiff a house purchased by herself recently, and covenanted for title and contracted that she would indemnify the plaintiff against any loss that might arise by reason of the bargain being annulled at the instance of any one, including a pre-emptor (a), a third person brought a suit for pre-emption against the original vendee and the parties to the present suit and obtained a decree for possession, held, that the plaintiff (purchaser) was entitled to recover from the vendee (defendant) the loss sustained in the transaction.

The words “digar dawedar,” in one of the clauses in the vendor's contract on which the vendee relied, being very wide, they included a person claiming property by right of pre-emption. Khonmon Bibi v. Shah Mali, 111 P.R. 1908.

- (1) Defendant a bona fide purchaser without notice of plaintiff's claim or means of ascertaining it—Defendant not taking any steps to search Registration office—Defendant cannot plead due diligence.

The defence in this case was two fold. First the plaintiffs were put to strict proof of their title, secondly, a defendant said he was a bona fide purchaser without notice of plaintiff's claim or means of ascertaining it.

Held on the evidence that the plaintiffs had proved their purchase.

Held, also, on the evidence, that the defendant never took any steps to search the Registration office at all, and that, if he had done so, he would have found that his vendor was not the owner of the land, and that, therefore, he cannot be heard to say that he took reasonable steps to ascertain that his vendor had power to sell. B Rungasawmy Naidu v. Wagering contracts.

(1) Liability of principal to pay agent sums due on account of wagering contract—Contract Act, 1872, S. 30—

A cash payment by an agent on account of a simple badm transaction entered into on behalf of a principal is legally recoverable from the principal. So too, where enforceable liabilities are incurred by an agent on badm transaction, they are recoverable from the principal. By enforceable liability is meant a liability which the agent cannot resist or repudiate at law.

If an agent dealing badm for a principal loses a sum of money on the transaction and, having no previous account with the third party, authorises him to enter up in his books a debit against him (the agent), the agent, without paying the money, cannot recover the amount from his principal.

If in such a case, the agent already has dealings with the third party and is owed money by him on accounts with which the principal has no concern, and the sum lost as aforesaid being less than the sum due to the agent is settled by a credit in the agent's books and a debit in the third party's book, the amount so credited and debited is recoverable by the principal.

In a similar case if the debt owed to an agent is less than the sum lost by him on account of his principal and the matter is settled by a debit and credit as aforesaid, plus a payment in cash of the balance due by the agent, he can recover from his principal the amount adjusted by credit and debit and the amount of the cash payment.

If in such a case the sum already owed to the agent by the third party is equal to the sum lost as aforesaid to the third party, and the agent authorises that party to set off one against the other in his books and treat the account as squared, the agent can recover the

The plaintiffs in this litigation are the malguzars of manza Jawar in the Nimar district and sued to recover the site of a house in the abadi on the ground that it had been sold by the original tenants in contravention of cl. IX of the wajib-ul-arz. They obtained a decree in the first Court but the claim was dismissed in appeal by the District Judge, who held that the wajib-ul-arz does not prohibit transfer of the right to occupy a site in the abadi. The wajib-ul-arz contains the following clause Every person is at liberty to sell or mortgage the materials of his house on leaving the village on any other occasion, but he cannot so dispose of his house-site, which belongs to the proprietors.

Held that the wajib-ul-arz relied on by the District Judge did not support his conclusion that the right to occupy may be transferred by sale. The case was remanded to the District Court with directions to re-admit the appeal and to determine it afresh on the merits. Motiram v. Rup Khan, 4 N.L.R. 155.

(3) Will by widow with consent of reversioner—Validity—Act VIII of 1827, certificate of heirship under—Effect.

Where a will is made by a Hindu widow with the consent of her next reversioner—the only relation interested in disputing the same—such a will is valid and binding.

Where the provisions of the Indian Succession Act are not applicable to a will, the Courts need not concern itself with the question whether the written will is duly signed by the testatrix and attested, but with the question whether the document contains the formal expression of the wishes of the testatrix as to the disposal of her property after her death; and whether it was made at a time when she was in her senses.

A certificate of heirship under Act VIII of 1827 confers no further rights on the grantee of the same than to permit debtors to pay their debts, and others who have the possession of the estate to give up the possession to the grantee, to relieve themselves of further liabilities. It does not enable the grantee to give a good title to a stranger in respect of property over which he is not given any power of disposition by the Will. Jiwanmal, son of Jethmal v Nihalchand Hiranand, 1 Sind L.R. 196.

Held, that there was due execution of the will, though the plaintiff and the other three witnesses were not examined, and though the evidence referred to was liable to suspicion and to the comments made on it in the Court below.

Petition for grant of Letters of Administration of estate of a Roman Catholic priest, with the will annexed by which the petitioner was made residuary legatee. A caveat was put in by one of the next-of-kin, alleging in effect that the testator had bequeathed the estate to the petitioner, subject to certain instructions as to how the property should be disposed of, and that the petitioner had fraudulently suppressed the private instructions left by the testator in order to claim the estate for himself. It was found that the will did not really express the intentions of the testator, as the plaintiff undertook to dispose of the property in other ways, explained to him by the testator, and that the petitioner was aware, from the first, of the testator's intention that the property should be disposed of according to the testator's instructions.

Held, that, if an individual on his death-bed, or at any other time, is persuaded by his heir-at-law, or his next-of-kin, to abstain from making a will, or if the same individual, having made a will, communicates the disposition to the person on the face of the will benefited by that disposition, but at the same time, says to that individual that he has a purpose to answer which he has not expressed in the will, but which he relies on the donee to carry into effect and the donee assents to it either expressly or by any mode of action which the donee knows must give the testator the impression and belief that he fully assents to the request, then undoubtedly, the heir-at-law in the one case, and the donee in the other, will be converted into trustees simply on the ground that an individual shall not be benefited by his own personal fraud (a).

The proviso to S. 5 of the Indian Trusts Act which embodies the English equitable rule makes the English Law applicable to India (b).

Per WALLIS, J. The present case does not come within the provisions of S. 81 of the Trusts Act and on the other hand, there is statutory authority in the Act for applying the principles laid down in the English cases.

Per CURRAM.—When a legatee or trustee claims as universal legatee, and suppresses the secret instructions given by the testator without stating what they are, with the evident intention of retaining the estate himself, it is clear that the Letters of Administration would enable him to commit fraud, and, therefore, ought not to be granted.

Per SANKARAN NAIR, J.—S. 81 of the Trusts Act applies even if the testator intending to dispose of the beneficial interest to others leaves his estate to the devisee. The words “intended to dispose of the beneficial interest therein” in S. 81 have reference to the disposal of the beneficial interest by the transfer or will.

In England, evidence appears to be admissible only to prove a trust, but not to prove that the legal estate alone passed. In India, once the evidence is admitted and it is proved that the devise is only a trustee, he takes no beneficial interest in the property, but holds it only for the benefit of the testator's legal representative (c), but under the English Law, he holds it absolutely except where knowledge of the testator's wishes and a fraudulent intention on the part of the devisee, or except where an admission by him that he holds merely as trustee, is shown.

Obiter.—Under the Indian Trusts Act, the beneficiary has no estate or interest in the subject-matter of the trust, he has only a right to proceed against the trustee.

Per SANKARAN NAIR, J. (WALLIS, J., dissenting), S. 187 of the Indian Succession Act is no bar to a claim by a beneficiary against a legatee,

entitled as universal legatee to Letters of Administration to enforce the trust, which a testator has created by giving secret instructions not embodied in the will.

Per SANKARAN NAIR, J.—Though the title of an administrator does not come into existence until the grant of administration, when granted, it relates back to the time of the death of the testator, and where the act is done by a party who afterwards becomes administrator for the benefit of the estate or to fulfil the wishes of the testator, the relation back subsists and the act is valid. Where a person is both an executor de son tort and the universal legatee, he has all the liabilities that belong to the character of executor and universal legatee and cannot plead his omission to obtain Letters of Administration against a beneficiary seeking to enforce the trusts that the legatee is bound to discharge.

Per WALLIS, J.—A legacy cannot be recovered without administration of the testator's estate, and, where there has been no grant of probate or Letters of Administration, a suit by a beneficiary to enforce the trusts fails (d). Louis Kunha v. Coelho and Louis Kunha v. Souza, 18 M.L.J. 158—81 M. 187.

(8) Construction of document—"Money"—General personal estate.

Where a testator after clearly indicating an intention to exclude entirely certain of his relations from succession to his property, proceeded to bequeath his "money" to two legatees, with directions as to its disposal, it was held that the intention of the testator being apparently, from a perusal of the whole will, to bequeath all his personal property to the legatees, it was not necessary to construe the term used in its strict limited signification, but the whole of the testator's personal estate passed. Cheda Lal v. (9) Construction of—

In construing a will, the test to be applied is—What did the testator mean having regard to the words he used? In applying this test, effect must be given to the principle that "technical words of known legal import must have their own legal effect, even though the testator uses inconsistent words, unless they are of such a nature as to make it perfectly clear that the testator did not mean to use the technical terms in their proper sense."

Where there has been a devise or bequest of all a man's property, the generality of the disposition cannot be cut down, unless the intention that it should be so cut down is clear.

A will contained the following clauses—cl. 1. —I will and bequeath to my dear wife Anne in trust and for her maintenance and support during her life all the money, property, goods and chattels of which I may die possessed, whatever and wheresoever situated, and I appoint my dear wife Anne sole administratrix of this, my last will and testament. Cl. 10 —I further will that my dear wife Anne, as sole executrix of this my last will and testament shall draw from current deposit accounts, whether here or in Great Britain, such sum or sums of money as she may require for her maintenance and for the working and maintenance of my property; and that she shall receive and dispose of all processes, rents and profits from the said property as to her may seem best in the interests of the property; and I empower her to sell all or any part of the property at any time when it may appear to her that a favourable opportunity occurs.

Will—(Continued).

Held, that the will conferred a life estate on the wife and that the testator did not intend to use words "in trust" in cl. 1 in their technical sense. Even if the words "in trust" were given their legal effect, he intended the trust for the benefit of his wife only. Held, further, that the words "for her maintenance and support" were words of description or motive, and would in no way cut down the estate "during her life" which the testator in terms gave to his wife. Mary Harriett Anne Wilson v.
